ADDRESS BY MR. OLIVER McCLINTOCK, REPRESENT- ING THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE COLLEGE

During the nights of the past summer, I have looked with wonder upon the resplendent orb of the Planet Jupiter in his silent course across the eastern sky. Besides that king of the starry host, there were also Vega, Altair, Arcturus, Capella and those which form the Great Dipper, all brilliant stars of the first magnitude. Under the spell of this fascinating spectacle, I was filled with a sense of the enduring and changeless shining of the starry firmament. In such companionship and in such a frame, one is better able to comprehend the sublime imagery and exceeding beauty of that verse in the prophet Daniel's vision of the Latter Day, when right will triumph, when righteousness will prevail and when teachers will come into their own.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

I wish to emphasize just here the word teachers and the thought connected with the expression—"when teachers will come into their own." This is the verse. Using the marginal reading of "teachers" for the word "wise" it reads:—"They that be teachers shall shine as the brightness of the firmament and they that lead many unto righteousness, as the stars, forever and ever."

I am sure we will all agree that it is appropriate to apply this simile of the prophet Daniel to the shining example and noble life of Helen E. Pelletreau.

As we come together in this memorial service for her, the former president of this College and the personal friend of many now present, as Dr. Acheson has just now suggested, our meeting should not be one of sorrow, or sadness. But rather, it should be one of felicitation and rejoicing, because of what she was in her personality and character, and of what she accomplished for the higher education of young women. Let us rejoice that she was able to concentrate all of her powers,—her fine intellect and training, and twenty-three of the best years of her life, to making the Pennsylvania College for Women a successful institution. She made it a moral and educational success, but we all realize that without an endowment fund, its financial success was an impossibility.

Miss Pelletreau's personality was one of rare attractiveness. Her presence gave one an instant impression of an unusual and queenly woman. Her voice was sympathetic and her speech combined the qualities of refinement and good reading. No one who heard her make an address to her beloved students on Commencement Day, can forget her affectionate and tender words of counsel, expressed in polished and elegant phrase.

So enduring has been the influence of her Christian life and character and her example of heroic devotion to the cause of woman's education, upon all who came in touch with her, that she deserves all the eulogies our speech can frame. So permanent and deep has been the impress of her life work upon the development of our College, during the critical and formative period of its history, that, it seems to me, our appreciation of her services ought to find a more enduring expression than in the fleeting words of the present hour.

I therefore venture to suggest that one of the group of new College buildings, that have taken form in Dr. Acheson's vision and are the desire and hope of us all, shall be called "Pelletreau Hall."

I would also suggest that it would be a laudable undertaking for the Alumnae to erect this building as a permanent memorial of their love and appreciation of their former president.

And I venture to suggest still further that the legend to follow the dedicatory words on the memorial tablet of such a building, could well be the verse from Daniel with which I began these remarks: "They that be teachers shall shine as the brightness of the firmament and they that lead many unto righteousness, as the stars, forever and ever."

Miss Pelletreau was descended from a French Huguenot, Sir Charles Pelletreau, physician to Gaspard de Coligny, Admiral of France. Sir Charles was a favorite with Charles IX and was knighted July 17, 1571. The Pelletreau family still retain the coat of arms. Sir Charles perished with Admiral Coligny in the massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day, August 24, 1572. After his death, the family fled from France to England, and then to America, settling at Southampton, L. I., where the "Pelletreau House" was erected in 1686 and where Helen E. Pelletreau was born June 1, 1835. She was educated at Wellesley, Mass., while a member of the family of her aunt, Mrs. Emily Blair, and became a teacher first at Xenia, Ohio.

During the Civil War she taught in Bell Academy, Fairfield, Iowa. Later, when principal of a school for young ladies, she associated with her as teacher a Miss Carey, who was destined to be the mother of Dr. Acheson, now the president of our College.

From September, 1870, to June, 1871, she was preceptress under Dr. Pershing in the Pittsburgh Female College. In May, 1871, she was elected dean of the Pennsylvania College for Women, serving seven years. On June 24, 1878, she became acting president and on June 13, 1882, was elected president, continuing in office until her resignation, because of impaired health, June 11, 1894. Her entire term of service at the College therefore covered a period of twenty-three years.

In spite of the burden of advancing years, her indomitable mental energy, broad sympathies and passion for Christian usefulness, impelled her to continued activity in whatever community she had her home.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

In the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Brooklyn, of which she was a member, she served for seven years as president of its Ladies' Missionary Society, which included in its activities the Foreign, Home and local fields of missionary effort. Up to the very end of her life and notwithstanding her removal from the immediate scene of College life, the Pennsylvania College for Women continued to be the supreme object of her love and solicitude. Its progress and welfare and every movement in its management always had her deepest interest.

No wonder that such a personality compelled from the College constituents, trustees, faculty, students, alumnae and patrons, a reciprocal and tender interest and affection, which became most demonstrative whenever she favored the College with her presence.

When she attended the Commencement exercises in 1911, the trustees conferred upon her the degree of Doctor of Literature, accompanied by resolutions expressing their undiminished esteem and affection.

After the death of her mother, following a long period of shut-in invalidism, she spent a summer in European travel, which inured to the benefit of the College students, in a series of interesting and instructive addresses, embodying her observations and impressions while abroad.

She was a skilled parliamentarian and conducted classes for instruction in this novel branch of science. She also gave a series of lectures on parliamentary law which were afterward repeated in Washington, Pa., and Brooklyn, N. Y.

In the Autumn of 1900 she removed to Brooklyn, N. Y., to reside with her niece, Mrs. Clark. The remaining fifteen years of her life were spent in the loving companionship and filial devotion of the Clark family, where she died August 4, 1915, aged 80 years.

For us who remain, what is the lesson of this memorial occasion? Is it not that we shall take fresh courage and a new inspiration to follow in her footsteps and emulate her example of consecration to the Divine Master and His work of redemption for mankind? Is it not that we shall dedicate ourselves anew to the cause of Christian education, and to this College in particular, as representing the highest type of this redemptive work?

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Let it be our resolute purpose to keep the Pennsylvania College for Women fast to its Christian moorings, and secure in the purpose of its founders, namely, to make it an ideal woman's training school, which will continue as in the past, to do its part and contribute its quota to the common stock of true American womanhood, which is the noblest type the world has yet seen! Of such was Helen E. Pelletreau.

ADDRESS IN BEHALF OF THE ALUMNAE

Written by Mrs. John M. Pardee and Read at the Memorial Service by Miss Vanda E. Kerst

I regret more than I can express my inability to be present with you today, to mingle my voice with others in paying a tribute of love to one to whom all present, either consciously or unconsciously, owe a debt of gratitude. I say all present, because it is certainly true that if it had not been for Miss Pelletreau's indomitable courage, energy and faith it might not have been possible for you to be here today.

It was my good fortune to be a member of that class of '79, the first to be graduated under Miss Pelletreau as president.

It was the day of small things, and everything was at the lowest ebb—little money, few students and a very small Senior class—only three. It was a time of self-denial for all, but the spirit of determination to succeed in establishing the College under all difficulties; to be brave, cheerful and ambitious was so thoroughly exemplified by Miss Pelletreau that it was in the atmosphere, and every one who came in contact with her, imbibed it. Let me in passing pay a tribute to some who stood by her and nobly helped in those trying days. Three busy East End pastors generously assisted the faculty, Dr. Fisher of Edgewood, whom many of you know and love; Dr. Beatty, pastor of the Shady Side Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Holland, then pastor of the Bellefield Church. So you see some of us who were under their tutelage profited by the small amount of money in the Treasury that year. I did not at that time realize all our noble President was doing, as I was young and thoughtless and inclined to take things as a matter of course; but after a year's absence I returned to the College to do postgraduate work; teaching some and assisting Miss Pelletreau as her secretary. Being thus in such close touch, I then realized very fully, not only the nobility of her nature and the beauty of her character, but what her will power, her clear judgment and keen foresight were accomplishing. The number of students in that short time had greatly increased, the faculty had been enlarged and many necessary improvements had been made, although Miss Pelletreau was very cautious, and with true New England thrift she never sanctioned any unnecessary outlay, and expenses were kept as low as possible.

Some of the trustees and patrons of the College doubted the advisability of putting the Presidency in the hands of a woman, her two predecessors having been men; but it was the men who got the College deeply into debt, and it was a woman who got it out. So all were soon compelled to admit their mistake and were most cordial in their praise and co-operation with her as she unravelled the tangled financial conditions and gradually raised the educational standard, putting the College on a better basis than ever before.

All who remember Miss Pelletreau can tell you how we stood in awe of her and her dignified presence, but it was for me to learn another phase of her character. As the original building had only three stories, the large increase of students taxed the dormitory to its fullest extent. For instance the two rooms which are now thrown together for the library, were bed-rooms, and each one was occupied by four girls.

With every nook and corner filled Miss Pelletreau, with her usual unselfishness, decided to abandon her own privacy and share her bed-room with me. It was with some trepidation that I took up my abode with her in this intimate relation; but I soon found that her gentle consideration for others left me nothing to dread and we spent some very happy months together.

Her aged mother, almost helpless and blind, was living at the College then, and one of the sweetest memories of Miss Pelletreau was her beautiful devotion to her mother. She was never too much occupied or too much harassed with care to give her all the loving attention she could, and she spent as much time as possible with her, reading to her, engaging in cheery conversation and doing all she could to brighten her dull, lonely life.

There was very little discipline necessary among the students; but she was always just, and as firm as a rock for what she thought advisable or right. It always seemed impossible to do a mean or unladylike thing in her presence, and many there are who in looking back over those days, feel she wielded a mighty influence over us, refining our manners, stimulating our intellects and ennobling our characters.

Many of you did not know her. She was tall and handsome with wavy hair tinged with gray, and her face lit up beautifully when she smiled. We well remember her presence, how she moved with so much dignity, and I can just picture her, as she swept with stately grace across the hall or drawing-room on some festal occasion, handsomely gowned in black and always with a sweeping train. She was indeed our ideal of everything that was gracious and imposing, yet thoroughly cordial to all.

A very short time before she died she dictated a letter to me, never alluding to her own distressing illness. Fortunately I answered it immediately and her niece told me my letter was about the last thing that was read to her.

ADDRESS BY MISS JANET L. BROWNLEE, REPRESENTING THE FACULTY

I knew Miss Pelletreau so well, that I do not hesitate to say that she would not care for public tributes except as they may be helpful to others, especially to the young women who may hear them.

Throughout the greater part of Miss Pelletreau's life her chief interest was the advancement of young women. During the twenty-four years in which she was connected with this college, her influence over the young women of this city and this community was far-reaching, stimulating and always wholesome.

It was my privilege to be associated with Miss Pelletreau, as a member of her faculty, for a number of years immediately preceding her resignation as president of this college, and thus I had the benefit of her long experience as an educator, and as an administrator.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

She also had rare judgment in selecting members of her faculty from her own alumnae; there are many present today who will agree with me in this statement, when they think of the splendid work of Miss Clark and remember that it was under Miss Pelletreau that Miss Meloy began her successful career as a teacher.

Miss Pelletreau, besides being fortunate in her varied activities as a teacher and administrator, was also a popular public speaker. I recollect a most interesting series of lectures on Parliamentary Law, which she gave to the students, and which she was called upon later to give in different public places. I remember, after a summer she had spent traveling abroad, the delightful talks she gave to the students and to different clubs concerning her travels and especially concerning the lives of authors, whose homes she had visited.

I must not fail, also, to speak of Miss Pelletreau's home life. For one or more years after I became a member of the college family, Miss Pelletreau's mother lived with her. Mrs. Pelletreau was an invalid, not leaving her room except in her chair and with her nurse. She was a woman of great intelligence and rare refinement. Miss Pelletreau's devotion to her mother and her mother's unobtrusive worth were a silent influence for good which permeated the home life; so that I count it a blessing that twice in my connection with the college, in the first years and then again in the last two years, these last in the life of Mrs. Cutler, we have had in our midst a beautiful presence, that has quietly showed to us all, older and younger, how life may be lovely and helpful even to old age.

The love and loyalty of those who serve are often a great tribute to the character of those whom they serve. Mary, Edward and Maggie were faithful in their service to Miss Pelletreau, and their loyalty to her has never ceased. Edward, for years, at each anniversary laid flowers on the mother's grave. The last letter I had from Miss Pelletreau was one thanking me for letting her know that a great sorrow had come into Mary's life. In the letter she said, "I want Mary to know that I sympathize with her in all her sorrows." No letter came to me in which Maggie was not remembered.

Miss Pelletreau's great friendship, the one which was helpful to us all, was her friendship with Miss Pike—a friendship which lasted until dear Miss Pike left us. I had the privilege of attending the church that Miss Pike attended. I seldom left the church without speaking to Miss Pike; and there and also in her own home, as I was leaving, Miss Pike would say, "Now, Miss Brownlee, do you think that you have told me everything about the college? I shall be writing to Miss Pelletreau and she does not like it if I do not tell her of what is transpiring at the college." Miss Pelletreau never ceased to love the college and to be interested in all of its activities.

At different times Miss Pelletreau has visited in Pittsburgh and has seen her pupils and friends; but I think that no visit was more satisfactory to her and to her friends than her last visit at commencement time, 1911, when she and Miss Pike were the guests of the college, when she met her own girls, made new friends of the undergraduates, enjoyed the courtesy of Dr. Lindsay, the kindness of Dean Coolidge, and the distinction of receiving a degree on commencement night from the college which she loved and for which she had labored so faithfully.

Miss Pelletreau was much interested in Dr. Acheson's acceptance of the presidency of this College. She had known his mother in her early days. It was a comfort, therefore, to her family and friends that Dr. and Mrs. Acheson could be present at the beautiful service held in this chapel at the time of Miss Pelletreau's death and burial. It was a comfort to her teachers and pupils that such a service could be held. I like to think that that service was pleasing to her, and no less this service which is now being held in this room, where for so many years Miss Pelletreau led our devotions and gave rich counsel to bright, happy, oftentimes thoughtless, but true and earnest girls, like these girls who are listening to this service today.

A TRIBUTE FROM A FAVORED ONE

Through Miss Pelletreau's twenty-three years in the Pennsylvania College for Women, many girls were given the opportunity of association with her as her pupils; a chosen few were permitted to return to her as members of her teaching staff; but the writer alone has been given the honor of being her pupil, her secretary, and a member of her Faculty—with the added great privilege of enjoying frequently in recent years Miss Pelletreau's gracious hospitality in her Brooklyn home.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The first year after leaving the College, Miss Pelletreau spent in Texas and the south, travelling for a time in Mexico. As a result of this visit she gave an entertaining and unusual illustrated lecture of "Mexico" which some of us in Pittsburgh had the privilege of hearing.

The next few years she spent in Washington, Pennsylvania, where she had many friends. Here she varied the monotony of too much leisure by conducting occasional classes in Parliamentary Law. She also founded and was president of the Current Events Club, now a large and prominent departmental club.

About the year 1900, Miss Pelletreau came to Brooklyn to live with her niece, Mary Mathews Clark, with whom Mrs. Mathews, Miss Pelletreau's sister also resided. In this beautiful home Miss Pelletreau found her greatest happiness, and a new interest, in her devotion to her little grandniece Miriam and nephew Byron. A pretty sight that I shall always remember was that of our stately, queenly Miss Pelletreau, guiding little Miriam's gaily tripping feet across the street on her way to kindergarten—one of Miss Pelletreau's self-appointed tasks.

Her alert mind, however, was not content with domestic happiness alone, and with characteristic energy she became active in church and club work. She again from time to time conducted classes in Parliamentary Law, a subject in which she was an authority, and she was made the permanent "Parliamentarian" of the Urban Club, a prominent civic club of Brooklyn. She was also for many years, and at the time of her death, the president of the "Ladies' Society," the missionary and working society of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, of which she was a member.

She had made many friends and had established a warm place in their hearts, and these years of her life were serene and happy save for the shadow of failing sight which interfered greatly with her going about, and with her writing and reading; but she was brave and patient under this affliction and "so thankful that she could read at all."

There is a tradition that "age lives in the past"—not so Miss Pelletreau, to whom it was truly given to "grow old gracefully." Her outlook on life was as youthful as that of any girl, her interest in all its affairs as keen; in every question of the day—civil, political, ethical,—what not—her knowledge shamed the rest of us who had two good eyes. With no failing of her clear mental vision she had the gift of finding the crux of any problem. Her talk, always stimulating, ranged over every possible subject, from trivial but interesting matters of passing moment, to those of the highest thought and speculation. She was logical and brilliant in argument, simple, terse, yet polished in speech, never artificial nor affected; rich in funds of entertaining anecdote, and possessing withal a kindly sense of humor that even thirty years of boarding school life could not eradicate.

Miss Pelletreau was one of the grand old type, alas disappearing—"a gentlewoman of the old school," yet with all the learning and the spirit of the new. With noble dignity and Christian courtesy, with great charm of personality, with rare spiritual character, with rich mental endowments, she was born to be a leader. Forceful, kind, sensitive, sympathetic, deeply religious, "sweetly austere," constant and beautiful in friendship, she was the living embodiment of her theory that along with college scholarship, not secondary to it, were high ideals of living, gentle breeding, kindly thoughtfulness and courtesy, and that only in this combination could true culture exist.

Time caused no faltering from her beautiful ideals, no change in her keen faculties, though in the last three years of her life her health and strength perceptibly failed. She was very frail in the spring, and in July, the last time I saw her alive, she told me that she was a "broken reed," yet her faith was unchanging, and she never seemed to lose her wonderful courage and optimism. Her interest in her friends, her interest in the College, in its plans and progress, its hopes and successes never waned. Her one constant regret was that she was so far from her "Pittsburgh friends." She felt, though, that Pittsburgh without our dear Miss Pike could never again be the same to her.

But in death they were not to be divided, and only a little later, on August 4, Miss Pelletreau was called to join her beloved friend.

Three of us, College Aumnæ, were in New York at this time, and, as we met with her friends to do her honor for the last time, the hardest thing to understand was that we, her "old girls," were not welcomed as always before, by her happy smile and her eager outstretched hand—Miss Pelletreau had the "gift of hospitality."

The services, simple but most impressive, were conducted by her pastor, the Reverend Mr. Simmons, who spoke of her beautiful life and example, of her deeply religious nature, of the great work she had accomplished, of the great loss to her church and to her friends, of her very "crown of friendship," of the untold numbers now scattered from sea to sea, and pole to pole, yet one in mourning her death.

Yet, as she lay there in the quiet room covered with the purple and white flowers she so loved, with a faint smile on her noble, rarely beautiful face, so peaceful, we felt that we should not mourn, but the rather rejoice, that this her passing was like a coronation, that for her

"All the shadow was dying into the light," and that

"Through such souls alone
God stooping shows sufficient of His light
For us in the dark to rise by."

And so we shall ever rejoice that we have been permitted to call her friend, and to come under the influence of such a life, an influence so enduring that it knows not time nor space, of one of whom it can truly be said that "she being dead yet speaketh."

ALICE M. STOCKTON.

Following the service at her Brooklyn home, Miss Pelletreau's remains were brought to Pittsburgh. At the College she had loved so well, a brief but impressive service was held and then she was laid to rest beside her mother in Homewood Cemetery.

So many of the friends were absent from the city at the time of her death and so missed paying their last tribute of love to Miss Pelletreau, that it was decided to hold a memorial service in her honor at the College on Wednesday morning, October 27, 1915.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

DR. ACHESON'S ADDRESS

The session now closing brings to an end a most successful year of work and gives great encouragement for the future of Pennsylvania College for Women. There have been enrolled in the College this year 185 students, a net gain of 30 over last year, making the largest enrollment in the history of the school. More students are registered for next year than ever before at this date, and the indications now point to a percentage of growth for the session of 1916-17 equal to, if not greater, than that of this present year. A review of the records discloses consistent and substantial growth since 1906, when there were but 25 students in the College. If we eliminate all special students and confine our consideration to those entered in the regular A.B. courses, the numbers this year show an increase of 400 per cent. when compared with those of 1906. This growth is exceedingly significant and unquestionably points the way to much larger things, if we are willing and able to meet the opportunity now presented to us. A new physics laboratory for the advanced study of Light and Electricity and a small supplemental laboratory in the Department of Chemistry have been equipped. With the added facilities thus afforded, students otherwise fitted for teaching can be prepared to render excellent service in High Schools or to pursue graduate work in the larger universities in these respective departments.

A very important step in advance has been taken by the Board of Trustees in its action authorizing the discontinuation of Dilworth Hall at the close of this academic year. It has been patent for some time that the need of a preparatory department as a feeder for the College was no longer insistent. The High Schools of Pittsburgh and vicinity have now reached such a status both in respect to numbers and efficient preparation as to obviate conditions that formerly existed. To maintain Dilworth Hall on a plane of efficiency equal to the modern High School would mean its complete reorganization, with new buildings and equipment. When this issue was faced by the Board it was evident that such a policy would be most unwise in view of the fact that it would be duplicating the excellent work now being done by the High Schools of the city, and in addition, it would actually tend to curtail the resources of the college and impair its academic standing. It is quite impossible for Pennsylvania College for Women to receive the academic recognition its work merits so long as a preparatory school is maintained in connection therewith. Provision will be made to conduct the work of the Fourth Year Class for the session of 1916-17 so that those now in the Third Year Class may not be disappointed in their hope of graduation from Dilworth Hall. The discontinuance of the school will not lose to the College all of the members of the Dilworth Hall faculty whose loyalty and faithful services have done much to give the school its fine reputation. The majority will be retained to conduct the work of the Fourth Year Class and for needed service in the College. We deeply regret that any are to sever their connection with us and we take this opportunity to express to them our sincere appreciation of their work here.

We sincerely trust, also, that the present students of Dilworth Hall will be drawn to the College in large numbers. They will be most cordially welcomed. The opportunity now afforded to concentrate upon the development of the College by reason of the action taken in respect to Dilworth Hall gives assurance of increasing value and better service in all of its departments.

It is a matter of regret that Mr. T. Carl Whitmer, for seven years Director of Music, has severed his connection with the College, effective at the close of the academic year. Mr. Whitmer has utilized his rare gifts in building up a music department, the merits of which are recognized far beyond local boundaries. Our best wishes go with him in his new field. In this connection the Alumnae will be interested to know that his successor has been chosen in the person of Mr. Gabriel L. Hines of Swarthmore, Pennsylvania. Mr. Hines is a man of unusual ability who has enjoyed the best musical advantages in this country and abroad. He is known not only as an artist performer, but as a composer and director of marked distinction. Mr. Hines is therefore admirably equipped in every way to carry on the work of the Music Department at the College under the same high standards that have been set for it in the past.

A word now about the future. Since assuming the presidency of the College, three outstanding needs of the institution if it is to be put on a thoroughly efficient basis, have become more and more evident to my mind. These things are first, additional land for campus site; secondly, a group of new modern buildings, and third, an adequate endowment.

Guided by these specific and definite needs, a comprehensive plan for the enlargement of the institution has been presented to the Board calling for a site of not less than 50 acres, the erection of a group of modern fireproof buildings (including recitation halls, science and fine arts buildings, gymnasium, dormitories, etc.) to accommodate 500 students, capable of expansion to provide for 1,000 students at a minimum additional cost and an endowment sufficiently large to take care of the yearly deficit. This plan I am happy to say met with a most cordial reception by the Board of Trustees and a special committee was appointed to make a detailed study of the whole situation and devise means and methods for carrying out this program. This special committee took up its task with enthusiasm and reported to the Board at its last meeting that some progress had been achieved in its work. The entire scheme, however, is of such importance and magnitude that the work of the committee cannot be done hastily nor without encountering some difficulties. We bespeak for it and the Board of Trustees your patient and sympathetic interest until such time—in the near future, I hope—as a definite policy can be laid before you for your approval and co-operative support. A year of active work in connection with the Presidency has convinced me beyond all doubt that Pittsburgh offers an opportunity for the development of a woman's college of the cultural type ranking with Wellesley, Smith and Vassar that is not paralleled in this country. With Pennsylvania College for Women, its Alumnae and Trustees all committed to a big, constructive program, there is absolutely no doubt that the object can be achieved, provided those of means in the city have sufficient vision to see the opportunity and sufficient interest to further it from the material side.

JOHN C. ACHESON.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Mark Twain defined April 1 as "the day upon which we are all reminded of what we are on the other three hundred and sixty-four." As President of the Alumnae Association, looking back on a year which falls so far short in achievements of the rosy dreams and high aspirations with which it began, I feel that Alumnae Day might be defined in much the same terms. It seems a pity that the President's address should not be a salutatory rather than a valedictory, for then it might be enthusiastic instead of apologetic.

I face you with a sense of failure, and yet we have achieved some things in the way of publicity work for the College that make this year rather distinctive. Perhaps the most important of these was the P. C. W. booth at the Exposition, a revolutionary departure for the College, but those of us who spent much time there realize how well worth while it was. Former non-graduate students came in large numbers, pointed out the booth to their friends with a sense of pride and ownership, and renewed their interest in and loyalty to their college. Hundreds of high school students from this end of the State talked over with us the possibilities and advantages of the College. Not a few men and women learned for the first time that there is a woman's college in Pittsburgh. The ignorance on the subject was often quite appalling, as in the case of a young girl from the country who, catching sight of a picture of the Indian group from Paskennoden, exclaimed, "Oh, it's an Indian college, is it?"

One of the greatest joys of the experience was the interest and spirit of neighborly kindness on the part of the other exhibitors; from the fat bald-headed man who demonstrated "Peek's Perfect Tea" and the woman who had once worked as a maid in Woodland Hall but now sold ice-cream cones, to the old bundle carrier who insisted on holding the step-ladder while I tacked up P. C. W. pennants because "it isn't quite safe for heavy ladies to climb step-ladders," and the young man in the Victrola booth who gave me as a parting gift the piece-de-resistance of his guessing contest—a goldfish globe containing six thousand three hundred and seventy-two half-tone needles.

This year, also, the Decade Club II and the Alumnae Association have been members of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, and this, I believe, has been most valuable publicity for the College. Indeed, I feel very strongly that we, as an association, should do some definite constructive work that would make us felt as a real force in the city. Just what that work should be, I have not the temerity to suggest. There are infinite possibilities.

During the year the College Dramatic Club co-operated with the Drama League by putting on a play for children, "The Silver Thread," by Constance D'Arcy Mackaye, and this was duly reported in each of the league's fifty-six centers and was the subject of special mention at the National Convention, as was the production of "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Paskennoden" and other dramatic work of the College which figured very creditably in the Educational Exhibit of the Drama in Schools and Colleges and was a feature of the Convention. I also found that their pageant has brought the College into favorable notice with the American Pageant Association. All of this is publicity of the right kind and should be fostered in every possible way by this association.

The coming of two National Conventions to Pittsburgh next year—that of the Drama League of America and (probably) that of the National Association of Charities and Corrections, offers us an opportunity that is not to be despised.

Only one social meeting was held instead of the monthly meetings that were planned.

Early in the year Dr. Acheson suggested that we hold ourselves in readiness to co-operate with certain plans which he hoped would develop soon. For this reason, many minor things which might have been done were held in abeyance. The Fates, however, have forced upon both the College authorities and the Association a policy of watchful waiting.

Only when one has worked a year in close association with Dr. Acheson can one fully realize how fortunate the College has been, and how far-sighted her Trustees have been, in securing such a man to be her President. I am sure that I express the thought of every member of this Association in saying that we have the fullest confidence that the future of the College is safe in his hands and that the Alumnae Association stands behind him as one woman.

Of Miss Coolidge, I need only say that she is a Dean worthy of such a President.

To the Class of 1916 I extend a warm welcome from the Alumnae Association. We look with pride on the finished product of the workshop of our College. How interesting and momentous this occasion is to you—we, who have experienced it before you, can perhaps best understand. To us it is equally interesting and momentous, for we see in you new enthusiasm, new helpers, and new inspiration in the work of the coming years.

Once a year, if no oftener, there comes to each of us a rush of warm gratitude and enthusiasm for our Alma Mater and a high resolve to pay her in some measure the debt we owe. The question “How may I best serve my College?” seems to me to have but one answer, “By the place you fill in the life of your community.” That is the test of an education. More than ever I am impressed with the individual responsibility of each one of us for the reputation of the College. What she has made of you, as wife, mother, teacher, or business woman, is the standard by which your neighbor will judge what she might make of his daughter.

A professor in the University of Chicago told his pupils that he should consider them educated, in the best sense of the word, when they would say yes to every one of fourteen questions he would put to them. Some of the questions are very significant.

“Has your education given you sympathy with all good causes and made you espouse them? Has it made you public spirited? Have you learned how to make friends and keep them? Do you know what it is to be a friend yourself? Can you be high-minded and happy in the meaner drudgeries of life? Are you good for anything to yourself? Can you be happy alone? Can you look out on the world and see anything but dollars and cents? Can you look into a mud puddle by the wayside and see anything in the puddle but mud?”

In a word, all of these questions deal with one of two things, our ability to live with others and our ability to live with ourselves. If we can answer such questions affirmatively, if we can live with the world happily, sympathetically, usefully; if we can distinguish between essentials and non-essentials, if we can live comfortably with ourselves, then we are really educated and an argument for P. C. W. What we owe to our College, we must pay to the world.

EDITORIAL

The editors of this number of The Recorder are very grateful to the many friends who have so materially lightened their labors and have made them find pleasure as well as duty in their office.

As they prepared this edition, several things have impressed them so strongly that they felt it their duty to bring them to the notice of other members of the Association.

First of all, the Alumnae register is not as complete or correct as it should be. If only each class secretary would take upon her own conscience, the burden of responsibility for this, what wonders could be accomplished!

As each year new editors take up the task of revising this register and of recording the marriages and births and deaths that concern the Alumnae, they are appalled at the lack of definite information at their command.

The College officials are most anxious for complete, up-to-date records of the Alumnae and it is surely the duty of this Association to provide them with such data. It is hoped that the decision at the Fall meeting to have a permanent register committee, may lead to good results.

Miss Coolidge spoke recently of the difficulty of ever referring to former numbers of The Recorder, and she suggested that it would be a good thing to have at the College and accessible to all, a complete file of The Recorder, bound in volumes of a convenient size.

And lastly, the Treasurer sends a message that all ought to heed. She says: "It seems too bad that more of the members will not pay the annual dues. But in a purely involuntary membership like ours, one cannot demand the payment of dues. Two years ago we sent our appeal in two-cent envelopes, but the result did not pay for the extra postage and work."

Owing to the present increased cost of supplies, the bill this year for the printing of The Recorder is larger than usual. The editors have appreciated the difficulty this would mean to the Treasurer and they have endeavored to keep within the customary space limits and to have the work done as reasonably as possible.

Even if absent from the annual meeting in June, each Alumna receives The Recorder, and isn't it only fair, in exchange, for the Treasurer to receive that member's dues?

Is the Alumna who ignores or forgets the payment of her dues really loyal to her Alma Mater?

IN MEMORIAM

Within the last two years death has claimed two members of the class of '87.

A year apart, to within a day, Edna Ford Modisette and Susan Ewing Hays heard the call of the Great Master and passed to that "higher school where Christ Himself is Teacher."

In June, 1914, Mrs. Modisette was stricken with typhoid fever. She had passed the crisis and seemed to be recovering. Suddenly there was a change for the worse and almost before her friends realized her condition, "God's finger touched her and she slept."

Her going brings a sense of loss and loneliness to the many friends here who had known her in the old College days. In her St. Louis home and among her wide circle of friends there, where she lived a happy, busy, useful life, she is sorely missed.

Mrs. Modisette's death occurred July 13, 1914, and on July 12, 1915, her classmate, Mrs. James E. Hays, fell on sleep. Our hearts go out to her family in their sore bereavement.

Here "we see through a glass darkly" and it is hard to understand the reason when an active worker is called to lay aside her task unfinished in the early noontide hours.

But as each year the ranks of our Alumnae are thinning on this side the border-line, we know that over yonder there is joy as friend greets friend in an unending reunion around the great white throne.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Mrs. Frances Sage Pelletreau Mathews, widow of William J. Mathews, died December 21, 1915, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John B. Clark, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mrs. Mathews was in her eighty-eighth year. The interment was at Washington, Pa., where she had lived for many years.

Frances Sage Pelletreau was of Huguenot ancestry. She was educated at the old Seminary at Washington, Pa., graduating in 1849. She then taught French and music in Kentucky. At Westfield, Mass., in 1860, she was married to Wm. J. Mathews, a merchant of Washington. He died forty-one years ago.

It seemed strange that the passing of Mrs. Mathews and her sister, Miss Helen E. Pelletreau, should have occurred so closely together. In youth and again as they turned their faces towards the sunset path, they had been closely associated. During the last twenty years both made their home with Mrs. Mathews' daughter in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Clark, writing of her mother, says: "My mother was a beautiful character and a woman of fine education, but in temperament and appearance entirely unlike Aunt Helen. However, they both served their day and generation well, each in her own way;—one in public and one in private. Mother was a widow for forty-one years, and the youngest of us was only two when Father died, so you see she had heavy responsibilities."

A life like Mrs. Mathews' needs no eulogy. Her memorial is written in the hearts of her friends and her children and they "arise up and call her blessed."

ABOUT OURSELVES

A LETTER FROM AUNT JENNIE

My dear Nieces and Nephews:

It will be grandnieces and nephews who will read this, I'm sure, for the girls and boys I used to write to are all grown up; and anybody who remembers Aunt Jennie's letters knows they are not intended for grown-ups.

You see, this is the way they began, long, long ago: The editors of the Recorder, being very hard up for things to print, asked me to "please write something."

I felt sorry for them, for, having once been editor myself, I know how lazy people are about writing. So I thought and thought, but could think of nothing to suit intelligent young women not long out of college. (You know, when you leave college, you are much more learned, and much harder to please than you are afterwards!)

Well, I was about ready to give up, when I happened to glance at a fish-bowl in which I had some tadpoles growing. "The very thing," I exclaimed; "I can't think of anything for my old friends, but some of them have little folks now; I can tell them about my tadpoles." So I wrote about "Peter" and his brother, who became quite popular. All sorts of things followed; one year it was a singing mouse I was acquainted with. Yes, he truly did sing a real though very tiny song as he ran around the pantry.

I don't remember whether I ran out of stories, or thought my little friends had grown too old for them; at any rate, I haven't written a letter for years. But last June Mrs. Miller asked me to write an "Aunt Jennie" letter once more. Now Mrs. Miller is a TRUSTEE, and trustees must be obeyed. So I am writing.

I wonder how many of you are putting up bird-houses! We have three. The first one we built years ago, hoping for bluebirds, but we have had to be content with wrens. We could have had sparrow tenants easily; indeed they did move in the first year, but I put them out, and nailed a little strip across the lower edge of the opening so that they could not squeeze through. Every year they hover longingly about, walk over the roof, and peep in at the door, but alas! they are too plump.

It seems almost a shame to keep them out, but they do drive away other birds, and I don't quite agree with a little neighbor boy, who thinks "that's between the sparrows and the other birds"—none of OUR business!

One year I hung up a gourd with a hole in it (a little hole about the size of a quarter), and the wrens were delighted. "Such a darling, picturesque little home," sang Mrs. Wren. But after the babies grew up, Mr. and Mrs. Wren moved over into the plain old house and reared a second family. I grieve to say that they left behind many lively little creatures, much smaller than birds! I'm afraid they had not been careful to take plenty of dust baths! Our houses are all empty yet, for our wrens do not come till late in May. Then they come with a rush, and, singing at the tops of their voices, set right to work—a grand example, isn't it! Soon the nest is built, eggs appear, Mrs. Wren settles down on them, and at last the birdies can be heard, first just speaking, then chattering for food, keeping Father and Mother Wren busy from morning till night. Then, some fine day, they push each other out, and sit, very wobbly, steadying themselves by their stumpy tails. Soon they fly away, but you catch glimpses of them, clinging to twigs, the little mother still patiently cramming insects down their hungry throats.

Perhaps you would like to make a note, besides changing the address in the two lists, that "Retsie" Campbell's husband, the Rev. Dr. John H. Kerr, has been for a year or more pastor of the Arlington Avenue Church in Brooklyn, having gone there from Newark. Her eldest son went to Korea as a missionary just after his graduation, is doing a splendid work and is devoted to the country.

Another item which you may have already is: "Lu Singleton Paul is the fond grandmamma of eight lovely children." The "lovely" comes not from her, but from a friend, hence may be relied upon as accurate.

Now, what do you suppose I started out to tell you?—About our red-birds! And here I branched off on bird-houses and wrens, and now my letter is so long that I fear it can't all be printed. So I must stop right here, and say good-bye.

Your affectionate

AUNT JENNIE.

CLASS OF '75

Dear Girls:

Did you realize that it is forty-one years since we wept on each other's necks and on our dear Miss Pelletreau's neck and parted, swearing eternal friendship for each other, and for our Alma Mater, our beloved P. F. C.? Of the thirteen of our class still living, three of us are near enough that we see each other occasionally. The other ten were all written to this spring and implored to break their silence and let us know what they were doing, but only three deigned to reply to the inquiries sent out.

Jennie Wallace is busy as ever caring for her home, her invalid sister and the many duties falling to the lot of the secretary of a large Presbyterial Missionary Society. She looks just like she used to do except that her head wears a beautiful crown of white hair, instead of the raven locks we remember so well.

Lillian Willock lives in her beautiful home on Pine Street in Sewickley, very happy in the companionship of her brothers and nieces and nephews. She spent the later part of the winter in New York and Poland Springs and other places in that locality, but is home again and very busy setting her home in order after its having been closed for several months. Time has touched her very lightly and she looks but little different, or older than in those happy days of long ago.

Mary McIntosh Wells lost her husband in December, 1912, after which she and her children removed from Wells-ville, Ohio, to Cleveland, where she still lives. One son graduates this year from law school, another son has a good position with a construction company and still another is a Sophomore in Western Reserve University, while her daughter teaches in West Tech High School.

Ida Harden Aschman lives in Woodlawn, Wheeling, W. Va., and from her letter seems the same warm-hearted, kindly girl of college days. She reports that there are some "silver threads among the gold." She has busied herself in church and hospital work, and has lived a happy, useful life.

Lafie Reid sends her dearest love to all the girls of the Class of '75 and to the dear college. For five winters she and her sister have gone to California and think they have found the ideal climate at San Diego. She does not think they will come east this summer, and hopes to see some of our class who may go to the Fair. She invites them to come to see her. Her address can be secured by inquiring at the First Presbyterian Church office in San Diego.

Nettie Jamison Vincent reports herself as the happy possessor of three grandchildren— a daughter who is a busy minister's wife, a son who is a minister and a daughter who graduates from college this June.

What of the other eight? Echo answers What? and all is silence. You silent ones! are you interested in hearing something from these friends of long ago? They would like to hear from you.

Our class this year contributed fifty-five dollars for the Florence Holmes Memorial Library.

Secretary.

CLASS OF '76

Owing to the absence from the city last spring of the class secretary, no mention was made of the death of Mr. Edward H. Peek, the husband of Lydia C. Gracie. He died at his home in Germantown on April 9, 1915.

A letter has just been received from Susie Walker Wadsworth of Albany, N. Y. She expects to be in Pittsburgh during the month of May but regrets that she cannot remain over for the Alumnae dinner.

Emma Norton writes that Claribel and Lallah are the travelers, spending the past winter in Honolulu and California.

CLASS OF '77

A recent letter from Sue Locke Mason tells of a very busy life, as usual. Incidentally she mentions being secretary of her Church Home and Foreign Missionary Auxiliary Society, also secretary of the Presbyterian Foreign Literature work.

"Dollie" Decker has been an interested, hard worker in the Red Cross work all year and has now gone on to Philadelphia to attend the biennial meeting of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the Presbyterian Church.

Grace Warmcastle is also having a spring outing in Melrose Park, Pa., and at Atlantic City.

CLASS OF 1881

News has just reached us of the death of Joseph Dock Imhoff, eldest son of Elizabeth Thomas and the late Wallace M. Imhoff. His death occurred on May 6, 1916. After services at the family home on Penn Avenue the body was taken to Salem, Ohio, for interment. All our hearts go out to Mrs. Imhoff in her bereavement and we extend to her our deepest sympathy.

CLASS OF '84

The degree of A. M. was conferred upon Luella P. Meloy by Columbia University in 1914, after four summers of hard work in Sociology under the direction of Professor Franklin H. Giddings.

The members of '84, at the inauguration of President Acheson, were proud of their distinguished classmate, with her beautiful hood, in the long precession of doctors and masters and baccalaureates.

Miss Meloy contemplates entering for a doctor's degree at Columbia University the coming summer.

N. C.

Since I have had no Recorder news from any members of my class for several years I might take it for granted they had passed to the great beyond and joined the angel choir. As for myself, I am pleased to say I am here and the happy grandmother of a son born to my daughter, Mrs. J. J. McClure, March 4, 1916. Of course I know all my class can't be grandmothers but all can at least send a short article and it would so help the despairing editors, who have my sympathy, else I would not send this. So class of '84, come back to earth and let us hear your joyful voices once more.

G. W. H.

CLASS OF 1886

Nineteen Sixteen marks the thirtieth milestone of the class of 1886 without a break in our number—seven. We have much to be thankful for in the passing years. Though our number is limited, distance makes it impossible for us to meet together as a class on this anniversary.

This year has brought many changes to all of us—and particularly to Mary Matthews Clark, in the loss of a dear mother and devoted, honored aunt, Miss Pelletreau, to whom we all pay a loving tribute. Mary's devotion as a loving daughter and niece in the care of these dear ones in their declining years is but a true index of her fine loyal character.

Alice Wells, we regret to learn, has had a winter of illness, and in her humorous, half whimsical way says "She is a gray-headed old woman and feels as well as looks older than her oldest teacher." But we know a return of good health, which we all sincerely wish for Alice—will mean a different attitude and happier outlook and may it come soon.

Maude Aiken Wright speaks for herself in a letter that I am happy to pass on.

Our class motto, "Step by Step," will serve us in the future as it has in the past to live from day to day, striving to be worthy of the best.

With hearty good wishes for each member of the class of 1886,

Sincerely,

ELEANOR J. STEVENSON.

CLASS OF '88

The class of '88 has always emulated the college flower in modesty, and for that reason alone has not before this replied to the impassioned appeals of two Recorder Boards to appear in print. The Secretary, however, last year decided to send a letter for publication in 1916, even though she should be compelled to resort to fiction for items concerning the various members. But in the interests of truth in this degenerate age, she is glad to discard fiction and to record a few authentic facts.

One of our members who lives in Stamford, Conn., writes that her daughter's enthusiasm for her school and class arouses the mother's loyalty and class spirit and makes her long for a reunion of '88 at P. C. W. She incidentally remarks that she has a son eight years old.

Another member, teaching in the Friends' Seminary in New York, is guiding the minds of children and grandchildren of men and women well known in art and letters. She is also an ardent suffragist—so ardent that she marched in the last suffrage parade in New York, and never mentions the fatigue that ensued!

An even more earnest worker in this same cause is our member in Ohio where both temperance and suffrage are among the uncertainties. This member refreshed her memories of P. C. W. last May Day, when she came to Pittsburgh for the pageant in which her niece had a very important part. That niece is still a student in our college.

An equally important character in that pageant was "Miss Pittsburgh," enacted so acceptably by the daughter of another '88 member. "Miss Pittsburgh" has just completed her Freshman year at P. C. W.

The Class Secretary has the pleasure of seeing her sister receive a diploma from P. C. W. this year, and thus in a measure re-lives the excitement of her own graduation days.

Our other classmates are loyal to our Alma Mater and interested in her future.

We all join in greetings to sister alumnae on this, our first appearance in print.

CLASS OF '92

This year has brought sorrow and the loss of loved ones to two members of our class.

Last September God called Mr. William J. Hamill to his long home. His death was preceded by months of severe suffering borne in a most patient and uncomplaining manner.

His was an exceedingly modest, true and beautiful Christian life and our hearts all go out to his daughter, Sarah Hamill Trimble, in her bereavement.

The last of March brought the sad news of the death of Sarah Milholland's only brother, William. He was accidentally shot while hunting and died in St. Christopher's Hospital, Norfolk, Va., on March 26, 1916. We all sympathize deeply with Sarah and her mother in this loss of their dear one.

Etta Easton Martin's executive ability is in demand at the College Club. Especially she is rendering valuable service as treasurer of the Pittsburgh Collegiate Vocational Bureau. In this work she is associated with Miss Coolidge, who is vice-chairman of the Bureau. Mrs. Charles H. Spencer and Miss Edna McKee are both members of the Advisory Committee. We feel proud of the part our Alumnae are taking in the work of the Vocational Bureau, for it is a splendid undertaking.

Nettie Hays Flack is very much interested in civic affairs in her home town. She is now serving her fourth year as president of the Tri-borough Woman's Club of Parnassus, New Kensington and Arnold. This club has a membership of fifty, is growing rapidly and is quite a factor in all that tends for the betterment of affairs in the Allegheny Valley.

Carrie Porter Hill leads a busy life in her Ohio home. She is a great help to her husband in his pastoral work. Besides all her other calls, she has found time to be the president of the Woman's Club of Martin's Ferry and also of the Parent-Teachers' Association. She writes that her daughter, Mary, is a Junior in the High School this year, while her boys, John and James, are in the seventh and fourth grades respectively of the public school.

Sarah Hamill Trimble has the honor of having her two oldest, the first children of our class to enter college. Maurice Jr. and Mary both graduate this June from the Ben Avon High School. Maurice expects next fall to enter Princeton and Mary has decided in favor of our college, her mother's Alma Mater. William Trimble, the second boy, goes into High School next September.

E. B. B.

Our hearts were heavy with grief for Jeannette Barbour Barton when we heard that the Angel of Death had visited her home and had taken away little Joseph, the baby of the family. He was a wonderfully bright little boy, four years old, and was a favorite with everyone. His death, from pneumonia, after only a couple of days' illness, was a terrible shock to his parents. We all sorrow with them in their loss.

Bessie Barnes Watson writes, "I've been busy as usual this winter, especially in our Study Hour work. I've had a little committee in the Woman's Club of Albany and we have told stories to more than twenty-eight hundred children during the winter. It is such fun." She expects to be in Pittsburgh in June and hopes to be with us at the Alumnae dinner.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1894

We all sympathize with Elizabeth Raney Kirk in the death of her mother, which occurred last September.

Grace Anderson, with her sisters, spent the winter in California.

The marriage of Susanne Riddle to Mr. Russell Sturgis Paine of Worcester, Mass., occurred April 26 in her home in Edgeworth. On account of the illness of Dr. and Mrs. Riddle, the wedding was conducted very quietly, only twelve being present. After a wedding trip to Bermuda, Sue will make her home in Worcester, but will make, she hopes, frequent visits back to Pittsburgh.

CLASS OF '96

The class of '96 is so reduced as to numbers—only three of us left—that it seems as if we might keep very much in touch with each other; but with one in Florida, one in Canada, and the third in Pittsburgh, our intercourse is necessarily rather limited.

The report from Edith Edeburn is that she is busy but I have not heard directly from her and can't give much news of her. Bess Davidson Topley speaks, or rather writes, for herself in a most interesting letter for the Recorder. As for my own doings, they are confined almost entirely to my home and three lively "kiddies," and have been quite humdrum in character. Best wishes to all the Alumnae.

Sincerely,

Anne Robinson Cooper.

Upon receiving a request from the secretary of the class of 1896 for a little letter I felt, as we always do, that I had nothing of interest about which to write. Then I took up the Recorder for the year 1915 and re-read it from cover to cover. It gave me so much pleasure to read only a few lines concerning those whom I had known during my college days, that I felt inspired to do my little bit. It is twenty years since we graduated and there are only three of us living and we are so widely separated—one in Florida, one in Pittsburgh and the other in Canada.

Ottawa, my home, being the capital, is the headquarters of the militia department and the center of all activities. I cannot begin to tell you of the many ways in which the war has been brought home to Canada. We are Britishers, heart and soul, and working ceaselessly for the mother country. The young men are coming forward splendidly; the older men giving of their means and executive ability; and the women, old and young, are not less active. I think I may safely say that every woman is doing all that she possibly can to help. She not only gives her husband, son or sweetheart, but she gives her time to one or more of the clubs and societies doing patriotic work,—and knits socks besides.

The Women's Canadian Club throughout Canada has done wonderful service. They were, originally, a lecture club, that is, they gathered together at stated intervals, at one of the hotels for luncheon, after which some well-known man or woman was asked to address them. While they have had a few lectures since the war began, they are much more interested in work for the empire, and I do not think there is a busier place in Ottawa than the headquarters of the Club. They make hospital supplies of all kinds, as well as articles for the men in the trenches, and every possible means of making money is employed, even to using copper rescued from the destroyed parliament buildings to make small trays for sale, the women doing the actual work.

There are between two and three thousand troops in the city. They are quite noticeable among a population of less than one hundred thousand. And there are other regiments constantly coming and going. Each day the casualty list brings heartache into some family circle. We have friends among the prisoners in Germany, among the wounded, among those in the trenches, and not a few have gone on before.

No one can say how much longer the war will last but there is no sign of flagging interest either among men or women, rather a grim determination to do everything possible to win this war.

I find I am kept busy doing what I can in these ways and being on the boards of the "Y. W. C. H.," the "Day Nursery" and the "Maternity Hospital." Ottawa has many charitable institutions and the people are exceedingly generous toward them.

I should love to be in Pittsburgh for our twentieth reunion, to renew old friendships and acquaintances. While I thoroughly enjoy Ottawa, the old friends are always the best and there are none better than those of our school and college days.

With best wishes to all in case I cannot be there,

Faithfully yours,

Elizabeth Davidson Topley.

CLASS OF 1902

Fourteen years have come and gone since a hopeful band of thirteen set out to carve their names on the walls of this tenement of life. Whatever virtues they may have gained or lost, they still possess that jewel modesty; for impassioned appeals from the secretary for an opportunity to exploit their prowess in the Recorder, meet either with silence or humble disclaimers of any noble part in doing the world's work.

We have a new baby in the class since Elizabeth Hart Fuller came on March 4, for a permanent visit with her happy mother, Helen Sherrard Fuller. No other baby has anything on Elizabeth in the matter of infantile virtues.

Elsie Braun Searing has become a neighborhood as well as a fireside angel and takes an active part in the new social center in her neighborhood.

Annie Montgomery Young still resides in Honolulu. Her eldest daughter shows evidences of having inherited some of her mother's genius, by taking prizes for literary work at the tender age of eight.

Clara Littell Glass writes that she is busy with her thriving trio of babies, while Grace Kingsbury Shear modestly refrains from giving the secretary any information.

Margaret McClelland Herriot has recently had the glorious experience of having one hundred per cent. of her four children come down with measles at one fell blow. Margaret's experiences wouldn't fill a book simply because she hasn't time to write them.

Elizabeth Van Wagener says she isn't doing anything of interest but we rather suspect she is doing her best to shine up the corner where she is.

May Shrom is still teaching at the Winchester School and Edith Stanton still holds her position with the National Y. W.

C. A. Edith seems to spend her time traveling from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast and back again.

Margaret McKinney continues to be the head, heart and hand of the Associated Charities in Fairmont and spends the remainder of her time in suffrage activities.

Helen Dickey, once more restored to health, has been employed for the past year at the University of Chicago under the official title of secretary and teacher. In addition to performing the usual duties of this office, she is permitted to see that three nourishing meals are served daily at the Men's Commons and to serve on demand refreshments for evening parties of all sizes in connection with the social affairs at the University. Her very limited labors require only fourteen hours a day, seven days a week. She ought to be a physical wreck, but she reports that she is hale and hearty.

Mary Blair was persuaded to write the beautiful little letter which follows and which shows so truly what she is and what she does.

Dear Recorder:

When asked to write a few lines for your readers, I felt it would be necessary to go outside my quiet life for a subject, but I remembered the advice of an old ducky and decided to follow it. The old fellow, brought before the judge on the charge of stealing chickens, pleaded guilty. After sentencing him the judge asked how he had managed to steal the chickens when the coop was so near the owner's house, and there was a vicious dog in the yard.

"Hit wouldn't be of no use, judge," answered the ducky, "to try to 'splain to you. Ef yo' was to try it, like as not yo' would get yer hide full of shot, an' get no chicken, nuther. Ef you' wants to engage in any rascality, judge, yo' better stick to de bench, whar yo' am familiar."

While my days are quiet they are not by any means monotonous. Friends drop in for a little chat and many an interesting story of their daily experiences do I enjoy. My own family keep me informed of all the household happenings. The magazines and papers bring the news of all the world.

If these fail, there is the great outdoors for company, for while the outlook from my porch windows is limited, it is very interesting. Solitary rides over the foothills of the Rockies taught me to appreciate Nature and now, being obliged to stay in bed, I am glad to have learned to Stop! Look! Listen! to her. The trees in the near neighborhood seem like dear familiar friends, the birds, even the bold, bad sparrow, are entertaining, and the clouds are my wonderful moving pictures.

My tale is told, very prosaic, and in comparison with those of many sister alumnae, quite colorless. But Milton has said,

“They also serve who only stand and wait,” and that is great consolation for such as I.

M. B., '02.

CLASS OF 1903

Dear Recorder:

I should like to see printed in you all the delightful letters I have received from the girls of our class—'03. They are full of vital interests and individuality—and consequently make very good reading.

Anna Hunter's letter of thanksgiving for her unexpectedly rapid and full recovery after her very serious illness of the fall, expresses all of her deep love and faith. Sara Pfeil Baker's is short but full of her anguish caused by her father's death. Hattie Duff Phillips' is bubbling and brimming over with the joy she finds in living and in her ever interesting and growing family. Her boundless energy is not confined to trying out Dr. Dewey's latest educational theories upon her own children, but she must supervise the summer playgrounds of Carriek and give of her gifts to other civic enterprises.

Eleanor Fitzgibbon's achievements and vitality always cause wonder to rise within me. She has had so many things to manage this year (such as the P. C. W. Alumnae Association and the Shakespeare Tercenary Celebration) and so many speeches to make, in behalf of suffrage, Drama League, and such causes. Hilda Sadler is still teaching sewing in the Allegheny playgrounds and taking a course or two at Margaret Morrison. Anna Myra Petty Irwin's mind has been given largely to domestic pursuits. She has left the Petty hearthstone and gone to housekeeping on Woodmont avenue, where she has enjoyed her own home and nursing her children through measles.

Mary Willson Coleman and Ruth Johnston I have not heard from directly, but I know that Mary made a rather recent visit to Pittsburgh and is busily engaged in rearing her two small daughters. Ruth is still teaching at Downer College, Milwaukee. I have had hopes of seeing her in Chicago but so far I have been disappointed.

As for myself, I have had a very full and happy year getting established in my new life and forming new friendships and associations, as well as renewing many old ones. I have joined the Chicago College Club and have come into contact with many artists, musicians, university and public school people. I have been brought face to face with many of the problems which beset the way of the present and future development of the public school systems of our great cosmopolitan cities; and have grown to realize what a task it is to weld our heterogeneous school population into a homogeneous, consolidated body of intelligent, loyal American citizens. With Mr. Smith, I have visited night schools, day schools, and community centers, attended banquets and lectures, not to mention theaters, "movies," and "et ceteras" (as Dr. Muir used to say) in behalf of education. I should like to tell you something of the work of the evening high schools and of the forty nationalities I have seen pass through them—but not now. My education has been enlarged and broadened, I assure you.

It is good to hear from the girls when I am so far away from the base of P. C. W. operations, and I should like to go into detail more about each one; but now I must close this class letter of 1916 and wait for another year in which to continue it. So good-bye for this time.

As ever, faithfully and loyally,

Jennie McSherry Smith, '03.

Chicago, Ill., April 29, 1916.

CLASS OF 1904

Nancy Bair is finding the days very full in loving service to her home and family.

Elizabeth Carpenter (Mrs. Richard J. Dearborn) has to report the birth on October 5, 1915, of a small son, Henry Dearborn.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Rebekah Eggers spent last summer in study at Columbia University.

Jessie Gray is Dean of the Flagler Preparatory School in Jacksonville, Florida, and teaches German, History and Spanish.

Edna McKee is just as busy as ever with "a number of things," Y. W. C. A., College Club, Decade II, P. C. W. interests in general, etc., etc., etc.

Lida Young is still our librarian. She is back again now in the Central Library.

Helen Thomas (Mrs. W. H. Larimer) has found her life very happy in the care of home and little daughter, and in the many interests they bring.

Helen Thomas Larimer, '04.

CLASS OF 1906

Again comes the call from the Recorder Board and our class of course should make some effort this year. The tenth reunion! But what can I do, the lone member of the class of 1906 living in Pittsburgh? Long before Christmas I wrote Willa to please come on for Commencement, but she explained how impossible it was to leave that month on account of work with new doctors in the hospital. That their change of work took place during that month and it was really impossible to get here, much as she would enjoy it. That calls to mind the fact that Willa's home is now in Philadelphia. She and her mother have a little home together now and they are enjoying it.

Verna, the other member of the class, has a small daughter, Ruth, who arrived Sabbath evening, February 27, 1916, and we know that Verna is continuing her course in "Education."

As for the third member of this class, a little of this, a little of that fills up the day and the years pass on.

The fourth member of our class has already finished her work here and "gone before," but we have the pleasant memory of a happy comrade, an active worker and a loyal friend. A record of 1906 never seems complete without a tribute to "Our Anne."

Greetings then to our friends both old and new from the class of 1906.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1907

You ask for something interesting to publish. Such things are hard to find, but I wonder if your readers might be interested to read of a little pilgrimage made last October to the home of Joaquin Miller, at "The Heights," overlooking Oakland and the Bay of San Francisco.

Last year a visitor to San Francisco naturally gave his first attention to the marvelous Exposition, and we did as other visitors. And then one feels obliged to visit Chinatown, because everyone else visits Chinatown, and this we did also. But through all these travels we kept an open ear for any information concerning the location of the home of the California poet. We did more. We asked where the home of Joaquin Miller could be found, and to our surprise, found that the poet whose name was well known to us, seemed rather vague to those who were his neighbors. But remembering that a prophet is seldom honored in his own land, and that fame increases in proportion to the distance it travels from home, we persevered.

We subsequently learned that "The Heights" was on the hills surrounding Oakland, and early one morning we crossed the bay and found ourselves in this sunny suburb. Here we began our inquiries anew. One man said, "Oh, yes, I know about where it is. I live out there but I've never been over to his place. They say it's curious, though. You take the car with the black diamond on." Thus duly instructed, we boarded the car. When the conductor came for our fare we told him where we hoped to go, and he laughed with great merriment, as he said, "You'll have a good walk. It's two or three miles over the hills."

This may have sounded discouraging, but we had gone too far now to turn back. We got off the car and were directed up a rather hilly but paved street. This was more encouraging but after pursuing our course for some little distance, we were surprised to find the paved street suddenly and without warning metamorphose into a dusty country road. We met a postman and appealed to him. He was a humorist. "Joaquin Miller—well, walkin' is right, I tell you. It's about two miles over the hills." But by this time the spirit of adventure had so thrilled us, that we cared neither for the dusty road nor the California sun. We scanned every rural mail box with eagerness, enlightening ourselves enough to know that our quest was not finished. Once we saw in the distance a place different from the others, and as we were convinced that Joaquin Miller's home would be a little different from any other man's, we regarded it with interest. But when we were closer we found that it was only the deserted country home of a wealthy resident of San Francisco, and now the gates were nailed shut to exclude intruders.

But perseverance is usually rewarded, and ours was amply rewarded, for after crossing a little bridge, we read on the mail box at the side of the road—Joaquin Miller. We stopped to look—a vast hillside (forty acres), curious small cottages, tall green trees, and over all a look of neglect, as though the hand that loved these things and cared for them was gone forever. And then we turned to get the view, which probably was the poet's reason for choosing this very spot for his home in those early pioneer days when these hills were desert lands. There before us was the Bay of San Francisco, and straight ahead the Golden Gate, which, seen from this spot, certainly justified its name, when the setting sun sank down between its narrow opening straight into the level sea.

We turned again to the hillside, and opening the rude gate entered. A tap at the door brought so instant a reply that we thought we must have been seen before we reached the cottage.

It was Mrs. Miller herself who greeted us, and invited us in so cordially, and entertained us so charmingly. She seemed delighted that we were admirers of the poet, and more than pleased that we had climbed the mountains to visit his home. She showed us the things he used as he worked, and quoted now and again from his poems so beautifully that we were almost spellbound.

There was the little cottage where he had lived, with its simple furnishings; then there was the cottage where his mother had lived—a small cottage built over a tent, for she was one of the pioneers, and having spent her early years in a tent, clung to it to the last. Then there was the "Abbey," the poet's workshop, a quaint little—shall I call it chapel? Its colored windows and the small cross at the top suggested this. But most curious of all were the tiny cottages on the hillside above, where the poet's friends were entertained, each being given his own cottage and the freedom of the hills.

We wandered from this group of cottages up the hill and over the fields, and here we found the work of the poet's hand. From the top of the barren hill, and extending some little distance down the side overlooking the bay, he had planted trees in the form of a huge cross—great evergreen trees—three abreast—in the hope that it might be a symbol seen far out in the distance by those who looked that way. Then he had gathered the stones of the hillside and built monuments to men whom he admired—not piles of stones, as one might imagine, but real works of masonry, solid and strong. There is the pyramid to the first law-giver, Moses, the round English tower to Robert Browning, the square tower to Tennyson, and the monument to Fremont. And there, too, on the summit of the hill is his own funeral pyre built by his own hand.

We saw all these things and then slowly retraced our steps till we stood once more by the poet's own single dwelling. There we leaned on the old fence and pondered as we gazed off into the misty softness of the ocean. This was the home of the man who had lived a life of the utmost simplicity, far removed from the world of men, and much of the time alone, but who could send out to the world that thrilling and inspiring message,

“Sail on! Sail on! Sail on! and on!”

Bessie D. Johnson McGinnity, '07.

CLASS OF 1907

The class of 1907 has little to add in the way of news items, as most of us are contentedly pursuing the course of life in much the same quiet way as when we last wrote to the Recorder. The year seems to have brought few changes to us, and has treated us kindly.

Edith Allison Boyd has changed her residence from Ohio to the shore state of New Jersey, and is now living in East Orange. She writes that her two babies keep her fairly well occupied. She spent the winter holidays in Lansdowne, but has not ventured so far as Pittsburgh for some time.

Now, those of us who know Grace Stevenson McKibben well, know something of her constant threat to move to Pittsburgh. So often had we heard of her longing and unfulfilled desire, that we were somewhat startled one day last fall to hear Grace's familiar voice on the phone, saying “Summerlea and Holden Streets.” But sure enough, Grace was in East Liberty, and spent the winter in our midst. She returns to Coraopolis for the summer, but we hope for more winters in this vicinity. Grace is now added to our list of housekeepers, but has the advantage that many housekeepers don't have, of being able to divide her time between housekeeping and music.

Clara Niebaum has spent a very successful year in Aspinwall, teaching in the High School. She had a visit from Carla and Elsa Jarecki in the early spring, and we all had several reunions during their visit.

Ellen McKee has had a busy winter as secretary in the Presbyterian Book Rooms. We can only snatch hasty visits from her in these busy days.

Mary McKee has spent another year in Northfield, Mass., where she is happy helping the girls of the Northfield Seminary. She spent her Christmas holidays at home.

Bessie Johnson McGinnity has spent a happy year at home, taking a few weeks from the usual duties to visit California and the Exposition.

CLASS OF 1908

Although California seems a long way off from P. C. W., I couldn't feel so alone this year, because of the girls coming here for the Fairs. Those who gave me happy surprises were: Carla Jarecki, 1909; Vera Lewis Williamson, Clarissa Blakeslee, 1911. I suppose others were here who did not look me up. I assure them they would have had a welcome.

It was a disappointment to me not to be able to welcome to my home and our beautiful California some member of my own immediate class, 1908. According to all reports they are (one and all) busy with home duties and little ones. Our time for visiting will come in the sweet bye and bye.

Sincerely yours,

Myrtle Grow Blakely, '08.

Our class has something important to tell this time, and that is the arrival of a lovely new baby, born January 16, 1916. His name is William James McJunkin, the son of Mary Mellon McJunkin. In appearance he strikingly resembles his father, and he has inherited the amiable disposition of his mother, too.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Lilla Green Simmons lives in Troy, N. Y., and in a recent letter says that little Foster, almost two years old, is "the liveliest youngster imaginable, never still, full of energy and good nature and into everything." Still Lilla has time for club work, as she wrote a paper recently for the Troy University Club, and is interested in all lines of club activities.

Virginia Marshall Dann reports that her family is well and happy, and Patricia and Marshall are growing.

CLASS OF 1910

Although it is said that "No news is good news," the class of 1910 has reached the age when it has learned that people would rather be told "All is well" than take it for granted. Not much more than that statement can be made at this time. Elma McKibben McLean is the mother of an interesting little daughter whose charms seem to be too numerous to mention. Mary Kramer belongs to that busy class of stay-at-homes who are constantly doing all sorts of things, but who modestly insist that there is "Nothing worth while to report." Ethel Tassej continues to lay claim to a share in the making of the history of the Vandergrift High School.

CLASS OF 1911

The class of 1911 of Pennsylvania College for Women takes pleasure in calling the attention of its sister alumnae to the fact that it is five years old. That is, it takes some pleasure, but as always, there's a fly in the ointment. The class can't be five years old without its members being five years older, and that's quite a large fly, isn't it? Nevertheless, whether we like it or not, five eventful years have gone by since we tremblingly took our places at our first Alumnae Dinner. You will sympathize with our desire to make this Alumnae Dinner our birthday party. We have never had one before. Then, too, you won't object so much, since this party doesn't demand, as most birthday parties do, presents as well as presence.

In 1911 we numbered seventeen. Since then we have added four husbands and one fiance. We're sure about the one fiance, and we have a secret premonition of others, about whom we're not sure. At least we have twelve opportunities for nice young applicants left. Our number has been additionally increased by a daughter and a son. There never were nicer, prettier, more lovable children in existence than these, and neither of them belongs to the writer at that.

Ellen Jean Baird, who is "goin' on three," is a lively and attractive bit of humanity. James Gray Everhart, at nine months, is a very promising young American citizen. In the words of William Green Hill, they're "about the nicest kids they is."

It is true that during the five years since we have left the protecting guidance of our Alma Mater, none of us has set the world on fire. After all, however, there was no immediate need for such a conflagration, and we have done many other and more important things. In addition to those of us, before mentioned, who have acquired husbands,—and that's an accomplishment in itself,—the rest of us have been busy, too. Ten of us have made the world wiser by direct impartation of the knowledge we laboriously acquired during four years at Pennsylvania. Be is said here, that all of us have acquired more knowledge since then. Somehow life has a habit of passing it out to those who live,—and we have all lived in the fullest sense of the word.

Two of us entered library work. Two others became disciples of Miss Mèloy, and are uplifting the ideals and environment of downtrodden humanity. We boast three ladies of leisure. At least we, who earn our daily bread by the "sweat of our brows," call them that. They deny the soft imputation. In their heart of hearts they know they are busier than we. And in our inmost souls we honestly believe they don't know what they're talking about. After all, it's always the other fellow who has the soft snap, isn't it?

We have had our share of joy, and sorrow has not passed us by. One mother, two fathers, one husband, and one brother have been taken away by the scythe of the inexorable Reaper whose name is Death. Our hearts have been drawn closer together in sympathy for those of our number who have so bravely borne their bereavements.

Part of the joy was in the marriages. There's another one coming, too, but it isn't a real one because the chief performer doesn't intend to have us witness the ordeal. We are greatly disappointed. Perhaps, just to get even, the rest of us won't get married.

Five years have passed, in which we have tried our wings. Exercise is increasing their power. Perhaps, in the light of that fact, it is well that this report is written now. If you have been bored with the recounting of our achievements, gentle reader, yet there is balm. These glories need not again be recounted. You are spared what might, in five more years, have been a volume. Be thankful, sister Alumnae, and watch us soar.

F. K. W., '11.

CLASS OF 1912

Not long ago a note arrived from our honorable secretary saying that she "could not spare even a moment to write the Recorder report this year." As our wrath kindled, we read farther and came to the words, "Getting ready to be married very soon." The excuse was so good that it was accepted.

This year we announce with pride that we have our first class baby, Dorothy Elizabeth Swan, who will celebrate her first birthday on May 17. We are glad to welcome Florence's little daughter and enroll her among our members.

Word comes from Hazel in California that she has finished her teacher's course in the University of Southern California and has received a certificate which enables her to teach in the High Schools of that State. We hope to have her home for a visit in June. Lillian McHenry is also teaching in California.

Elvira, Calla, Beulah, Daisy, Helen and Mary Keen are busy teaching in various schools in or near the city. Edith Chaddock is in the research department of the University of Pittsburgh. Mary Gray is in the children's department at the central branch of the Carnegie Library.

Tess, Wid, Martha Kim, and May are endeavoring to be little sunbeams in their various home circles.

Last year we announced that three of our girls were married, Maud Shutt, Frances Cameron and Florence Bickel. This year we are pleased to add three more names to that list. Our secretary, Frances Davies, on April 27 was quietly married to Harry James Kerr at her home in Munhall. On May 4 Martha Sands became the bride of Louis A. Kirtland of Poland, Ohio, a suburb of Youngstown. At home cards announce June 15 in Poland, Ohio. After keeping us in a state of suspense since college days, Eleanor Davis has chosen July 15 for the day of her marriage to Nevin Woodside. The other members of 1912 extend their very best wishes to our brides and hope that we may see them all at our Class Luncheon at Commencement time.

We feel safe in saying that the people of 1913 are all very busy. At least we take it for granted that that is the reason why so many of them failed to respond to the appeal for news.

We have had one wedding and one engagement since our last letter was written. Laila Clark and Mr. Walter Ament were married in the fall and are keeping house at 6444 Marchand Street. The engagement is that of Esther Rosenbloom, who is to marry Mr. Robert Buka. Just at present Esther is in the West Penn Hospital recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She has the comfort of having had a companion in misery for Sylvia Wayne also underwent an operation for appendicitis recently. We are all glad to hear that they are both recovering nicely.

Having heard nothing to the contrary, in fact nothing at all, we suppose that Faye Atkinson McCune is still in the West. Emma Geiselhart (Mrs. Osterloh) and Florence Kingsbacher (Mrs. Frank) must also be very much engrossed with domestic life, for we seldom see them and still more seldom hear from them. Helen Craig (Mrs. Culley) is still living on the North Side. Lucy Layman Lawrence has changed her place of residence, going from Montclair to East Orange, N. J. Lucy visited in Pittsburgh in March and in her honor a class reunion was held at Laila's home one afternoon. About eight of the girls and Miss Butterfield were able to be present and they enjoyed getting together again. At that time plans for a class musical and tea were arranged which later had to be given up.

Helen Blair is so extremely busy these days that it positively seems mysterious. She is at home but says her time is fully occupied.

Grace Wilson spent several months in Ambridge directing social work and then returned to Kingsley House to resume her duties there.

Several of the girls are occupying positions away from home. Jeanne Gray teaches Physical Training in the Normal School in Albany, N. Y., and Christine Cameron has spent the winter in Northampton, Mass., where she is teaching and taking a course in work for deaf mutes. Margaret Minor is still teaching in Morgantown, W. Va., and enjoys her work as much as ever. Marguerite Titzell is still teaching in Kittinging, Louise Fletcher in Mayville, Claire Colestock in Sewickley, Elsie Weihe in Connellsville, Martha Young in Vandergrift, and Betty McCague in Mt. Lebanon. Martha writes she is very industrious but not too busy to stop and send everyone a greeting. Florence Keys remained at home this winter and taught in that vicinity. Her term is over now and she is devoting herself to home duties and horticulture. Sylvia Wayne also taught for a time this winter, doing work in one of the city high schools.

Claire is planning a trip to California this summer, where she will visit members of her family and probably take some work at one of the universities. She expects to have a visit with Lillian McHenry and Hazel Hickson.

MINUTES OF THE ALUMNAE MEETING, JUNE 11, 1915

The regular June meeting of the Alumnae Association, Pennsylvania College for Women, was held at the College, June 11, 1915. The meeting was called to order by the President, Miss Mary Breed, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and accepted. Miss Breed then welcomed the new class into membership and followed this with her President's address.

Reports from the Treasurer, Recorder Board, and Scholarship Committee were read and accepted as read. There being no old business to dispose of, new business was in order.

The Secretary read a letter from Miss Jane Kerr, Chairman Finance Committee, College Vocational Bureau of Pittsburgh, asking for the financial support of our association. Moved that a suitable contribution be made. Amended by substituting for "suitable contribution" the words "twenty-five ($25) dollars at present." Motion was carried as amended.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Miss Bronson made a plea for a subscription to the College library. This was followed by a motion that the Association give twenty-five ($25) to the library. Carried.

Moved that an auxiliary society to the Alumnae Association of non-graduate girls be formed and that a committee of three (3), appointed by the Chair, confer with Miss Coolidge on the subject. Carried.

Moved that a committee of three (3) be appointed to confer with Miss Coolidge and the Alumnae officers as to the most dignified method of levying the tax for the Alumnae dinner, and this committee be requested to report at the Fall meeting. Carried.

Miss Fitzgibbon spoke of the Shakespeare festival and asked for a display of interest, including the endorsement of the Association. Moved that the Alumnae Association endorse the movement by standing back of the College in their plans. Carried.

The committee in charge of the banquet held at the Hotel Schenley, May 14, 1915, reported a very successful affair, all bills met and a small surplus in their treasury.

Moved that votes of thanks be extended to Miss Fitzgibbon, chairman, and to the banquet committee for the great success of the banquet; to Mrs. Jones, press agent; Mrs. Holmes, who was on the scene of action so constantly; Mrs. Phillips, for her kind contribution to the flower committee, and individuals from the various stores, who were most kind in assisting. Carried.

Moved that balance from the banquet be given to lecture fund. Laid on the table.

Miss Coolidge then gave her annual address, reporting an increase in student body and great crowding for rooms for class-room work and school activities.

This was followed by roll-call to which 82 responded.

The report of the nominating committee was read and approved and the secretary instructed to cast the ballot with the result that the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Miss Eleanor Fitzgibbon, '03.

Vice President—Mrs. Charles H. Spencer, '83.

Carried.

Moved that our Alumnae Association join the State Federation of Women. Carried.

Moved that a monthly meeting of the Association be held and suggested that such meetings be held at the homes of members. Carried.

Owing to the failure of this bank, the Association will doubtless suffer a loss on this fund, though the amount is not known at this time. To date we have received a dividend of fifty per cent., or $298.67, which has been deposited, subject to the approval of the Association, in the City Deposit Bank, Pittsburgh, Pa.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

REPORT OF THE HELEN PELLETREAU SCHOLARSHIP COMMITTEE

Once more through the columns of The Recorder I am glad to make a report in behalf of the Helen E. Pelletreau Scholarship Committee and give to the Alumnae Association an account of our stewardship.

During the year 1915-1916 the Scholarship Fund has helped three students, one whose tuition was paid in full and the other two in part. Of these three students, two are Sophomores, and one who has been our Scholarship girl for four years is now a Senior. She will graduate and receive her degree in June.

Miss Coolidge in speaking of "our girls," says, "they are all fine college students, appreciative of assistance and representative girls." Of our Senior that "she is an ambitious girl and her education will make her more successful in earning her living." I will say here that all the girls that are being assisted by the Scholarship Fund expect to make good use of their college education and advantages obtained through college life, by earning their own living,—most probably in some educational line of work.

Of one of our Sophomores, Miss Coolidge tells me that a few weeks ago she had the honor of being received into a literary Society, The Omega. "She is a delightful girl and will always do us credit." These girls have shown their independence and desire to help pay their own way through College, by working during vacation and even after school hours, earning extra money in this way. They all seem to be earnest workers and girls that we can be proud of having helped get a College education. One of our Scholarship girls does not object to being known as a "Scholarship" student. She is a high-caste Hindu girl, Kamela Cornelius, and I think it may be interesting to the members of the Alumnae Association to learn something about her. In a letter received from Miss Coolidge she writes me: "I should like some time to have Miss Cornelius given an opportunity of becoming a little acquainted with the Alumnae for we find her a most interesting person, and, as she is practically a ward of the College, we shall always be interested in her future work. Miss Cornelius has repeatedly spoken this year in Sunday Schools, Mission Bands, and Clubs and has been received with much interest. She belongs to a third generation of Christians and as a high-caste woman will have unusual opportunities to work among a higher class of Hindus on her return home. She belongs to a most interesting family. There are ten children. One sister is a graduate of the University of Madras and was with Pundita Ramabai until her marriage. This is Mrs. Appasamy, who was here last year and made such a fine impression all over the country. Another sister is a physician. Another received a kindergarten training in America and is now in South Africa. Kamela is educating herself in America for future missionary work. One other sister is still at College in India, but is desirous of coming to America for a medical education. Of her brothers, one has received high degrees from Harvard and is now professor in Reed's Christian College, Lucknow. One is being educated in England and one is still at home. Miss Cornelius is most loyal to the College and her work is widely known as a foreign student in this country registered here. She is very acceptable in her home life and the girls have been most cordial and kind in their attitude of helpfulness toward her."

After hearing this most interesting account that Miss Coolidge has so kindly given us of our Hindu Scholarship girl, I am sure we will all be anxious and glad to meet her and become acquainted.

Each year our list of Scholarship girls grows and who can tell how far reaching for good their influence will be and the fame of our beloved Alma Mater will be spread abroad even into such a far-away land as India. Let us hope that some day we can increase our "Fund" so as to be able to help a greater number of girls to a higher education, that they may be able to go out into the world and do greater and better work than they otherwise could do.

THE COLLEGIATE VOCATIONAL BUREAU

For three years committees from the College Club of Pittsburgh were at work investigating the needs of this vicinity and making plans for the organization of a Vocational Bureau; and through the co-operation of established Bureaus, together with the interest and activity of College Club Members, the Collegiate Vocational Bureau became a reality on July 6, 1915, with Miss Esther M. Smith as Director.

The bureau embodies the double ideal of supplying the trained woman with opportunity and the untrained one with guidance—where employers may find women workers with special training; where a clearing house of information is established as well as a research department to investigate new avenues of activity and opportunity for young women.

The large number of applicants, over four hundred and fifty during the first seven months; the number of employers who have come for assistance in finding young women; and the number of placements made, have shown the Bureau to be a success, and the need for it in Pittsburgh has been proved by its welcome.

Our College and Alumnae have shown great interest in supporting the Bureau, and are well represented on the different committees, Miss Coolidge being vice chairman of the Advisory Committee and Edna McKee, secretary of the Bureau Committee.

The College Club is responsible for its support and feels the work has a great future, having received generous aid from college women because of its educational and beneficial character. It earnestly desires the continuation of such support, and that each and every Alumna will be interested personally and endeavor to bring the existence of the Bureau before the eyes of the public.

COLLEGE ACTIVITIES

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY AT VASSAR COLLEGE

Your Alumnae Committee has very kindly asked me to give a brief account of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary at Vassar College last October, at which I had the honor to be an academic guest, representing Pennsylvania College for Women. Before speaking of Vassar, however, I should like to mention very interesting inauguration exercises at Washington & Jefferson College, where Miss Brownson and myself were privileged to be guests in addition to our President. Following so shortly after the inauguration of our own President, it seemed as if the two local colleges, representing the same ideals for men and women, had made a new start toward future growth and development at about the same season.

I record with pleasure and gratitude the honor given me by Washington & Jefferson College in conferring the honorary degree upon me of Master of Arts on this occasion. I need not tell you that I was more gratified to receive such recognition for the sake of your college than for its personal value.

The last week in June Miss Ely and myself attended, as delegates, the one hundredth anniversary of Allegheny College. The most notable features were the laying of the cornerstone of the new Science Building; a symposium of several sessions on the subject "The American College" (the papers read at that time are now published and form a valuable contribution to college literature), and the notable pageant giving the history of the college during its one hundred years. The picturesqueness of this feature and its unusual realism made a notable contribution to pageantry, and to me a very interesting point was the way in which a poetic glamour was cast over the sordid and hard struggle for existence at different times during those hundred years, while one saw all the time the heroism that had gone into its building and the ever-forward look.

The unusual weather at Vassar, added to the marvelous weather conditions accorded to us on the 14th and 15th of last May, and to Allegheny, incline us to feel that nature has a special fondness for college occasions and for pageants in particular. It is impossible to give even an outline of the unusual week at Vassar. Much of this you have already read in newspapers and magazines. The celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the oldest regularly chartered college for women attracted widespread attention. In greater part the academic programs were conservative in their subject and in the manner in which the speakers treated them. Graduates who had achieved distinction in various academic and philanthropic fields were on the program, combined with noted speakers from many institutions. Only one speaker, Mrs. George Haven Putnam of New York, former Dean of Barnard and now Professor of History at that college, sounded a forward note in the progress of women. So many different interpretations have been put upon her "radical" words that I hardly dare to say what I understood her to mean, but, confidentially, I will confess that there seemed to me nothing alarming in her prophecy that the next fifty years are to test the real value of many of the time-honored traditions in regard to woman's natural place and mission. Special features were the beautiful pageant, a historical exhibition of physical training, and the play of the History of Vassar, written and presented by the Alumnae. The Alumnae procession gave one a fine opportunity to see real results of fifty years in representatives from every class.

Sharing in all the honors and received with enthusiasm by the Alumnae was ex-President Taylor, in consideration of his twenty-five years of valuable service in the upbuilding of the college. Another notable figure was Chancellor MacCracken, the father of the new President, Henry Noble MacCracken. Receptions and dinners furnished constant opportunities for meeting the interesting people present.

Much interest centered in the pageant. One delightful feature of pageantry is its variety. Although I have seen many notable productions since this form of presentation came into vogue about ten years ago, all have been so different that no direct comparisons are possible. So in the three, last year, our own "Paskennoden," the one at Allegheny and the "Athena" at Vassar, each was perfect in its own way.

The Vassar pageant was composed and presented by the students of the college, under the direction of Miss Hazel Mackaye. The setting of the outdoor theatre was very beautiful—costumes rich in color and every detail pleasing to the eye and stimulating in its appeal. In the prologue, Athena announces that "She reveals her web of knowledge interwoven through the ages with the lives of learned women, rich with the colors of their thought." She says:

"Bright in the skein of time gleam many strands
Endlessly varied.

* * * * *

"And this my web

Shall weaving be forever, never done."

Then follows seven remarkable scenes, each one presenting a learned woman, beginning with Sapho in the Sixth Century B. C., and ending with Elena Lucrezia Cornaro in the Seventeenth Century. In the various scenes are presented Greek settings, Latin, English, French, Spanish and Italian, and we see that there have always been in the history of the world, women devoted to learning and of such high ability as to compel the admiration and respect of both sexes and all ages.

At the close of the pageant, hundreds of students who had not taken part crossed over the stage, four abreast, singing a college song; dressed in white, wearing sweaters of beautiful colors, they presented an inspiring picture of the wholesome, strong and splendid college girls, now in our colleges by the tens of thousands, who are to help in the progress of the world in the next generation. It was my privilege to attend this celebration and I noted that, although the fiftieth anniversary, which naturally brought references to the past and tributes to those who have carried on the splendid work of Vassar College, yet the keynote of the occasion was the splendid future which is before the American Colleges for Women.

CORA HELEN COOLIDGE.

THE HIGH SCHOOL AS A FEEDER FOR THE COLLEGE

For the purposes of this article, the students of our public high schools may be divided into three classes:

(1) A considerable proportion, either through lack of means, or ambition, or from a desire to enter at once upon some remunerative employment, will not go to college at all. That will be taken for granted.

(2) A considerable number are planning to take technical or vocational training, and these naturally will seek the special schools with that end in view.

(3) But there is also a goodly number in most of these schools who plan to take advanced courses somewhere, and who are wanting a broader culture than is provided for in institutions of a technical and definitely utilitarian character—young men and women who have in mind not so much immediate pecuniary advantage as a general preparation for the work of life. It is to this class of students that colleges like P. C. W. will properly look for the recruiting of their numbers.

In recent years, as is well known, the average high school curriculum has been very considerably broadened and extended, and the teaching force has been brought up to a high degree of competency. In view of this, such schools in all communities are being patronized by substantial and well-to-do people who were formerly disposed to patronize the preparatory boarding schools.

It is important that the Alumnae of this College should understand the excellent work that is being done by these public high schools in the way of college preparation, and that they should keep in mind the opportunities they have for turning the steps of these young women toward the halls of their Alma Mater.

It is worthy of note that certificate privileges have been granted many of these high schools by the eastern colleges in recognition of the thoroughness of their preparatory instruction.

In my recent explorations among the towns about Pittsburgh I have discovered that there are few high schools to be found in Western Pennsylvania with less than a four-year course, though a few years ago two and three-year courses were quite common. Even in the country districts, township high schools have been established which offer a college preparatory course to their students in addition to commercial and agricultural courses. Some of them are very well equipped for this kind of work and bring college preparation within reach of boys and girls most desirous to take advantage of such opportunities.

If one would make a canvas of the student body in one of our leading colleges today it would be found that a large proportion had come from the public high schools. It would also be observed that such students were not falling behind in their college standing. This, I believe, is true as applied to the students at P. C. W.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

As I have gone my rounds, several high school principals have assured me that the employment of college teachers in the public high schools has done much to place the college ideal before their students. Until somewhat recently the question of going to college was not a common one for discussion in the public high schools. Now the principals and teachers in these schools are so largely college graduates themselves that the desirability of entering upon some kind of college work is quite generally talked about and commended to the pupils. Indeed many superintendents and principals take a commendable pride in mentioning the large number of their graduates who have entered higher institutions of learning. One principal in Pittsburgh informed me, with evident satisfaction, that 60 per cent. of the graduates from the Pittsburgh high schools last year matriculated at such advanced institutions. Another high school principal in a smaller place informed me that during the last four years 97 per cent. of his graduates had gone to college.

It is a rare thing to find a high school principal who is not thoroughly in sympathy with the work of higher education and ready to welcome any effort for the directing of his students toward college life. In nearly every instance I have found them most courteous and friendly toward my own efforts as field secretary for P. C. W.

From the facts above mentioned it is evident that while colleges have multiplied and enlarged their capacities, the preparatory facilities have also developed on even a larger scale, and the supply of students for advanced courses of study is not likely to run short. It is simply a question as to where the young people will go. Surely P. C. W., by reason of her history and location, and the character of the work she has accomplished, should have her share of the patronage to be derived from these sources.

The parents of these high school pupils—a large number of them—desire especially for their children the broader culture, and the refining and Christianizing influences, and the pleasant and wholesome fellowship furnished in a college such as ours—the kind of culture and training designed to qualify their daughters not merely to “succeed in life” but to “succeed in living,” which is a matter of still greater moment. It is the desire of the College, and of your Field Secretary, your representative, to get in touch with as many as possible of those graduating from the high schools during the present season. We believe the Alumnae of the College can render a distinct and valuable service to their Alma Mater, as well as to these young women, by calling their attention to the college and the opportunities furnished here, or by notifying the President or your Field Secretary of those whom it would be worth while to look up.

Will you not keep this matter patriotically in mind and help us as you find opportunity? Advertising today is as common and as important amongst schools and colleges as it is in business enterprises, and it will help us greatly if our loyal Alumnae will, figuratively speaking, turn themselves into bill-boards for a worthy cause.

SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Presented in Outdoor Theatre, at Pennsylvania College for Women, May 20, 1916.

This being the Shakespeare tercentenary year, it was thought fitting to join in the world-wide celebration, in honor of the "Bard of Avon."

May Day coming so near the poet's birthday, was considered the most suitable time for the celebration. In order to concentrate effort and make the performance as effective as possible, the Seniors were asked to present their Class Day play on this occasion instead of at Commencement time, and that the play be one of Shakespeare's.

The idea in giving the celebration, was not only to express our gratitude and appreciation for all the great poet has given us, that was first in our minds, but another consideration, the educational value of the training for the students was also in our minds. Then, too, a real desire to give something in which the community might share, to throw open our doors and say to the public, "Since you cannot all share the good things we enjoy every day, this one day in the year come and be our guests, enjoy the beauty of our hillside, and we shall endeavor to give you something of real worth and value."

The plan outlined for the festival was this in brief:

Prelude—Shakespeare's Flowers. Eighteen of the Spring flowers in a beautiful dance, suggested the time and atmosphere of what was to follow.

Part I—May Day revels of English village folk on the village green. In this were presented all the early English customs practiced by the people on that day. The Maypole dance; the crowning of Maid Marian, Queen of the May, the Morris Dances, with Robin Hood, Friar Tuck, Little John, the Fool, the hobby horse and the dragon; country round dances and games, and early English songs were features of this part of the program.

Interlude—The Hunt. Hunters on horseback, singing "The Hunt Is Up," passed by. Foresters with game paused in passing to sing, "Under the Greenwood Tree."

Part II—May Day revels at court. After the gorgeous and imposing procession of Queen Elizabeth and her court, lords and ladies danced the stately old Pavane.

Shakespeare then presented his players in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" before the queen and her court. The play was followed by the recessional of the queen and her court, followed by the players.

The spectacular features of the play, which lend themselves so well to an out-of-door performance, were emphasized, and much was made of the fairies, there being sixty of them. The beautiful Mendelssohn choruses, sung by the College Glee Club, lent much to the performance.

Much time and work were spent on the details of the preparation, but with the hearty co-operation of the students and faculty, there was much joy in the doing. We hope we succeeded in laying a worthy tribute at the feet of the great bard, whom we revere and honor so highly.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

The Young Women's Christian Association has a membership of eighty this year, and we have had an average attendance of fifty throughout the year. The meetings have been very good, and an interest has been shown. We opened our year with the annual informal reception. The plan of having the Christmas bazaar the same day as the Dramatic Club play was tried, and proved a success, as we cleared $115. February was the Jubilee Month for the National Association, when it celebrated its fiftieth birthday. About thirty of our members attended the membership rally dinner at Soldiers' Memorial Hall, some as guests and others serving at tables. P. C. W. was also represented in the pageant, "The Girls of Yesterday and Today." We were fortunate in securing some noted secretaries, such as Miss Elizabeth Dodge, Miss Mary Hopper, Miss Pomeroy and Miss Richardson, to speak to our own Association that month. The jubilee was closed by a consecration service at which we raised a free will offering of $20 for the Grace Dodge Memorial Fund. Our missionary fund is to be distributed in the following manner: $25 towards the tuition of our foreign student, $25 to help support our secretary in Buenos Aires, and $10 to be sent to the National Board for the conference fund for foreign students. We also sent $10 to Dr. John R. Mott for the struggling associations in the war zone.

We expect to have $90 for our Eagles Mere fund this year; and that means that we should send a good delegation that will bring back some good ideas and lots of enthusiasm for next year.

In addition to our weekly meetings, we held daily prayer meetings during the world's week of prayer, which were exceptionally well attended. And we have also had one Bible Class and two Mission Study Classes during the year.

THE WHITMER MUSICAL CLUB

The Whitmer Musical Club has had a prosperous year, with a membership of forty. There were interesting programs at each meeting following a definite arrangement of subjects. Under the auspices of the club a harpsichord recital was given by Miss Pelton-Jones of New York. It proved to be of great interest to the people of Pittsburgh as well as to the College. Pins were secured this year by the members. On April thirteenth the open meeting was held. There was a large attendance and the interest shown by the friends and members of the club was very gratifying.

OMEGA SOCIETY

The Omega Literary Society has spent a very delightful year studying contemporary English and American novelists, including Kipling, James, Wharton, Sedgwick and Bennett. The annual open meeting was held in the drawing room Thursday afternoon, November 18. An original play and three original stories were read, while two original poems were put to music by Mr. Whitmer and sung by Miss Kathryn Robb. The compositions were all the work of present members of the society. After the open meeting Miss Coolidge entertained the society at a delightful dinner. Five new members have been initiated during the year and they all give promise of the special abilities that will help the Omega ever "Onward."

GERTRUDE LEVIS FRAME.

DER DEUTSCHER VEREIN

The Deutscher Verein has been holding its regular monthly meetings this year, and they have been well attended. The programmes are interesting as well as instructive. The lives and best works of Goethe, Schiller, Heine and Heyse have been discussed. A social hour follows the program and a visitor might well think he had been suddenly transported to the Kaiser's kingdom for the conversation is purely German and a deaf ear is turned upon the slightest attempt to speak English. Fortunately we do not discuss war, and our gatherings therefore are peaceable. We commend increasing perseverance to all German students, for the goal is admittance to the Deutscher Verein of the Pennsylvania College for Women.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

The hearty co-operation of all the girls has been with the Student Government throughout the year. No radical changes have been made. We have been walking in the paths our worthy predecessors trod with a few minor deviations and abridgements to meet our own peculiar needs. The dues, for instance, have been raised to two dollars and a half, which includes one dollar for Student Government, one dollar for the Sorosis and fifty cents for the Athletic Association. With this increase in the dues the Student Government is able to send its president to the annual Student Government Conference. This is a great advantage for it brings Pennsylvania College for Women into touch with the other colleges, and thus keeps it informed as to the progress of general student activities and the various ways and methods for meeting and solving difficulties. The Student Government also sent twenty dollars to the Hindman School in Kentucky to help in its Christmas work among the mountain whites.

A new plan has been formulated for the Executive Committee of the Student Government and the Faculty Cabinet to meet together and talk over student affairs and the general welfare of the College. This plan was not inaugurated until well on in the second semester; but it proved so helpful that it was recommended that at least four of these meetings should be held every year.

THE SOROSIS

The Sorosis has had a very successful year; it need not blush for its record in the annals of 1915-16. Its aims and ideals were high; it desired better and greater things for itself, and set out earnestly to secure them. Although it has failed to realize some of its ambitions, yet it has the satisfaction of feeling that it has accomplished much toward a larger and a more dignified life.

It has grown both in size and in circulation. At present it is a magazine of no mean appearance and bearing, proud of its new binding and its better paper. In organization, also, the paper has undergone some change; this applies both to the arrangement of the material and to the organization of the work of the reporters. In May the constitution of the magazine was revised and passed upon by the student body. One of the changes made provides for an associate editor, personal assistant to the editor-in-chief.

The one aim, however, that has been paramount in the work of the year has been the raising of the literary standard. This applies not only to the literary department, to the stories, essays, poems that are published, but to the work done in the college news department as well. The effort has been made to maintain a certain dignity in all the departments by the application of a high literary standard throughout the paper.

The Sorosis has been attracting more and more the notice and the careful attention of other colleges. The work of some of our contributors has received the very favorable criticism of several of the best colleges in the country. We are glad of this. We would like to see The Sorosis recognized as in the very foremost rank of college literary publications.

DRAMATIC CLUB

This year the activities of the Dramatic Club have been even more numerous and interesting than before. The plan of electing members by general ballot and limiting the number of members to thirty has worked out even more satisfactorily than was expected. It has resulted in greater enthusiasm because every girl was vitally interested. No attempt was made to carry out monthly meetings and present regular programs. Two plays were presented. The first, "The Silver Thread," a children's play, by Constance Mackaye, created much interest both in the College and outside. Two afternoon performances were given and both days the auditorium was crowded. The proceeds of this play were given to the Seniors to help defray the expenses of their class play, the "Midsummer Night's Dream." In the Spring the Club presented two Irish plays by William Butler Yeats, "The Hour Glass" and "The Land of Heart's Desire." The Dramatic Club has also become affiliated with the Drama League and is able to enjoy the privileges of that organization. Late in the Spring a theatre party was given by the members. We feel that the year has been very successful.

GLEE CLUB

The Glee Club has had another successful year, under the competent direction of Prof. and Mrs. Mayhew. The membership, exceeding that in any year so far, was thirty-two. The joint concert was held January 14, 1916, with the Musical Clubs of Carnegie Institute of Technology. There was a most pleasing program followed by a reception and dance. The annual home concert of both musical clubs of the College was held April 14, 1916. Besides these concerts the club sang at the various special services during the year. The interest and co-operation on the part of the girls has been splendid and we can only hope for the future of the club the same loyalty which has been shown by its members in the past.

THE MANDOLIN CLUB

The Mandolin Club has had an unusually successful year under the excellent supervision of Miss Butterfield as coach. Miss Dorothy Stoeber, '17, has been a delightful and appreciated leader while Miss Josephine Paul, '18, was the manager. The club responded to many calls for music in the city and before the end of April had furnished music at the Sarah Heinz Settlement House, the Ralston High School, the Homeopathic Hospital, the Home for Aged People at Wilkinsburg, the Wimodausis Club, the Association for Collegiate Alumnae, several church affairs and private theatricals.

A joint concert was given in the Assembly Hall of the College by the musical clubs of the Pennsylvania College for Women and the Carnegie Institute of Technology on the evening of January 12. On April 14 a delightful annual home concert was given in Assembly Hall by the P. C. W. Glee and Mandolin Clubs.

The Mandolin Club is in a position to give a varied program, suitable for an entire afternoon or evening, as its membership includes soloists, both vocal and instrumental, readers and entertainers. From now on we are open to engagements of this nature.

Socially the club has had a most pleasant year. The leader entertained the entire club at a luncheon at her home in March. During the Spring vacation the Mandolin club gave a benefit "500" and tea at the home of Miss Betty Sheppard. "Spreads" and parties have provided much pleasure for the members. The music studied has been both classical and popular. The outlook for next year is unusually good.

COLLEGE ATHLETICS—1915-16

Tennis

The college year opened as usual, with the tennis tournament (doubles). By an act passed by the student government each girl is a member of the Athletic Association and must pay the fee of fifty cents. This act provides the association with much more money than previously and enabled the association to award to the winners in tennis silver loving cups. The tournament in singles will be played this spring and according to a well established custom, the winner will receive a silver loving cup for one year presented by a friend of the college.

Basket Ball

This year in basket ball was much more successful than last year. Dr. Acheson gave the girls permission to play outside teams and of course this aroused more interest and enthusiasm. Miss Lillie Lindsay was the college coach and came up to the school once every week and gave the team good hard practice. Although we won only three games out of six we are determined to win all next year.

Track

The girls are to have a track meet the first week after May Day. A great number of girls entered and as we have registered twelve events, we hope to have a fine meet.

Walking

Almost all the girls entered the walking contest, which will last four weeks. The college letters will be awarded to both a day and a house girl walking the greatest distance.

Swimming

Monday afternoons the girls went to the Y. W. C. A. swimming pool and if members of the P. C. W. Y. W. C. A., were privileged to a fifteen-cent ticket instead of a twenty-five cent one.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

JUNE—1917

It is a great pleasure to welcome to our ranks the class of 1917, and it is our earnest wish that a spirit of mutual helpfulness may develop between the association and yourselves, and that the ties which bind us to our College, to our Alumnae Association, and to our individual classes may prove to be "a threefold cord, not quickly broken."

Seven has been called the perfect number, and it has been a popular one in our Association, seven of the forty-four classes having had seven members each. But three—with one very personal exception—is a much more interesting one, and has figured prominently in mythology and in religious and secular history. The three Fates, three Graces, the Triple Alliance, the Trinity, the Three Christian Virtues—Faith, Hope, Love—instantly suggest themselves; also man's triple nature, physical, mental and spiritual, and to these let me add the three periods of time, the Past, the Present, the Future.

Forty to fifty years ago Longfellow's Psalm of Life loomed large in required memory work for elementary school grades, and it interested me to find it recently holding a similar place in the curriculum of a night school for adult foreigners. The poet's conclusion is "Past, Present, Future, these three, and the greatest of these is the Present." He concedes something to the Past when he suggests the inspiration to be gathered from the lives of the great and good who have become a part of that "dead Past"; but he is discouraging, to say the least, to the little ten-year-old dreamer whom he sternly orders to "trust no Future, howe'er pleasant." Possibly his attitude was a natural reaction from the religious ideas of that age which too often disregarded daily conduct while contemplating a distant heaven. It is my purpose to reverse the poet's order and to put the emphasis on the Future.

"Looking Backward," like grief, is a luxury to be indulged in but sparingly. It is even less profitable for mankind than it was for Lot's wife, for she at least was turned into salt, an almost indispensable article, while for us it is a deadly thing except as we draw inspiration or warning from what has gone before. It is the greatest possible foe to progress, for "Time makes ancient good uncouth."

On the other hand to "Act, act, in the living Present," one must have an intelligent purpose; and that also is bound to be one of three things: to revive what has been, to prevent change, or to enlarge and enrich what is to be. And surely few would deny that the last is the greatest. Wordsworth beautifully says

"Past and Future are the wings
On whose support harmoniously joined Moves the great spirit of human knowledge."

A Hebrew proverb declares, "Where there is no vision the people perish." Was not that what caused the so-called Dark Ages? Were people not living solely in the present without a thought of the rich possibilities of development within human souls? But look back into that misty past and see how here and there flashes like a beacon light some soul who perceived how "through the ages one eternal purpose runs"; who, "without halting, without rest," fixed his hopes on some far off distant goal, and "forgetting" the things "behind" was content to "press on." Such men and women always gathered about them some who would "follow the gleam"; and who can estimate the value of the total aggregate of such lives? Perhaps George Eliot had a similar thought in mind when she wrote: "That things are not so ill with you and me as they might have been is half owing to the number who lived faithfully a hidden life and rest in unvisited tombs." In the "Forward Look" is found the soul's true Fountain of Youth. You will remember that it was Youth who "by the vision splendid" was "on his way attended," and that when he "saw it fade away into the commonplace" he had become a man.

It further makes for strength and ennobling of character. According to Carlyle "The tendency to persevere, to persist in spite of hindrances, discouragements, and impossibilities, it is this that in all things distinguishes the strong soul from the weak." Gifford Pinchot is to my mind nearer the truth when he says: "The essential things which distinguish one individual from another, which give one man a higher place among his fellows and another, a lower, are just two: First of all perserverance—the ability to keep everlastingly at it; and, secondly, imagination or vision—the ability to see beyond the present moment and to understand that the work at hand reaches beyond the present.” But again let me reverse the order of the firstly and secondly; is not the perseverance of which both men speak the direct result of the vision, “the ability to see beyond the present” and so to “understand that the work at hand is worth while?” It is written of Moses,” “He endured (or persevered) as seeing Him who is invisible.” And of the long roll-call of other heroes the same author states: “All these died in the faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them and embraced them.”

Again, those whose present actions are directed by this “ability to see beyond the present,” achieve things and are thereby encouraged to further perserverance. They find “That which they have done but earnest of the things which they shall do,” and achievement is the reason for, the goal of action and the most soul-satisfying thing in the world. No argument is needed in support of this statement, for it is something which lies within the experience of each one of us. Nearly fifty years ago the young pastor of a suburban church dared to dream of a little college for conservative Pittsburgh. With the aid and co-operation of influential men associated with him he soon saw this dream become a fact. Four years later the first class was graduated, to become in time the vanguard of this association. We can judge of the temper and calibre of this first class by the unfailing interest and faithfulness of the one who is in our midst. Today we number forty-five classes and three hundred and fifty-nine members. I earnestly call upon each one of you to “dream dreams and see visions.”

Let your imaginations have free play; see your Alma Mater the peer of any woman's college in the land; see the well-equipped modern buildings set on some other, but equally beautiful, hill top; see five hundred, one thousand, two thousand students thronging her doors, with as many graduated annually as four decades have totalled! “Dip into the future far as human eye can see” and behold her a century, two, three centuries old; the first woman's university and a mighty power in the Western Hemisphere. And, in the enthusiasm of such a vision, “Act! Act! in the living Present.” Be ready when the call comes to support the Trustees of the college and our President, who is a leader worthy of your utmost confidence. For your encouragement remember that "Pittsburgh Promotes Progress," and, that when she is convinced of her opportunity, only the best will satisfy her.

"Not in vain the distance beckons, forward, forward let us range."

MARY ACHESON SPENCER.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER

To the Alumnae Association of Pennsylvania College for Women:

It affords me pleasure to extend through the pages of The Recorder a word of greeting to the Alumnae Association of the College. Your President, Mrs. Spencer, has asked me to make a statement relative to the plans for improvement that the Board has under contemplation. This I shall do verbally at your approaching meeting. The academic work of the College has progressed this year in a most satisfactory manner. The organization of the Faculty—to various committees of which have been assigned special duties—has proved a very helpful administrative feature. One of these committees is now at work upon a revision of the entire Course of Study which will bring the institution more fully in line with others of similar character throughout the country. One important change has been made, namely, the adoption of a six-day instead of a five-day schedule as has heretofore obtained. This was made necessary by the large number of classes to be handled and the limitation in point of class room and laboratory facilities. The arrangement seems to be most pleasing to the students, as it distributes their work and throws less strain on any one day than has been the case hitherto.

We of course are deeply regretting the departure of Miss Coolidge, who closes eleven years of brilliant service on behalf of the institution. Her loyal support to the present administration and her wise counsel in all matters pertaining to the College welfare will be sadly missed in the coming year. The best wishes of all go with Miss Coolidge as she returns to her old home. The College is most fortunate in securing as Miss Coolidge's successor, Miss Florence K. Root, formerly Professor at Smith College and at one time connected with Pennsylvania College for Women as teacher of the Classics.

There are also several other members of the Faculty to sever their connection with us this year. Miss Randolph of the German Department, Miss Abbott, Physical Director; Miss Allen, Assistant in French; Miss Margery Stewart, Assistant in Chemistry, and Miss Lovejoy, who has carried such successful work in Dilworth Hall. Our best wishes go with each of these as they enter new fields of labor or go to take up graduate work in various institutions.

The outlook for the coming year in point of enrollment is gratifying. The situation which the war has placed us in has not contributed to our problems in this regard as far as we can now anticipate. Other phases of our work I shall take up with the Alumnae Association when opportunity is given me to speak to you.

Cordially yours,

JOHN C. ACHESON.

ANNUAL MESSAGE

The years go so quickly that it is always a surprise to discover that it is time for the Alumnae Recorder. The year has been a broken one in my own work, owing to my leave of absence for the first semester, passed in my own home in Massachusetts. That I was not idle will be apparent to the many housewives of the alumnae when I say that my mother and I spent most of the time in house repairing.

In October I had the honor to be a delegate from the Pittsburgh Branch of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae at a conference in Boston. The evening meeting at the College Club was given entirely to the subject, 'How Can an Alumnae Association Best Serve its College?' The speakers were President Pendleton of Wellesley, President Woolley of Mt. Holyoke and President Briggs of Radcliffe. Naturally, I said at once, "This is my opportunity for the Alumnae Recorder," and I am going to give you the abstract which I dictated immediately upon my return home and in which I endeavored to reproduce the leading ideas of the three speakers on this subject.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Miss Pendleton, the first speaker, made the following points: First, the alumna of a college should interpret the college and college life to the community in which she lives. Second, she should interpret the sentiment of the community back to the college. Third, an alumna should visit the college often to keep in touch with its latest developments. The alumnae stands for the college in the eyes of the community and it is only through them, what they are, and what they do that the college becomes known. There is nothing so encouraging to the authorities of a college as to find it well spoken of when they go into any community.

Again in turn it is only through the alumnae that the college authorities can find out what different communities think of the college, its atmosphere, its methods and its ideals. The alumnae should inform themselves correctly in regard to the life of the college, when possible by personal visits. They should be able to surround the college with an encouraging and enthusiastic atmosphere, realizing that they themselves are the real college and responsible for its reputation, its life and its continued usefulness.

President Briggs spoke of the essential duty of the alumnae to do definite service as members of the Board of Trustees, or important committees which guide the policy of the college and bring it its support. He spoke of the need of the alumnae to uphold the intellectual life of the college by more expression of appreciation of its prime importance and its influence upon their own lives.

Miss Woolley said that the alumnae should assist in the physical, intellectual and moral life of the college. First, its physical life—the alumnae should always be interested in keeping the college equipment efficient and beautiful. This should not be done in the spirit of paying back what had been done for them and feeling the obligation ended when they had repaid the actual cost of their education over and above tuition rates, but rather it should be the interest of a daughter toward her own home which she desires to keep as comfortable and beautiful as possible because it is her home and her interest and affection are there. Secondly, Miss Woolley made a plea for more talk on the part of the alumnae of the intellectual life of the college and cited illustrations to show how little discussion there is in either men's or women's clubs of this side of their college life. She emphasized how greatly it would encourage the faculty to have definite expressions on the part of alumnae of what they had gained intellectually through the curriculum courses, and that we shall not have right standards of intellectual work until this time comes. Lastly, she pleaded also for expression on the part of the alumnae of their spiritual debt to the college, of what they had gained in the finer things. Doubtless this is much appreciated by the alumnae but the appreciation is not sufficiently expressed to make the largest reaction upon the college life.

At the Biennial Conference in Washington I had the honor to extend an invitation to the National Association of Collegiate Alumnae to hold a Biennial Convention in Pittsburgh, and we are hoping that it will take place in 1921, bringing a notable gathering to Pittsburgh to emphasize the education of women. I always take pleasure at all these conventions in representing Pennsylvania College for Women, desiring to have it become as well known as possible and hoping that we may soon be admitted to membership. The central theme of the convention was the new openings for women in government work. Some of these openings in science and social lines are most interesting, but the men speakers on the subject, without exception, stated plainly that since most of these positions are more or less connected with politics, women cannot hope to enter largely into the best places without suffrage.

In New York, in March, I represented the Collegiate Vocational Bureau of Pittsburgh at the first conference of the so-called Central Committee, which is to consist of one representative from the well-organized bureaus of the country to formulate national policies and to bring about a larger co-operation between the bureaus of the country which now extend across the continent. I felt proud to have Pittsburgh a charter member of the national committee. The consensus of opinion of the Central Committee was that the Vocational Bureaus can best serve their country in this crisis by keeping very strictly to their own lines of work, namely, to furnish trained women for positions which may be vacated by men called to the colors. Perhaps we have "come to the kingdom for such a time as this."

In regard to the College, the academic improvement and social life continues to go on. It seems to me that this has been our most successful year, by academic and social standards. With the closing of Dilworth Hall this month, the College will be free for the first time to put its entire equipment on to the college life. This makes possible a systematic six-day schedule, a reorganization of the social life, and larger freedom along academic lines.

It is with regret that I close my service to Pennsylvania College for Women. The eleven years have been filled with many demands and obligations, with varied experiences both sad and glad, but with never failing loyalty on the part of the Alumnae, and friendships never to be forgotten. Stevenson said that he made his successive friendships the milestones of his life, and for my mother and myself our college friendships are such indeed. We hope to come back to renew them as often as possible and beg you not to forget us when you come to "Old New England." We are only fifty miles from Boston by as many trains and trolleys, not to mention a wonderful state road for automobiles—in Fitchburg, Mass. That sounds so much like Pittsburgh you surely cannot forget it and a warm welcome awaits you, for my mother and I expect to cultivate the domestic virtues, renew our community interests and keep open house for grandchildren and friends. But I shall not be really happy until I know that the good things for which we have all worked and prayed so long for our college have materialized in buildings and endowment, as a foundation on which may rise that Pennsylvania College for Women which shall realize our dreams. May it come soon and may we "all be there to see."

CORA HELEN COOLIDGE.

OUR DEAN

Dean Coolidge is leaving the College! Those to whom this announcement comes as a surprise can, from their own feelings, imagine the consternation with which her resignation was received one year ago by the Board of Trustees. It seemed as if they COULD NOT accept it, and she, fairly pushed to the wall, reluctantly consented to substitute a six months' leave of absence. This, however, but strengthened her conviction that her first duty was to her mother, and the Trustees have been forced to accept the inevitable.

Miss Coolidge leaves the College carrying with her the confidence and admiration of every member of that Board. Because her steady hand was at the helm when Dr. Lindsay was so suddenly snatched from us, the College itself scarcely felt the shock. And, during the period in which she was Acting President, her clear vision and sound judgment as shown in her reports to the Board, led them to offer to her the Presidency. The financial end of it did not, however, appeal to her. She bears with her also the confidence, affection, and gratitude of our Alumnae Association, in which she has always taken a helpful interest. To the community at large Miss Coolidge and "The College" are so absolutely one and inseparable that for many the latter may even cease to be when she has gone from Pittsburgh.

Had Dr. Lindsay done nothing else, his selection of a dean would have been to him an everlasting memorial.

It has been my privilege to know Miss Coolidge not only as a member both of this Association and as a Trustee of the College, but as a College Club woman, a fellow-member on that Board, and as a friend; I therefore know whereof I speak. She has given to this institution eleven years of unmeasured service—"pressed down and running over." A review of the Recorders for the past decade will suggest the following among her many achievements: Literary lectures both within and without the college halls; innumerable visits to preparatory and high schools, and the entertaining of teachers from same; attendance at the inaugurations of presidents at Wilson and Washington and Jefferson colleges; representing Pennsylvania College for Women at the one hundredth, seventy-fifth, and fiftieth anniversaries of Allegheny college, Mt. Holyoke, and Vassar respectively; introducing into the college student government and a Young Women's Christian Association; recommending secretaries for our classes and booths at the Pittsburgh Expositions, and enlisting our aid and co-operation in bringing lecturers to the college. She was a prime mover, if not the originator of the College Club of Pittsburgh, which had its inception within our walls; and it was she alone who saw that club's opportunity and who finally persuaded the members to undertake the work of the Vocational Bureau of which they are so justly proud. Within the past few months she attended the first national gathering of Vocational Bureaus; and later was a delegate to the biennial meeting of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae. And running through each and all of these many activities like a thread of gold has been one single purpose: "For the sake of your college," to quote her own words in the Recorder for 1916.

Eight years ago, in giving my first and only toast, to "Our Dean," I used the initials of Miss Coolidge's name to represent the possible characteristics which had attracted Dr. Lindsay to her; and, from a great variety, let the C. H. C. stand for Common sense, Humaness, and Character. The passing years which have brought to me a larger knowledge and intimacy which have ripened into a close friendship, have in nowise changed my opinion, and it gives me genuine pleasure to pay this tribute to one whose contributions to the life and welfare of our Alma Mater—often under almost impossible conditions and circumstances—have been incalculable.

MARY ACHESON SPENCER.

THE HELEN E. PELLETREAU SCHOLARSHIP HISTORY FOR TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

The younger members of the Alumnae have frequently asked me how we raised the money for the scholarship fund; others may remember more than I do, but for the benefit of the ones that do not know, I would like to give a little history of the work.

Mrs. William S. Miller and I have read over all we could find in the Recorder about the Scholarship committee; we found a quarter of a century has passed since the founding of the Helen E. Pelletreau Scholarship.

This is our twenty-fifth anniversary; perhaps it might be better to say that the Alumnae Association was nineteen years old when we assumed this responsibility.

The inspiration came from a member of the association finding Miss Pelletreau in tears over saying good-bye to a student, whose father had met with financial reverses, which made it necessary for the daughter to give up her college career.

The following June, 1891, the suggestion was made to the Alumnae Association, and a resolution was passed to establish an aid fund to assist young students with their college education, and name it in honor of Helen E. Pelletreau, then President of the college.

The first committee consisted of seven members: Rachel

C. Aiken, Chairman; Elizabeth Hillman, Treasurer; Susan Ewing, Secretary; Janet Lockhart, Elsie Rankin, Jane Clark Jennie McCance. Miss Thurston resigned early in the year Mrs. W. S. Miller, Mrs. Warmcastle and Florence Holmes were added to the committee June, 1892.

The first venture to raise money was a benefit February 2, 1892, a concert by Madam Marie Decca. Fifty dollars was realized from this effort of the committee.

The same year a subscription book was started with the motto "Give little and give often."

In June, 1893, we were able to report $324 in the treasury.

At this meeting, Fanny Porter and Lillian Pitcairn were added to the committee. The Alumnae Association voted us $50 from their treasury by way of encouragement. The same year we gave a scholarship tea at the college with Maida Craigen and Mr. Paulding from the Keene Theatre Company as the attraction. From this a substantial sum was realized.

November 3, 1894, we had a "musical soiree" at the residence of Mrs. Warmcastle, quite the most protentious effort yet. We furnished a high class program and asked the then exhorbitant price of 75 cents for our tickets. The audience was large and fashionable and the public became interested, so it was good advertising. One generous friend of the hostess gave $25 for her ticket, and one man thought his button hole flower worth $5. So elated were we with our success that February 16, 1895, we brought Mrs. Fanny Richardson Lupton (a former teacher of expression) all the way from Cincinnati to give a reading in Shady Side Church Chapel. This was a delightful evening and the minutes record, "A financial and social success."

April 6, 1895, the University Glee Club gave a concert for our benefit which aded $50 to our fund.

In June, 1895, we had the large sum of $1,214.56. At this meeting we voted to adopt a constitution and by-laws presented by Mrs. Stillwell, and the association approved of our plan to invest $1,300 in a mortgage, which had been secured by Mr. Edwin L. Porter, then our official attorney and adviser; also that we advertise an offer of $50 aid to a worthy student in the college.

Miss Rachel C. Aiken was appointed trustee of the invested funds and has served in that capacity ever since, keeping the money well invested in 6% mortgages under the legal advice of Mr. Edwin L. Porter, Mr. James McC. Miller, Mr. W. S. Miller, and Mr. James R. Miller. These kind friends have generously in turn donated their advice and services to the committee.

This same year the scholarship committee tendered their resignation with the suggestion that in the future the committee should consist of one or more representatives from each class to the number of thirty members.

The association accepted this suggestion and a new committee was appointed as follows: Mrs. W. S. Miller, Chairman; Mrs. Arthur V. Davis, Secretary; Miss Bessie Hillman, Treasurer; Rachel C. Aiken, Elsie Rankin, Kate Carnahan, Ella Smith, Elizabeth Riggs, Eleanor Stevenson, Sallie Wallace, Margaret Easton, Eliza Bryant, Hettie Boyle, Jeannette Barbour, Annie Kearns, Jennie Wightman, Rebecca Renshaw, Jennie McCance, Mary Breed, Jennie Clark, Mrs. Warmcastle, Mrs. McKnight, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. McCune, Mrs. Huselton, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Pardee, Mrs. Chislett, Mrs. Decker, Mrs. Spencer.

Early in September a meeting of this large committee was called to prepare for a fair at the Kenmawr Hotel in November. The scheme grew so rapidly it began to look as though the hotel would not hold the bazar. Those of you who worked will remember the weekly sewings in preparation, and in addition to the usual features of such fairs, there were such unique ventures as a ballroom, a table of dressmakers' models in the doll booth, a celebrities table with contributions from artists, literary lights, musicians, and dramatists. After having been exhibited, these donations were sold to the highest bidders. One choice piece was a volumn of Oliver W. Holmes' poems, which brought $60. On the title page Mr. Holmes had written his autograph, with the following words:

Deal gently with us ye who read;
Our largest hope is unfulfilled,
The promise still outruns the deed;
The tower but not the spire we build.

Everybody wanted the drawing of a Brownie by Palmer Cox, and also "Hamlet," the doll donated by Julia Marlowe. It makes us tired when we remember how we worked, but we were fully rewarded as the treasurer reported nearly $1,400 to be added to fund. This same banner year the officers of the committee compiled and published the Scholarship Cook Book. An addition of 500 copies was sold at $1 per copy. The cost of the publication was defrayed by the advertisements.

At the June meeting, 1895, we reported besides the $1,300 mortgage a cash balance of $1,595.11.

In June, 1896, the treasurer reported $1,715.33. New members added to the committee were: Georgie Negley, Lydia Murdoch, Eva Bard, Sarah Hamil, Florence Aull, Elizabeth Burt.

In June, 1897, the treasurer reported in bank $1,352.93, and we now had three mortgages, No. 1, $1,300; No. 2, $1,700; No. 3, $1,200. Officers appointed this year were: Fanny Porter, Chairman; Lydia Murdoch, Secretary; Jeanette Barbour, Treasurer. Having exhausted all ways and means of raising money, Mrs. Taylor suggested that each member of the committee endeavor to earn $5 and herself she advertised to do fine laundry work, table linen, etc. This is the year that we also reported results from "A glimpse of Holland," an entertainment at the house of Mrs. Edwin L. Porter—who that was a participant will ever forget that perfect Dutch kitchen? And I have often wondered where the Porter family lived, so completely did we take possession of their house. Rollin Reed was one of the drawing cards. We realized $350, but Mrs. Porter was not satisfied, so we had a University Glee and Mandolin concert in March and made $370 more.

The trustees of the college, appreciating our good work, now offered two scholarships to high school students of highest standing in the city schools. The Colloquium Club, wishing to help with this good work, have given us from time to time several generous donations. The Alumnae Association we are grateful to for their frequent annual donation of $50.

In 1899 we gave aid to the extent of $200 and took another mortgage of the amount of $900.

In 1900 treasurer and trustee reported a total amount of $5,349.02. Now that we were almost to the $6,000 mark, we decided that amount inadequate, so we must keep on working. Mrs. Charles L. Taylor was appointed chairman, Miss Marguerite Bonnett, treasurer.

In 1902 the total amount reported at the annual meeting was $5,921.63. The Decade Club this year gave the committee $370.

In 1902 we were over the $6,000 mark, and from this time to the present our progress has been slow. The Alumnae were working to raise the endowment for the college and $10,000 furnishing fund, so we never had the courage to come before the public since.

In 1903 we voted to establish a sinking fund, to be kept in a separate account, and thus available for emergencies, caused by changing of mortgages, etc. We decided to take each year $50 from the interest. Our reserve fund at present is $175 and each year there is available, after $50 is added to the reserve fund, about $425 for scholarship purposes.

We have assisted 24 students with their college work, 14 of whom have graduated and are now members of the association.

It has been our policy not to give the names of those whom we have assisted. Since Mrs. Taylor's term of office the work has been carried on by Mrs. W. S. Miller, Miss Eleanor Stevenson and Miss Rebecca Renshaw as chairmen, Miss Wightman and Miss Stevenson as treasurers. Miss Jane B. Clark for ten years has been our faithful secretary.

We have expended in these 25 years $8,042.50 and could have used more.

Shall we be satisfied with our present methods or shall we make one supreme effort to secure the balance necessary to make our fund $10,000 this anniversary year, also the year of the passing away of the dear one, in whose honor we have named and founded this work? What say you?

RACHEL C. AIKEN, Trustee

This history was read at the annual meeting of the Alumnae June, 1916, by the trustee. At that meeting it was moved and seconded to have this history published in the Recorder June, 1917. A committee was appointed to raise the balance as a memorial to our beloved Miss Helen E. Pelletreau. The committee's report will be found in this Recorder.

OUR NEW DEAN

As we go to print, we have just learned that Miss Florence Root has been appointed Dean of the College to succeed Miss Coolidge. Miss Root formerly spent three years at the College and for the past year has been at Smith doing work for a Ph.D. degree.

EDITORIAL

These are days of unrest and uncertainty for nations and for individuals, and if we Americans ever needed our American optimism and cheerfulness, it is now. A national calamity unites a people, and in addition it softens our feelings toward all our fellow-men. Some of us have not, as yet, been closely touched by the hand of war, and the call has not yet broken the ranks of our families, but our hearts are full of a fellow feeling of pride as well as of sadness for those who have given their all.

In years gone by, war was considered the work, duty and province of soldiers—not so in our present age—every citizen is a soldier. The one on the firing line is giving himself, body and brain, to his country in one specific phase of war. But modern warfare has many phases, and needs many others besides fighters, important as they are. For the man at the front is pitifully helpless, unless those who should stand behind him are doing it to the very letter. There must be men, but, too, there must be ammunition, there must be transportation, there must be the cunningly devised inventions, that are the work of the creative genius, there must be money, and there must be food. Surely a task for every one, even if it be but to raise a basket-full of vegetables in one's own back yard, and thus take the family out of the market for one day, and so increase the supply.

The nation needs workers, and it needs cheerful workers. It needs some to perform great tasks, but it needs equally as much, a great multitude to perform the small tasks, seemingly ineffective in themselves, but in reality the ground work of the whole national structure. We cannot but remember how Carlyle preached the gospel of the dignity of work and the disgrace of idleness, and so we emphatically shout with him:

“Produce! Produce! Were it but the pitifulest infinitesimal fraction of a product, produce it, in God's name! 'Tis the utmost thou hast in thee; out with it, then. Up, up! Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy whole might, Work while it is Today; for the night cometh, wherein no man can work.”

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1875

The passing of the years has scattered the members of the class of '75 rather widely over the country, and it is somewhat difficult to keep in touch with everyone, and so we regret that some items of news have not found their way into the Recorder at the proper time. The death of Mr. A. R. Wells, husband of Mary McIntosh Wells, '75, who died almost four years ago, was not recorded at the time, and we desire to mention it now in this number.

CLASS OF 1876.

The class of 1876 sends greetings, but reports few changes or happenings.

Lydia C. Gracie (Mrs. Edward H. Peek) spent the last year in Seattle, Washington, with her sister, Miss Helen Gracie.

CLASS OF 1883

The class of '83 were gratified in the election of one of our number, Mary Acheson Spencer, as President of the Alumnae Association. I echo the sentiment of each member of the class when I say that we have always been proud of Mary, who fills gracefully every position in life to which she is called. Her little grandchildren, Henry, Charles, Jr., Spencer, William and Mary Acheson Curry, children of the class baby, Adeline Spencer Curry, are a great source of joy to Mary. Her eldest son, Marcus, who is just completing a course in the ministry at Union Theological Seminary, and, at the same time, filling a nearby pulpit, was married during the past year to Ella Ross, daughter of the president of the seminary, and Mary is much pleased with her new daughter. The engagement of her daughter, Mary Wilson Spencer, to Mr. Francis Nimick of Pittsburgh has just been announced.

I wish all the members of '83 could have enjoyed the delightful partial reunion of our class which some of us enjoyed the afternoon of February 28, when Rachel Aiken entertained us informally at 4 o'clock tea.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The occasion was the presence in the city of Jennie Jackson. We all know the delightful hospitality which no one understands better how to dispense than Rachel, always loving, thoughtful and kind. Mary, Rachel, Jennie and I had a fine time talking over the days of our youth, and I must assure you that each one of the absent classmates was remembered in our conversation.

When Jennie Jackson came in, accompanied by her delightful cousin, Miss Magoffin, she looked so fresh and youthful in a very becoming new spring hat, it seemed as though only a decade must have passed since we were college girls together at the P. C. W. You all remember Jennie speaking of her aunt, Mrs. Magoffin of Mercer. She has come to Pittsburgh to reside, together with her daughter and her son, Dr. Montrose Magoffin. Now that Pittsburgh holds a fresh attraction for Jennie, we hope to see her often. One of the pleasant features of our memorable afternoon was when Rachel's dear mother came in to touch the climax of our enjoyment with her gentle, cordial greeting.

Blanche Evans Rust has been enjoying much better health during the past year. The serious illness of her husband made it necessary for her daughter, Helen McLure Powers, to reply to my request for items for the Recorder. More recent news brings the sad intelligence of Mr. Rust's death, after a brief illness. Our hearts go out in sympathy with Blanche in the breaking of this very happy union, and our prayer is that, even in her grief, she may be able to realize the unfailing support of the Everlasting being.

A very interesting letter from Nellie Neyman Haines tells of her life in Butler: "We are a family of six. Helen is twenty-four, Robert is twenty-two, and with the two younger children, John, fourteen, and Emma, twelve, we are a pretty lively family, but we would not have it otherwise. I have had a good portion of outside work this winter, being chairman of the music committee of the Woman's Club, providing the musical program for each meeting has meant work, which, added to church work and social duties, does keep one busy. I know we are all glad that Nellie, with all her home cares, has kept up her music, in which she excelled, and the tone of her letter rings with the melody of a happy, useful life.

From far off San Francisco comes a letter of more than ordinary interest from Anna Lysle McLain, giving an account of their winter's trip: "We have just returned from a trip to Hilo and Honolulu. We have seen and enjoyed many strange and interesting things in those tropical islands. The volcano at Hilo was weird, uncanny and terrible, particularly at night. The cane fields and the water flume by which the cane is carried to the sugar mills shows thrift and industry. The scenic railroad is a wonderful feat of engineering, and takes you through the mountains; the waterfalls are wonderful, and the views beyond my powers to describe.

The city and harbor at Honolulu are beautiful, it is surely a land of tropical fruits and flowers, foliage and torrents; it rains every day, and usually three hundred inches in a year. The view from the "Pali," and the trip around the island is beautiful beyond description. The acres of pineapples are cultivated like a perfect garden, and I think they are raising enough for the world. The rice bogs are the most beautiful green, and you see the rice in every stage of cultivation. The cocoanut palms grow to wonderful height, bananas grow there, but they are small. The coral gardens are interesting to see. The hotels are as good as you find in the States, the people are friendly and hospitable. The native Hiwaiians are of full stature and make a good appearance, they are ambitious and intensely loyal to the United States. They have good schools and colleges. English alone is taught, and I believe they have a great future. They will make American citizens of whom we shall be proud. They have a fine school for the native boys and girls which was endowed by Mrs. Bishop, a member of the royal family. They are taught everything in this school. I hope to see you at Alumnae."

Our pleasant memories of Althea Bilderback Harden stir within us an interest in her family. Her husband, Mr. George P. Harden, died November 2, 1914. Of her six children, two little daughters preceded Althea to the Homeland. Her eldest son, Ralph C. Harden, 29 years of age, was married June 11, 1916, to Marie Englemann, a very talented musical artist of Chicago, where they reside. Horace B. Harden, the second son, 20 years of age, was also married June 11, 1916, to Miss Anna R. Dickey of Spearfish, South Dakota, and they, too, are living in Chicago Althea Louise Harden, named for her mother, is now 16 years of age, and George P. Harden, the youngest son, 13 years, both reside with their father's sister, Mrs. A. A. Franzheim, in Steubenville, Ohio.

We have just received word from Anna McCullugh Ogden of the death of her husband, September 3, 1915. Mr. Ogden's death was very sudden, as Anna says they had just returned from an automobile trip, when he was taken ill, and after four days passed away. Anna is still living in Greensburg, but spent the winter in Florida.

As the fleeting years hasten by, to many an Alumna, eligible to a record on these pages, comes the thought with startling force, that no great achievement has marked her busy life; perhaps not even the rosy anticipations for service which Commencement Day held have been realized. Let all such take courage as we grasp the incentive of that Divine message, the sole condition of which can be met by the humblest: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a Crown of Life."

GEORGINA G. NEGLEY, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1888

The class of 1888 has no items of interest to report to fellow-alumnae, but sends greetings to all.

CLASS OF 1892

This June marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the graduation of the class of '92, and so swiftly and so quietly have the years sped by that we have hardly noted the successive milestones that marked their passing.

There are seven of us, scattered in four different States of the Union. All our hearts beat a little faster as we think of the old college days, and then of the intervening years in which both sunshine and shadow have been woven into the patterns of our lives.

One by one the dear home circles of our school years have been broken and this year, with sorrow and sympathy for Etta, we record the passing on September 3, 1916, of her dear mother, Mrs. William T. Easton.

To all of us the mysterious shadow land is nearer and dearer than it was twenty-five years ago.

This year through all our thoughts runs the heavy minor chord of war and we are fearful of the future and the sacrifice it may require.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Maurice Trimble, Jr., is enrolled in the provisional battalion at Princeton and John Barker is among the boys taking military training at Shadyside Academy.

Robert Flack, John and James Hilland, William and John Trimble are a little under the age for military training.

Of the daughters, Mary Trimble is a student at our own college, Mary Hill graduates from high school this June and Harriet Barker is a junior at the Peabody High School.

Hannah Langdon in New York City writes that her thoughts are with her classmates and she hopes to be with us in June.

Sara Millholland, in her home near Norfolk, is spending her time in devoted care of her mother. She is full of ambitions and her letters are just as bright and breezy as ever.

Nettie Flack is one of the faithful, loyal ones who is always in her place at the college on Alumnae Day. Etta is deeply interested in the success of the Pittsburgh Vocational Bureau, of which she has recently been re-elected treasurer.

Sarah Trimble has given up most of her outside interests this winter on account of Mr. Trimble's long, serious illness.

Carrie is farther away from us than ever, for this year Mr. Hill accepted a charge at Richmond, Ind.

CLASS OF 1897

Twenty years seems a long time, and yet the girls of '97 are not as much scattered as many of the smaller classes. The two who are away are widely separated—Carrie Eggers in New York City and Mary Christy Irwin in Texas, but the other six are all in or around Pittsburgh.

Harriet McCarty and Edith Stockton are both in Sewickley, Harriet having charge of the Public Library and Edith teaching in the Grant School. She was at Cornell last summer taking a course in nature study and in May was honored by being sent as a delegate to the kindergarten convention in Boston.

Sara Hillman is most enthusiastic and successful with her suffrage work.

The three married girls in Pittsburgh are busy with the home duties and one of the daughters, Margaret Hannah, is studying Latin under Miss Hamilton of our college days.

Mary Mackey Boland has not been able to spend as much time with her music as she would like, but hopes to do so when her small son and daughter are a little older.

Matilda Milligan Fisher's wedding anniversary so often conflicts with her alumnae Day that she has been able to be with us but a few times.

We are glad to be able to enclose greetings from the ones away and most heartily re-echo their sentiments that we would love to have had them with us for a complete reunion.

From the Bible School in New York Carrie writes: "How I would enjoy seeing all the girls at the Alumnae dinner, but my vacation does not come early enough in the summer. New York is certainly a bee-hive of work, and I am not sure that I enjoy the constant hum, though I do love the intimate contact with the many lines of Christian activity that are in operation."

Mary Christy Irwin has one daughter eleven years old, who has made a record for herself in never having been tardy nor absent since she started to school. Mary says in her letter, which was written in March: "While things are very quiet along the border at present, there is no telling what day something might happen. We had a very strenuous summer and every one was on a strain, for after the guardsmen were ordered here and all supplies so bought up for them we were afraid we might be caught short on foodstuffs and besides reports said it was the hottest, driest summer in thirty years. I do wish I could be home in June and see all you girls again, but hardly think it will be possible, but you have my love and best wishes for success."

CLASS OF 1894.

Ninety-four has one new baby this year, Lillian Jane Fulton, born October 26, 1916, and claimed by her mother to be absolutely the best baby that ever was.

Sorrow has come to two of our members since our last reunion and the hearts of all the class go out to them in sympathy. May Krepps Holding has suffered a double loss in the death of her mother February 1, and of her brother James, less than two months later.

Last September Sue Riddle Paine lost her father after a long illness. Dr. Riddle's death comes as a special loss to our class, as he preached our Baccalaureate sermon.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1901

Mary Bruce of New York attended our fifteenth reunion at the college last June, and our circle of five members would have been complete, had not Maud Taylor, on a flying visit to the East last summer, arrived in Pittsburgh a few days too late to be present.

This winter has been an anxious one for Carrie Kim, as her mother has passed through a long illness, but the last report of her state of health is quite encouraging.

CLASS OF 1902

The class of 1902 this year celebrates its fifteenth anniversary. From the view point of Commencement Day, fifteen years seems an aeon, but looking back, one wonders whither the swift years have fled. We have all reached that stage of comfortable middle life when we can wear our hats over one ear, or jauntily on the back of the head with entire equanimity; when overshoes and other prophylactic measures cease to be regarded with the scorn of youth.

We have one shining piece of news to tell and it is that one more man has found the one woman in the world among our number. Her name is Mary A. Shrom and the astute and fortunate man is Mr. Maurice C. Gay. We all hope that the subject of this chapter of their life will be "And they lived happily ever after."

Annie Montgomery Young and her husband had the pleasure of helping entertain Dr. Brashear on his recent visit to Honolulu. From the middle West comes the sound of riot because the secretary scandalously, though inadvertantly, addresses mail to Mrs. John D. Fuller under the name of Miss Helen E. Sherrard. The Secretary is convinced of her guilt and the enormity of her crime when she receives the offending envelope and a picture of Mrs. Fuller's baby.

It seems each year as if no story of the class of 1902 could even be interesting without a word concerning our very finest. Like Lady Mary Montague, our Mary Blair possesses the gift of making dull things gay and sad things tolerable, and whatever she may have missed of the things which we all count so essential to happiness in life, she seems not to need. She is a true artist and has made of her life an exquisite thing, wherein enters a degree of tolerance and sympathy and unselfishness to which few attain.

This year has done things to all of us. Some of us have lost parts of our anatomy and know the wisdom of having our thousand dollars ready for the satisfaction of predatory medical men. Some of us have been ill and some sad, but the sick are recovering and we hope the sad will soon be happy. Our children are thriving, our vocational members are happy in their respective callings, our housekeepers, married and single, are prosecuting their labors and persecuting themselves. A round-robin letter keeps us in touch with one another and serves to strengthen those friendships begun so many years ago amid the pleasant ways of our alma mater.

CLASS OF 1903

Owing to the illness of our class secretary, the fate of the class letter lies in my hands. As we happen to be a class which sees little of one another and hears less, my news proves to be mostly a record of births and deaths and this year our sadnesses outnumber our joys. The very sudden death of Mr. Smith, husband of Jennie McSheny Smith, while spending their spring vacation in Pittsburgh, was a great shock to us all. This will mean Jennie's coming back to live with us again for which we are all glad, but we regret the sad circumstances.

As for the others, Anne Hunter is now a member of the Schenley High School Faculty. Anna Myra is busy with her new daughter Kathryn; Eleanor has just helped carry out a very successful national convention of the Drama League; Mary writes that her latest baby is the very best one yet; Hilda has given up the greater part of her playground work and is now secretary in one of the city schools. As for the others, we hope the old saying is still true that no news is good news and that they are at least enjoying good health and happiness.

HILDA R. SADLER.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1904

This year has brought great sorrow to one member of our class.

In April, Mrs. D. P. Thomas, mother of Helen Thomas Larimer, after several years of patient suffering, was called to her home beyond. Mrs. Thomas spend the winter in Florida in quest of health, but was taken seriously ill while there. We are glad to know that she was spared to her family until she reached home and that they were together at the last.

The members of the class continue their manifold duties either within or without their homes.

Nancy Blair is still finding the days full in loving service to her loved ones. She is the self-sacrificing member of our class and a constant example of patience and unselfishness.

Elizabeth Carpenter Deerborn and Helen Thomas Larimer are as busy as ever taking care of the class children.

Edna McKee continues to find time to brighten the hearts of the "colored children" along with the "number of things" she is interested in all the time.

Jessie Gray is Dean of the Flagler Preparatory School in Jacksonville, Fla., and Rebekah Eggers a teacher in one of our high schools.

The class librarian has resigned her position at Central to take up her work as assistant-in-charge of "Soho Children's Reading Room" in the Soho Bath Settlement House.

Dear Recorder:

I failed you last year for the oldest reason in the world, namely, that the time had gone by before I got around to writing you my "bit." I had intended to send a very short sketch on the manufacture of shells for the allies as seen and understood by my own observation, for I spent almost all of last year frantically doing my part to get out these death dealing projectiles. It was most interesting as long as one considered them as "articles" only, and did not dwell on the ultimate use for which those shining and beautiful rows upon rows of "British High Explosive Shells" were intended.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Well, the sketch fell through along with other good intentions I have had. This time finds me almost at the end, thank goodness of, a tedious illness of erysipelas, which has left me now unable to put my right foot on the ground, said foot being "artistically" stretched out before me as I write. I hope very soon, however, to be as good as new, with another experience in my lurid past.

I enclose part of a letter from Florence Van Wagoner, which I know all her friends will enjoy and rejoice in. I am once more patting 1905 on the head for its foresight in selecting Florence for itself.

"As June comes near, I think often of P. C. W. and all the girls. We are so scattered that it is hard to get much satisfactory news, and I do not hear from any of the girls but Betty. It has been such a pleasure for me to hear from the rest of you, indirectly, through the Recorder.

"Betty is still in California. Her family now consists of three girls and one boy. At Christmas she sent me a beautiful picture of the happy little group. Her letters are always bright and full of cheer as she was in days of old. But it is whispered to me that she gets very homesick for Pittsburgh and her family in the East, and it would not surprise me to hear of their locating there some time. We surely will be glad, for then we will have some hope of enjoying her again and meeting her interesting family.

Jane Grimshaw Frampton, who was one of us in everything but name is now living at Cedar Falls, Iowa. Last week "her Ross" sent word to me of the arrival of William, who makes a quartet (mixed) in their home.

Frances and Helen will have to speak for themselves as I have heard nothing about them for years.

I, myself, can't report any future P. C. W. students, for our family is boys—David and James—just as interesting and lovely as two active, wide-awake boys can be. Some club work, some church work, the care of our little home with an effort to make it ideal, the wonderful blessing and privilege of helping to develop these lads into strong men, physically, mentally and morally and preparing them to serve the world as they are needed, fill my days with joy and happiness.

F. VAN W. SHAW.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The news from Betty is also delightful. The babies now outnumber the class by one—thanks to the two married ones, who are doing their best for their country.

Frank Fitzgibbons Grote is, like myself, recovering from a severe illness. She was dangerously ill with pneumonia in February, and as soon as she was able to travel, went South to recuperate. She is now in Asheville, N. C., and hopes to return much better. I hope by the time this is being read by us all that she will be with us at the Alumnae dinner.

Helen Moore, as far as I know, is still living in Asheville, surrounded by her devoted family. If she sees this, I hope she will remember she owes me a letter and, remembering it, will get busy.

You will see from the foregoing that nothing particular has happened to any one of us, and that we are still awaiting the "wonder time." In the meantime we send sincere greetings to all our college friends with our best wishes.

H. D. KERR.

CLASS OF '06

To belong to a small class has its advantages and its disadvantages. Of course I can't send you news of great and wonderful things being accomplished by our twenty-four members whom there are only three of us, but being secretary, I just visited both the other members in the class and can give you first hand news of them. Verna is well again after a seige of diphtheria, fortunately little Ruth escaped, her grandmother Madtes coming to the rescue and caring for her. Verna finds plenty to do with a husband, a baby and a home to care for, and with a few interests in the "doings" of the town.

In Philadelphia I spent a very pleasant week-end with Willa and her mother. Lena Wick spent Sabbath with us and such a good time as we had talking over old college days and old friends. With just a bit of imagination we could have been back again in Willa's room, each minute expecting one of these friends to drop in and pay us a visit. The next morning Willa took me on a tour of the Philadelphia General Hospital. It was most interesting, but Willa can spend her days in the labratory there, it has few attractions for me. Since, Mrs. McWitt has been very ill and we rejoice with Willa that she is better now.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

I've had a busy winter, many duties and many pleasures. A little French club keeps me from forgetting all the French I ever knew and Spanish lessons furnish the something new. This last month the Alumnae Register has taken all my spare time. I hope a few of the addresses are right.

CLASS OF 1907

The 1907 girls have had several reunions during the winter, and although it never seems possible to get all seven of us together at one time, there are always enough to keep Dame Gossip hustling around considerably. During the Christmas season, we met at Clara's. Mary was home for this (a pleasure indeed, for we never know when we can count on Mary any more.) Then one of those early spring days in February found us all en route to Coraopolis to spend an afternoon with Grace. The next meeting was at McCreery's where Madge entertained us at a delightful luncheon. And in May we all spent an afternoon and evening at Bess' to see whether or not she had done her house cleaning thoroughly.

We had hoped that Grace would be so pleased with the winter she spent in Pittsburgh that she would continue the custom, but we were disappointed this winter, for she decided to stay in Coraopolis, which seems far-distant to the rest of us, but Grace insists it is "a very inconvenient suburb."

Clara has spent another busy winter in the Aspinwall High School. In addition to this Clara aspires to Spanish. The rest of us are awed by her versatility.

Ellen is our business woman. She also keeps us informed as to all the latest missionary books, and her information is first hand.

Bess spent some time in New York this spring, and had a delightful glimpse into the home of Edith, who lives in East Orange. Edith has two wonderful children, Margaretta, aged four, and "Bunsy," aged two and a half. East Orange is a lovely homelike place, and Edith seems to be perfectly happy there with her little family. She and Bess discussed all the problems of housekeeping, and have most of them settled now.

Mary seems to have had a happy and busy year at the Chicago University, where she is once again sharing with others her knowledge of science. We used to have a certain reverence for Mary's beloved chemistry way back in our college days, and it has never faded, but indeed increased, as we see her soaring in scientific flights. She writes: "I wish you could see this big university for a while, and feel a little of the fascination of working among so many busy, enthusiastic people. One gets completely enveloped in it all."

ALUMNAE RECORDER

B. D. J. McG.

CLASS OF 1908

As usual the class of 1908 is the proud possessor of a new baby, which is our most important item of news. Myrtle Grow Blakeley is rejoicing over a little daughter, Caroline, whose birthday was December 12. Her two boys and Caroline evidently keep Myrtle busy for we haven't heard from her recently, although she finds time to do some beautiful crochet work, as the rest of us can testify about Christmas time.

Virginia is now herself again, although for part of the winter she did not enjoy her usual perfect health. The Danns (and their friends as well) have been enjoying their new car this past year. And also the quaint utterances of Patricia Marshall's remarks, though few as yet are profoundly cryptic from what we have heard.

Mary Mellon McJunkin has been training up her child in the way it should go (at least I hope she has). But it hasn't gone far as yet, as he still refuses to "walk by his lonesome."

Lilla writes that her chief diversion aside from household duties is in connection with the University Club. A year ago she was in "The Land of Heart's Desire." We all remember Lilla in that same little play at college. And this past Christmas vacation she took the part of "Jack-in-the-Box," in Stuart Waller's "Seven Gifts," a pantomime. The part, though far from dignified, was funny enough to make a hit. Their University Club has also brought the "Portmanteau Theatre" to Troy, and made enough to finance the forming of a Drama League. The Drama League has already brought two first-class plays, "Yellow Jacket" and "Seven Chances," the first good play Troy has had in some years. This year the club has had papers on modern plays with scene work at each meeting. College women in Troy are evidently busy and interested—and interesting as well.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Owing to the fact that each one of the seven members of the class of 1909 objects seriously to the official title of "secretary" and to the assiduous duties thereof, namely, an annual report to the Alumnae Recorder, last year we failed to get even a peep inside these covers. Since we are really anxious to tell our news this year, we refuse to be overlooked. Both sorrow and joy have visited our class in the last two years. Eva Cohen Jackson and Gladwin Coburn Challinor have both lost their mothers.

Then there have been two weddings. Eva M. Cohen has been Mrs. Leo H. Jackson for more than a year now. That fact is really not news any longer and should have been reported last year. It took Leila Estep to give us all a regular surprise. Suddenly Leila's voice on the phone announced that in just a week she would be Mrs. Stanley Carrollton Herold. Even her best friends had never heard of him—but who can wonder? Like "Young Lochinvar" he came from the West—San Jose, California, a graduate of Leland Stanford, an oil geologist (that's what they tell me—we, for our part, never heard of such a thing before). Well, they were married and went to Ecuador, South America, for a wedding and business trip combined. We are all happy with Leila, but we are sorry that we probably won't have her as a neighbor when they give up their roving and settle down. Incidentally, we all like "Stan." When they return from South America, they will take a jaunt to California, and then run back to South America for a few months, and then dear knows where! We shall have to leave them running in the regular approved motion picture way.

A letter from Emma Coulter from San Bernardino, California, tells us that she has given up teaching, temporarily at least, and is helping Myrtle Grow Blakely, '08, to care for her family of three. Emma still loves California and can't see why all of us don't live there.

Grace Tatnal doesn't report very often, but we hear that she is still teaching in the Harrisburg High School. There is a rumor that she and Irma Beard intend doing some post graduate work at the University of Wisconsin this summer. Irma liked it so well there last year that she wants to go back. She is upholding the dignity of our class by being head of the English department in the High School at Donora, Pa.

Cards at Christmas time from Carla Jarecki informed us that she and her mother were spending the winter in Florida. We think that Carla has a pretty good time.

Gladwin Coburn Challinor has gone home to her house-keeping and Frank after several months in Pittsburgh, during her mother's illness.

EVA COHEN JACKSON, '09.

CLASS OF 1911

The class of 1911 has reached a stage where there are few changes to report. The year has treated us all kindly.

Clarissa Blakeslee has had two splendid trips, one to California, and one to Cuba and Panama.

Margaret Greene has announced her engagement to Homer White. The date for her marriage has not been set as yet.

The girls at home report they have had a busy and happy year.

Edna Reitz has taught German in the Sewickley High School and incidentally had a most enjoyable winter.

During the Christmas vacation the class spent a most pleasant afternoon with Gertrude Wayne Horvitz at her home in Murray avenue. Gertrude enjoys housekeeping even more than teaching.

Frances Gray Everhart is again at her home in Aurelia street and says "Jimmie," who will soon be two years old, leaves her few idle moments.

Irma Diescher has been made head of the Children's Department of the Hazelwood Branch of Carnegie Library.

Rosalie reports that in doing placing-out work for the Juvenile Court she is a sort of peripatetic stepmother to over a hundred children scattered from Lake Erie to Mason and Dixon line.

Another boy came to the home of Rachel McQuiston Kaspar in Washington, D. C.

William Gilbert Marshall, Jr., arrived just a little too late for last year's Recorder, and has taken his place as the most important member of the household.

Eight members of the class met at the college tea in March and we are anticipating a pleasant reunion with Frances in May.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1912

Dear Recorder:

Greetings to sister Alumnae from the class of 1912. Five years have passed since our graduation from P. C. W. and we are looking forward to a real birthday party and reunion at our annual class luncheon in June.

We have two extremely interesting announcements to make this year. The first is the engagement of May Hardy, our class president, to Mr. Harry W. Reed. May expects to be married in June. We regret that she is to leave Pittsburgh for Detroit, where Mr. Reed is located.

The other item of interest is the birth of another class baby, Paul William Cochran, on April 11, 1917. We welcome the little fellow and extend our heartiest congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Cochran (Maude Shutt). The Cochrans live at Warren.

Florence Bickel Swan is busy with her small daughter, Dorothy Elizabeth, who grows cuter every day. Dorothy will celebrate her second birthday on May 17.

Eleanor Davis was married on July 15, 1916, to Mr. Nevin Woodside. The Woodsides live at Oakmont.

Frances Cameron Doane spent a busy winter helping to prepare for her sister's wedding. Frances has become an enthusiastic club worker.

Martha Sands Kirtland is "ideally" happy in her new home at Poland, Ohio. Some of our girls have visited her and report her a model housekeeper.

Frances Davies Kerr is still living with her mother, but expects to move soon into her new home near Ingram. So much for the history of the married members of 1912.

Esther O'Neill belongs to the class of stay-at-homes, who are busy every minute. She is a member of the College Club, Literary Club, Hospital Auxiliary and other organizations at Altoona. Tess says also that she has not changed as regards dancing and parties so enters into those diversions quite frequently.

Lillie Lindsay is still keeping house for her mother and sister. She is interested in Red Cross work, the Associated Charities, the Vice Reform Movement and various other good works.

During the past year, Martha Kim has devoted herself largely to home duties and caring for her mother, who was ill for several months. Martha expects to return to her chosen profession of teaching on May 1, having accepted a position in the Bellevue High School.

Mary Gray is still in the Children's Department of the Carnegie Library. Beulah Pierce is engaged in research work in the Department of Psychology at the Carnegie Technical Schools. Edith Chaddock is in the research department of the University of Pittsburgh.

Hazel Hickson spent the winter in Pittsburgh doing office work for her father. She still has yearnings toward dear California, where she spent a year.

We still have a number of faithful pedagogues. Daisy Sharp has a splendid position in the Edgewood High School, where she teaches Latin and Algebra. Mary Keen is teaching near Connellsville.

Helen Grooms is delighted with her work in the Junior High School at Oakmont. Elvira Estep obtained Leila's position in the Pittsburgh High School.

Calla Stahlman is a teacher of Mathematics in the Vandergrift High School. It seems as though Calla has deserted the ranks of her beloved Latin.

Lillian McHenry has taught at Ramona, California, the past three years. Mathematics and science are her subjects. She spent a part of last summer "brushing up" a little at the University of California in Berkeley. In her interesting letter, she tells also of many thrilling hikes up the mountains.

None of the girls seem able to give any definite news about Cosette Spence, but at the last report she was engaged in social work at Philadelphia.

On this fifth birthday, the 1912 girls plan to make a gift to the college. We hope to be able to give a full report of this at the Alumnae dinner.

FRANCES DAVIES KERR.

CLASS OF 1913

History moves on apace, but even in the midst of our stirring national events we are eager for the return of the Recorder with its attendant news. News! Did we say? Yes, that taken from last year's issue, for inasmuch as no word has come from many of our girls, we take it for granted that they still follow the same pursuits.

Our teaching force is much the same as ever in personnel, though Claire has gone to sunny California and is now teaching physical training in one of the public schools of Pasadena. When she wrote in April she was very busy with May Pole dances with "visions of pink and white cheesecloth in the background, but soon to appear in the foreground," she hoped. Louise Fletcher still teaches in Mayville, Marguerite Titzell in Kittanning, Elise Weihe in Connellsville, Martha Young in Vandergrift, and Margaret Minor in Morgantown, W. Va.—this last we are sure of, for besides being Florence Keys' colleague in work in the Morgantown High School, Florence writes that Margaret is her "guide, philosopher and friend" in helping her to "understand the intricacies of the Morgantown school system." Likewise, report has it that the two aforesaid 1913ers are fast becoming devotees of the movies—which only goes to prove that 1913 does not lack members in the advance guard in the march of progress. Betty McCague is still at Mt. Lebanon, though she says she is beginning to try her wings for a migration.

Jeanne writes a most enthusiastic letter from Albany, N. Y., where she still supervises the physical education of the students in the New York State College for Teachers. She expects to assist in teaching gymnastics in the Cornell summer school this year, which is an exceedingly great delight to her aspiring soul. Grace is steadily achieving fame as a social worker and is wholly absorbed in her chosen profession. She is still resident worker at Kingsley House and is going to manage affairs at Lillian Home this summer, from the wee ones up.

Helen Blair and Sylvia are our stay-at-home ladies and the many things which engross their attention are almost too numerous to mention. Helen still busies herself with Y. W. C. A. activities and, we understand, is also taking a practical course in home economics under the tutelage of Mrs. Ament. Sylvia, never idle in college days, has in no way checked her furious pace for she occasionally substitutes in the city high schools, finds two days a week for social work, and has now added the study of Spanish to her schedule. And, in addition, she is looking around for something to do in her spare moments.

Our married members very modestly have nothing to say for themselves. It was with great sorrow that we learned of the death of Mr. Geiselhart last winter. All of the girls sympathise very deeply with Emma in her bereavement, though so mouse-like is she that we seldom hear from her.

However, we have great cause for rejoicing in some changes that have affected this little group. Cupid has waged successful warfare against both Esther and Christine and has brought about peace by the unconditional surrender form of treaty. Esther became Mrs. Robert Buka shortly after our last issue of the Recorder appeared and, though dividing her time between Pittsburgh and Cleveland until last winter, has now settled in this city. Christine is a very recent bride, having taken unto herself the care of a husband on the thirtieth of March. The lucky man is Mr. John Harvey Bryan, formerly of Pittsburgh, but now located in New York whither he takes our Christine (the one thing we have against him).

But even such great radiance as that shed by our two brides by no means eclipses the importance of the fact that we have two very brand-new members in our class. Florence Kingsbacher is the proud and happy mother of a son born in December, 1916, Thomas William by name. He is the first baby reported by our class and therefore we hail him as our class baby. Faye Atkinson has a small daughter, born last winter, so we hear, but rumor fails to divulge her name or age. (It was ever thus with the feminine sex.)

After the recounting of such thrilling information, the activities of the rest of our matrons fade into mere shadow. Lucy, however, is not allowing her talents to stagnate for she has recently adopted suffrage and is now chairman of the ways and means committee of the Second Ward of the East Orange Suffrage League. She sends her love to all the girls. Laila is a busy, happy, little homemaker, a role which she plays absolutely perfectly. The class luncheon which we had at her home was unfortunately only meagerly attended, but those of us who were there enjoyed reminiscing together as well as planning for the future.

But alas, this report is already far too long, so that all I may say of my own activities is that I am still trying to make life livable on the North Side, while my interests are all with the little cottage we are building at Lake Wawasee, Indiana, in which vicinity we expect to spend the summer "flivvering" and fishing.

HELEN CRAIG CULLEY.

CLASS OF 1914

The class of 1914 has scattered to the four winds and has been sought out with infinite difficulty by its unfortunate secretary. For we are a singularly reticent class and prone to deep and prolonged silence.

I know everybody will be glad of a word from Miss Florence Root, who was our much loved honorary member for three of our four years in college. Miss Root says: "First of all I send my warmest greetings to the class of 1914. I am studying at Columbia this year and hope to be here still another year. The work is intensely interesting and New York offers such an abundance of good things that I am enjoying life to the utmost."

Then she puts in a few words which, I am bound to say, relieved me somewhat, for I cannot think of Miss Root as existing solely in the higher atmosphere of Greek and Latin verbs and such things. As I was saying she adds: "But don't think that I am devoted to study to the exclusion of everything else. Far from it! I could still enjoy a class spread as much as ever and eat just as heartily." And this will doubtless recall some memories to the class of 1914.

Marguerite McBurney has been an instructor in the chemistry department of Wilson College for the past two years. She says to the class: "I'd like to see all the class together once again in June but haven't any hope since our commencement is after P. C. W.'s and even such an insignificant person as an "instructor in chemistry must remain to do her duty."

Mary Savage has been teaching Latin in the Ligonier High School during the past year. To judge from the tone of her letter, in which she answered my plea for news, Ligonier is not just the happiest place in which to commence the founding of a career.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Margaret Brown has taught "various things" in Pembroke Hall, Hampton, Virginia. Her strongest opinion seems to be that a vast delusion prevails regarding the "wonderful" climate of our Southland. She begs to state that the North is good enough for her. I must add here that she is thinking of moving still farther North in the late summer. Not to speak obscurely, Margaret is expecting to be married in August and will live in Wisconsin. (For more information apply to Marg.)

Pauline Burt is still at Holyoke. She has just completed her third year as a member of the Chemistry Department. In June, 1916, she received her master's degree. She says she now has aspirations for a Ph. D. Pauline always was ambitious.

Margery Stewart has been an instructor in the chemistry department of our own college during the past year. Next year she expects to go to Columbia to study for her master's degree.

Hazel Rider has been teaching in Uniontown. She says that, while her work and pastimes are interesting to her, she's "perfectly sure" they wouldn't be to anyone else. We rather wish she had given us a chance anyhow.

Ethel Williams writes: "My position is that of Latin teacher in the Glassport High School, which I have held ever since graduating. Aside from that I have been doing positively "nihil" except continuing my vocal studies, so my contribution of news must necessarily be limited."

Giulietta Plymton has been teaching in the Fineview School, North Side, this year. She says her plans for the coming year are still uncertain.

Mildred McWilliams has been teaching music and otherwise enjoying herself.

Gertrude Goeddel has been singing in the choir of the Grace Reformed Church. Both she and Mildred stoutly affirm that they have been doing "nothing interesting." With these words they join the great majority of the class of 1914, who, according to their own words, are busily engaged in doing "nothing interesting."

Helen Sander is married and has a small daughter, who, no doubt, keeps her sufficiently busy to drive out other and distracting thoughts.

Juanita Husband, Phoebe Knight, Janet Brownlee, Anne Rutherford and Josette Kochersperg have not been heard from.

We can only hope for a word or two from them next year.

I wish to thank those who have helped me in gathering this information, slight as it is.

MARJORY A. BOGGS, '14.

CLASS OF 1915

The class of '15 continues to pursue the even tenor of its ways, serenely speeding along to fame, fortune, and matrimonial felicity. We are all of us living as hard as ever we can, trying to do our little part in the world's work, and managing to enjoy life at the same time.

There's Betty to begin with. Such a busy life as she is leading—with clubs, clubs, clubs of all descriptions from Red Cross to "Wofs." Then there has been an exciting wedding in the family with Betty right there to help it along. With Christine gone, we're all saying that it's her turn next, although she is deep in secretarial work.

Janet still is our lady of leisure and fashion. French, music, and Butler are still her main interests, with one notable exception. She seems to be very happy and is taking great interest in housekeeping these days.

Grace is having a beautiful time in Ellsworth teaching the young idea to shoot, and perhaps some older ones, too. We don't hear of her as often as we would like, but from what we do hear, our little school marm is making a great hit.

Hallie is so full of her sister's romantic marriage that we can hardly get her to talk of herself. She says she is working hard in the cause of her beloved social service, but she doesn't look it. Hard work seems to agree with her. But, of course, Hallie always did have a good time, no matter what she was doing.

Mary Ruth is a very important person in Glenshaw and we don't wonder, with chocolate eggs, theatre parties and such for her lucky youngsters. The task of being the whole High School faculty combined doesn't seem to bother her much, but we could always depend on Mary for work. She is also still interested in the "draw-ma" on the side.

Jane has lost her father recently and the whole class extends its heartfelt sympathy to her in her sorrow. She seems to be getting along splendidly in her High School work in California and reports a successful year.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

If you want to see a happy bride go to see Virginia in Mt. Lebanon. She has the dearest house! and dog—and bird—to say nothing of a husband who is very much there. “There’s nothing like it, girls!” is her heartfelt opinion.

We must not forget Olga—another of our school-marms. She, too, agrees that the profession holds many charms, and has planned to spend another year in Coraopolis. She finds time, however, to see all her friends, and enjoy all the concerts and good things in the city.

As for the writer, she is enjoying the mountains and the High School in Cresson, also remodeling a lot of her old theories. Teaching is hard work, but it’s fun. And to conclude, we are all still as devoted friends as ever.

LORNA BURLEIGH, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1916

Scarcely a year has elapsed since twenty-four young maidens felt curious though somewhat startled when the Juniors, Sophs, and Freshies sang, “Where, Oh! Where, are the Grand Old Seniors?” Now they have found definite places in that “Wide, Wide World” into which they were then launched.

Perhaps it is best to mention first, our classmate, who as assistant in the Social Service Department, still spends a part of her time at P. C. W. This is not the only interesting fact about her either, for she is the first to announce her intention of leaving the ranks of the bachelor-maids. Seba South is engaged to Thomas Wilson McCaw, of Dennison, Ohio.

Alice Laidlaw, after some interesting experience in the Advertising Department of McCreery’s store, has decided to enter Y. W. C. A. work. She is now training for this in Chicago, but expects to return to Pittsburgh May first. Here she expects to take charge of the Children’s Work, and assistant work with High School girls, under Miss Pomeroy.

Grace Woodrow is another of our girls who is continuing along the line of Social Service, and is Executive Secretary for the Children’s Aid Society of Allegheny County.

Alberta Bannerot and Helen Steele have been taking a course in Cooking at the Y. W. C. A. this winter. They have also done some volunteer Social Service work.

Amelia Slater tells us that she started as a teacher in the country last fall, and lived on a farm with three dogs and two cats. About Christmas, however, she decided that school "marming" did not exactly suit her. Amelia is now doing both Biological and Bacteriological investigation in a new and well equipped laboratory of the Magee Hospital.

Melba Martin, Mildred Nichols, Helen Thompson, Edna Gaw, and Rosemary Geary are all very busy ladies. What their various occupations are still remains a mystery, despite my wild appeal for news.

Leora Lewis is a regular substitute for the Pittsburgh High School. She is doing considerable tutoring as well and is contralto soloist at the Elwood Presbyterian Church.

Lillian Weike has been substituting in the Connellsville High School and studying at home.

The other eleven girls of the class deliberately started in as teachers, although some of them find time to do other things besides. For instance, Ethel Bair, who is located in Braddock, Pa., is chairman of at least two committees, has joined the Red Cross, and is doing a variety of other things ranging from the study of birds to the trimming of hats.

Kathryn Robb is in the High School at Juniata, Pa., but she does not find the distance too great from Pittsburgh to keep up her music.

Alice Greer is teaching near Canonsburg, Pa.

Leila Hill and Rebekah Crouse are both in the Sharpsburg school. Leila taught part of the winter at Dilworth Hall. Rebekah is coach of the basket ball team, and also for the Inter High School debate. Since her students were twice successful champion debaters, she must be training them in the proper methods.

Mary Stratton settled in Freeport, Pa., to teach Latin and German, after she had worked three months for the Associated Charities, and then in the Boys' Industrial Home.

Dorothy Errett is "special teacher" in the High School at her home town, Carnegie, and her duties are too numerous to mention. We all know Dorothy would find plenty to do any place she might be.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Martha Gibbons, better known to us as Fairy, went back to Indiana, and entered the High School at Decatur. Fairy took part in some Dramatics and the paper proclaimed her a star.

Gertrude Frame and Margaret Lee, two more of our girls fortunate enough to be together, are in the Tidioute High School. They seem to be progressing in Dramatic Science as well as teaching, and their chief extravagance is buying Indian baskets.

Frances Boale is teaching at the Indiana, Pa., High School.

At this, their first opportunity to do so in print, we twenty-four of 1916, wish to greet you all.

F. E. B., Sec.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

THE ALUMNAE TEA

Some fifty of our Alumnae enjoyed a very delightful afternoon on Saturday, March 17, at the College Club rooms.

The officers of the Alumni Association received. The entertainment committee, consisting of Mrs. D. E. Culley, Miss Sarah R. Carpenter, and Miss Elizabeth Cameron, arranged a very excellent program. A violin solo by Mrs. Walter Meller, vocal solos by Miss Kathryn Robb, Miss Elizabeth and Miss Elfa Norman, and a monologue by Miss Josephine Paul furnished a delightfully entertaining afternoon.

Following the program the hostesses, Mrs. Alexander Murdock, Miss Rachael Aiken, Miss Helen Blair, Miss Mildred Nicholls and Mrs. Aaron Horvitz, assisted by a number of the Alumni, served tea. May we not look forward to many such delightful afternoons next fall and winter?

GERTRUDE WAYNE HORVITZ, '11.

DECADE CLUB

It seems a pity that all three Decade Clubs are not active. However, there are reasons why Decade Club II. is the only one in existence. On April 14th we held our one hundred and twenty-seventh meeting. Decade I. ceased to hold meetings as its members were so scattered and had other duties more imperative. Decade Club III. ceased to exist even before the decade was complete. One reason was the larger classes. A single class could have as large a meeting as one of our Decade meetings, for in our decade the classes were for the most part very small. Decade II holds its meetings the second Saturday of the month. This year there have been social gatherings. The officers of the club are: President, Hilda Sadler; vice president, Nancy Blair; treasurer, Edna McKee; secretary, Edith Gray.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

MINUTES OF THE ALUMNAE MEETING JUNE 9, 1916

The regular June meeting of the Alumnae Association, Pennsylvania College for Women, was held at the College, Friday, June 9, 1916. The meeting was called to order by the President, Miss Eleanor Fitzgibbon, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and accepted. Miss Fitzgibbon then welcomed the new class into membership and followed this with her president's address.

The report of the Scholarship Committee, Miss Renshaw, chairman, was read and accepted with thanks.

The trustee of the invested fund, Miss Rachel Aiken, read their financial report and also read a most interesting history of the Scholarship Aid Fund, which celebrates its 25th birthday this year. This report was accepted with thanks. Amended to read that report be accepted and incorporated in the Recorder of 1917.

The Recorder Board, Mrs. Barker, chairman, presented the new book. Accepted.

Moved that extra copies of the Recorder, as requested by Mr. McClintock and friends of Miss Pelletreau, be distributed by the Recorder Board. Carried.

Pin Committee, Miss Edna McKee, chairman, reported that the seal has been made smaller to conform to the desire of the College students. Accepted.

The Chair appointed the following permanent committee on addresses: Lydia Murdoch Jones, '94; Sara Carpenter, '11; Mary Jeffery, '15.

Moved that the Chair appoint a committee to see Mrs. Decker and ask her to give her Recorder file to the Association; that the file be kept in the College library and that the library committee of the College faculty be made custodians. If Mrs. Decker does not desire to part with her file, the committee is instructed to collect a complete file. Carried.

The Chair then appointed a committee consisting of the present Recorder Board, Mrs. Barker, chairman, and in addition to the Board, Mrs. Warmcastle.

Moved that the chair appoint a committee of ten (10) to investigate the possibilities of completing the scholarship fund during the year.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Moved that we continue the use of the phrase "Helen E. Pelletreau Scholarship Fund." Carried.

Moved that the alphabetical list of graduates be reinstated in the Recorder. Carried.

Moved that a vote of thanks be given to Mrs. Mary Miller for her successful efforts in behalf of the Florence I. Davis Library Fund. Carried.

Moved that the Association offer congratulations and express their approval to the Board of Trustees on the abandonment of Dilworth Hall. Carried.

The following tribute to Miss Pelletreau was read by Miss Meloy, was accepted and ordered to be inscribed on the minutes:

Since our last June meeting, on Wednesday, August 4th, 1915, the great soul of Miss Helen E. Pelletreau passed out of this life. It is with the deepest reverence for the nobility of her character, unbounded admiration for her achievements, and hearts full of love, that she engendered in us, that we pause for a moment to try to realize just how bound up with our college, and with our own individual lives, was the strong personality and influence of this dear friend, and we can truly say that her interest in either one never abated.

Miss Pelletreau believed in the permanency of and the great future of the college, whose foundation she helped so well to lay, and when in 1894 she rested, she trusted us to further her plans and ideals. Her faith in the goodness of life as a God-given gift never wavered.

She loved life and life's labors, and planned for the future until the moment when she passed into unconsciousness.

Your committee begs to offer this brief tribute with the suggestion that it be spread upon the minutes of the Alumnae Association and a copy sent to the family.

MARY B. MILLER,
JANE B. CLARK,
LUELLA P. MELOY.

This was followed by roll-call, to which 73 responded.

The report of the nominating committee, Mrs. J. H. McGinnity, chairman, was read and approved and the secretary was instructed to cast the ballot with the result that the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year:

ALUMNAE RECORDER

President.....	Mrs. Charles Spencer, '83

Advisory.....	Mrs. W. P. Barker, '92
Recorder Board.....	Mrs. Walter Dann, '08, Chairman

Miss Coolidge then spoke and gave an encouraging and interesting report of activities.

On motion the meeting was adjourned.

SARA R. CARPENTER, Secretary.

MINUTES OF THE ALUMNAE MEETING OCTOBER 7, 1916

The regular Fall meeting of the Alumnae Association, Pennsylvania College for Women, was held at the College on Saturday, October 7, 1916, at 3 P. M. Owing to the absence from the city of both the president and vice president, the meeting was called to order by the acting secretary, Miss Edith Gray. It was moved and seconded from the floor, then carried, that Miss Ann Houston act as chairman of the meeting. Dr. Acheson, upon invitation of the meeting, spoke of a recital to be given in Carnegie Hall under the auspices of the college.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, the report of the treasurer read and accepted and this was followed by the reading of a letter from the president, Mrs. Spencer, in which she stated a number of matters which must be considered by the meeting.

Moved by Miss Brownson that the invitation to non-graduates for the alumnae dinner be extended this year, as provided for in previous action, and that a committee be appointed to investigate associate membership, work out a program, and report at the June meeting. Carried.

The question of further action in regard to "Who's Who" was referred to the president with full power to act as she sees fit.

The question of monthly meetings was referred to the president with power to act.

Moved by Mrs. Warmcastle that it be reported to the president that the meeting was in favor of having the alumnae dinner at some other place. Carried.

Miss Sadler reported that the lecture fund amounts to about fifty dollars.

Moved by Mrs. Miller that the president appoint a lecture committee and that this committee confer with Dr. Acheson in regard to lectures. Carried.

Mrs. Barker, 1916 Recorder editor, turned over to the college a complete file of Recorders, gift of Mrs. Decker.

Moved that the secretary write a note of appreciation to Mrs. Decker. Carried.

Miss Brownson accepted the file and asked for instructions as to their binding.

Moved that Miss Brownson be empowered to use her own judgment in the matter of binding. Carried.

Moved by Miss McCague that the binding be paid for out of the permanent fund. Carried.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

REPORT OF THE HELEN E. PELLETREAU SCHOLARSHIP COMMITTEE

During the past year, 1916-1917, your Scholarship Committee, through means of the Scholarship Fund, has been able to help pay the tuition of three students. Of these three one is a day student, whose tuition is paid in full. She is a Freshman, having started her college course last fall. One is our Hindoo student, an old friend, having been "our girl" for three years. She is now a Junior, will be a Senior next year, expecting to finish her college course and graduate in 1918. The third student we were helping was unable to continue her college course on account of illness, and was forced to drop out early in the winter. Through the help and advice of Miss Coolidge we were able to transfer this help to another girl who is a promising student and deserving of help.

As is my custom when preparing this report each year, I have asked Miss Coolidge to give me a little account of the progress being made by our students. Miss Coolidge speaks highly of all of our girls, and says that they are a credit to our College. She speaks particularly well of Miss Kamela Cornelius, our student from India who is now closing her Junior year and is looking forward with regret to what seems close at hand, her return to her native country, India, at the close of another year. Miss Coolidge writes: "Miss Cornelius continues to be very interesting to all of us. She is most loyal to the P. C. W. and considers it her home in every sense of the word, and is always ready to tell others in her public speaking of her loyalty and love which I am sure will increase with years. She has larger opportunity than other students to visit other colleges both here and in the East and always thinks that this is the best of all. In her public speaking she has a unique opportunity of making this known, which she always improves as far as courtesy permits. She is an earnest Christian girl and hopes to make good use of her opportunities in her own country." It seems to me that we are greatly blessed in being able to use our scholarship fund to help with the education of this young Hindoo girl, who will carry back to her own sisters the enlightenment of a Christian education and thus "pass the torch" along to those who are less fortunate than she. Miss Coolidge tells us of our day student who is just finishing her Freshman year, that "Every one speaks well of her. She is doing first-class work. Some of it has been a little difficult because of her having been out of school before entering college. In all of her subjects except mathematics she had A and B rank for the first semester, but in mathematics she has made steady progress and constantly improves. I am sure that you will feel pleased with her as she goes on with her course, for she is a girl of earnest purpose and a lady."

This brings my little report to a close. It tells of good and promising work being done by our scholarship girls, and as Miss Coolidge says, they are a credit to our College. We can well be proud of them.

REPORT OF THE HELEN E. PELLETREAU SCHOLARSHIP SUBSCRIPTION COMMITTEE

You are all familiar with the plan this committee used to raise two thousand dollars ($2000) for the Helen E. Pelletreau Scholarship Fund.

The personal appeal did much, yet not quite enough, as the amount raised to date—May 5—is $1463.50. About two-thirds of the Alumnae responded to our letters and it is our hope that others on Alumnae Day will subscribe $536.50, the amount needed to complete the fund.

THE SCHOLARSHIP OF 1916

At the close of the Alumnae dinner last June, the President of the graduating class electrified her hearers with the news that the parting token of 1916 to its Alma Mater was to be a gift of $500. This sum is to be given in four years by an annual pledge of $5 from each member.

REPORT OF THE COLLEGIATE VOCATIONAL BUREAU

There is no topic of greater interest to women today, than the preparation for one's life work, but it is especially of interest to the college woman to keep in touch with the progress women are making in the ever widening field of new vocations.

From April, 1916, until March, 1917, between 700 and 800 young women have come to the Collegiate Vocational Bureau of Pittsburgh for assistance in finding suitable positions. Their preparation, after college, has been quite varied, some of them having chosen the business field. Others have taken training for social service work and have fitted themselves for one of the many types of social work, which are open to women. Others have specialized in laboratory work and have become experienced in hospital work. Others have taken training for professions in the fields of nursing, librarian work, domestic science and other courses preparing them for definite vocations. Each year additional stress is being laid upon work beyond college, to fit applicants more perfectly for their chosen professions.

It is interesting to know that none of the bureaus in this country have enough college women with stenographic equipment to fill the positions that are open, neither are there enough girls as Y. W. C. A. secretaries, as teachers of salemanship, nor as social workers with training at a school of philanthropy. At the annual conference of Bureau Directors held in New York the last of March, fifteen of the larger colleges for women were represented. Such interest is being shown by the under-graduates in planning their courses, that the colleges feel it is worth their while to have the Bureau Directors visit the colleges each year for conference with the girls. The technical knowledge concerning vocations, which has been available only since the opening of the Collegiate Bureaus, is proving invaluable to women, who are choosing their life work.

To help in meeting the national crisis, the Collegiate Bureaus have offered their services to the President of the United States and to the employers, who will need to replace men with women. College women are well pleased to have this organization already established, which will be of great aid in solving problems, which are bound to arise.

WHAT WE ARE DOING AT COLLEGE

The following are little snapshots taken by the girls themselves to let us see just what they have been doing this year.

They have added two new organizations, "The Classical Society" and "The Ariel," both flourishing and promising much.

We will all be interested to note, too, how far the girls are carrying the banner of P. C. W. abroad, through their delegates to the Student Government Conference at Mt. Holyoke, and the Y. W. C. A. conference at Swarthmore. Also we note with interest the new honors bestowed upon the Sorosis.

THE STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

The activities of the Student Government Association have been peculiarly varied this year. It has carried on matters which are becoming customs and has also added several new activities.

The plans for the Halloween party were, this year, in the hands of the students.

On November 2 the students had a very successful mock election. They proved themselves poor prophets, for according to the straw vote, Mr. Hughes received a majority.

The president of the Association was sent as a visiting delegate to the Women's Intercollegiate Conference for Student Government held at Mount Holyoke College in November. Representation at this conference meant not only greater interest and enthusiasm in the affairs of the local association, but also a broader understanding of the forward movement in self-government in colleges and universities. As almost a direct result, a trial of the honor system was made in general conduct and in chapel attendance. This was successful enough for the system to be incorporated in the constitution.

The students have not been deaf to the appeals made on all sides for funds to be used in relief work. For the Serbian Relief Work, $94.88 was raised. They have also undertaken the sale of tickets for the Senior play, the proceeds of which will be given to the Y. M. C. A. camps established among our soldiers.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

The Young Women's Christian Association has a membership of ninety-four. We opened the school year with the regular reception which was well attended. Our average attendance at the meetings has been sixty. Miss Pomeroy and Mr. Lowe, a returned missionary, aroused much enthusiasm by their addresses. Many of the members have had the privilege of hearing Miss Anna G. Sucholtz, Dr. Hugh Black, Dr. John R. Mott, Mr. Sherwood Eddy. We also co-operated with the Association of the University of Pittsburgh in special meetings held in May. Two Bible study classes and two mission study classes have been conducted during the year. The returns from the bazaar which was held again at the time of the Dramatic Club pay, were $85, which we expect to use as our conference fund. Our missionary fund is $30, which we raised by systematic giving; of this we will devote $25 to the tuition of our foreign student.

Louise Reinecke represented us at the Annual Members' Conference at Swarthmore in November, 1916. From it she brought encouragement and many suggestions for improvement. Among the latter were the importance of well organized committees and more regular meetings of both cabinet and committees.

JANE ERRETT.

THE OMEGA LITERARY SOCIETY

The Omega Society has spent a very delightful and profitable year in studying the novel and the drama, selecting from some of the prominent English novelists and representative dramatists of Norway, Germany, France and Spain.

According to the custom, a short story contest was held. Miss Leah Claster, '17, received the prize of five dollars.

At the open meeting of the Society in March the delightful "Play of the Wether," by John Heywood, was read before a very appreciative audience. After this meeting, Miss Coolidge entertained the society at a lovely dinner in Woodland Hall.

DRAMATIC CLUB

During the year 1916-17, the Dramatic Club has had many interesting activities. A tea was given November 10, for Stuart Walker and his company. Mr. Walker gave an informal talk upon the development of the "Portmanteau Theater." The girls were delighted to meet the celebrated company and to see how sociable and human real actors and actresses can be. The same evening the club went to see them act. On December 8 and 9, the club presented "The Steadfast Princess," by Cornelia L. Meigs. This children's play was awarded the first prize by the Drama League in 1915. An unusually large audience was present both days and there were many theater parties. According to custom the proceeds of the play were given to the Seniors to help them produce their play, "The Barber of Seville." For the second play of the year the club assisted in the production of the Latin play "Menaechmi."

THE PHI PI CLASSICAL CLUB

Although there have been a number of clubs and societies at the college for some years, until now there has never been one devoted to the classics. Through the efforts of Miss Green, a number of the girls in the Classical Department were interested and in November a Classical Club was organized with the purpose of instilling in its members a love for the language and culture of the Greek and Roman peoples and of spreading an interest among others. The charter members of the club were all the girls in the department who cared to join, but the number will be limited in the future. At the second meeting, a constitution and the name "Phi Pi" were adopted. At the regular monthly meetings, the subject of study has been the development of the Greek and Latin drama. But the main work of the year was the presentation of the play of the "Menaechmi" of Plautus in Latin, in co-operation with the Dramatic Club. This was presented as nearly as possible like the plays at Rome. The costumes were all planned after classic models and the musical accompaniment was played by two flutes and a clarinet. The music used was adapted from that written for the presentation of "Phormio" by Terence at Harvard in 1893. The "Menaechmi" was the source of Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors" with much the same plot, resting on the confusion of twins. A prologue was given in English explaining the plot and actions. This play was given in April just after the meeting of the Classical Association of the Atlantic States in Pittsburgh, so that a number of the delegates were present. After such a successful year as a new club, the Phi Pi has great plans and hopes for the future.

DEUTSCHER VEREIN

The Deutscher Verein meetings have continued through the year in an interesting series. During the fall months the works of eminent German musicians and literary men were studied, while in the spring solos from German masterpieces, folksongs and general discussions filled the time of meetings. International affairs were not discussed.

The year has been profitable and very pleasant and has proven worth all the effort necessary for entrance into the club.

THE ARIEL CLUB

The Ariel Club is one of the new organizations of the college. Its aim is to arouse among its members a keen interest in birds and bird life and to influence others in their protection. The club holds one meeting each month, at which papers are read on the different phases of bird life and reports are given on the birds of the vicinity. The study centers mainly around the birds of Pennsylvania. Specimens are secured from the Carnegie Museum which enables the members to be thoroughly familiar with the different species. In addition to these meetings field trips to the surrounding country are taken.

GLEE CLUB

This has been an active and successful year for the Glee Club, under the direction of Prof. and Mrs. Mayhew. The joint concert was held April 20, 1917, with the Musical Clubs of Carnegie Institute of Technology. There was a most pleasing program, followed by a reception and dance. The club sang at all the special services held during the year, besides giving concerts at the Asbury Methodist Church and at the Kingsley Settlement House.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

THE MANDOLIN CLUB

The Mandolin Club of Pennsylvania College for Women consists of thirteen members for the season of 1916-17. There has been a decided enthusiasm among the students of the college to join the club this year. A number of the girls are taking lessons this winter and spring with the expectation of becoming members in the fall.

The club has filled many engagements this season, such as musicales for the Homewood Woman's Club, the Kingsley House, the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor, the Sarah Heinz Settlement, and the Institution for Insane at Woodville, Pa. From this list it is easily seen that the types of audiences have varied widely, much of the work being along Social Service lines. The Pennsylvania College for Women Glee and Mandolin Clubs combined with the Glee and Mandolin Clubs of Carnegie Technical Schools gave a concert on Friday evening, April 20, in the Assembly Hall before a large and appreciative audience.

The officers of the Mandolin Club were the same this year as last. The Club has been fortunate indeed in retaining Miss Butterfield as director and Miss Dorothy Stoebener as leader. The success of the club this year is undoubtedly due to their brilliant yet patient work. Miss Josephine Paul has been manager for a second season. Although there will be a change in the leadership and management of the club next season, we trust that the results will be as gratifying as those of 1916-17.

THE WHITMER MUSICAL CLUB

The Whitmer Musical Club has had an interesting year, with an enrollment of twenty-seven active members. All the entertainment has been provided by the members of the club. The annual open meeting was held April 30 in the drawing room. Mr. Hines spoke at this meeting and the College Mandolin Club also took part. The success of the club has been very gratifying, and we hope that the club will grow in interest and numbers in the succeeding years.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

THE SOROSIS

With the hearty co-operation of the Sorosis Board, the Student Body and the Alumnae, the Sorosis has completed another prosperous year.

The high standards formerly established have been upheld and an attempt made to fulfill the aim, "to encourage literary work and to increase school spirit among the students." With these things in mind, the Sorosis awarded a prize of five dollars in the short story contest.

Great care has been taken, not only in the arrangement of the literary department, but also in the college activities. Special attention has been given in developing full and interesting reports of clubs, lectures, college notes and alumnae news.

The circulation of our college paper has been greatly increased. We have a long list of alumnae subscribers; every member of the student body is enrolled upon our list. The Sorosis is receiving recognition and commendation from several of the large colleges for women with whom we have not heretofore exchanged.

ATHLETICS

Basketball

We practiced faithfully under the direction of Miss Lillie Lindsay, and our fame must have spread, for even the game scheduled with Pitt was not played. However, we played a most exciting game against "The Others," a team made up of High School instructors; also on March 17 the Orangemen of the dormitories defeated the Irishmen, after much hilarity.

Tennis

The interest in tennis is always great in the spring. The usual tournament will be held.

Walking Contest

Another feature of much interest.

JUNE — 1918

The President's Address

Welcome! Welcome! Class of 1918.

Your college career coincides with the period of the war (we could wish that your exits might also be co-existent!). You are a big, bright spot on the dark horizon. Never before has our Association grown so much larger over night! A thousand times we bid you welcome.

Associate Members: To you also we extend a most cordial and sincere welcome, and with it is mingled an apology for having been so unpardonably slow in discovering that we both needed and wanted you. By constitution we had been prepared for you for many years; but, unfortunately, we took no steps to "make our generous thought a fact." Apparently you have held no grudge against us but have, on more than one occasion, rendered us beautiful service. It shall be our earnest endeavor to make you forget our shortcomings and to feel glad that you have joined our ranks.

In these days when the "hearts of men" are being "sifted out"; when things essential are taking precedence over things that, no matter how important they may once have seemed, are now but "trifles light as air" in the present condition of the world; when organizations and institutions are being called upon to justify their existence, it is fitting that the Alumnae Association of the Pennsylvania College for Women should discover whether it is properly fulfilling its destiny. It behooves us to consider three things:

1. The object of our existence.
2. Whether that object is suited to, or can be adapted to, the world of today.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

3. How nearly are we attaining to our goal.

How many of us, if asked, "What is the 'chief end' of your Alumnae Association?" could give the correct verbatim reply, "The object of the Association is to further the interests of Pennsylvania College for Women, and of education in general, and to promote the mutual intercourse and fellowship of the members"? It interested me to find that this object for which we presumably exist was another of those three-fold ones; also that it has been the object during the forty-two years of our existence. Amid all the altering, revising, and amending which our constitution has undergone, Article I, Section 2, has, with one slight exception, remained unchanged. In the language of one of the girls of my youth, we have "ceased to be females and have become women."

Careful consideration of the question has led me to the conclusion that the unknown author of this Section was a person of wisdom and forethought; that the object is an ideal one, adapted to all conditions, for all time. It provides for childhood—the playtime—when mutual intercourse and fellowship are promoted; for adolescence, when altruistic ideas awaken and the desire to do for others begins to replace thought of self, when to promote the welfare of our Alma Mater fills our hearts. And for maturity there is the far bigger thing—the furthering of education in general. But when does a society into which annually flows an ever and ever larger stream of young life leave childhood and youth behind it and come into full maturity? Perhaps this is carrying analogy too far, and it is only to the individual classes that these periods can be applied. However, it may be noted that our Alumnae Association was in its "tender teens," not yet (*) "sweet sixteen," when the idea of the Helen E. Pelletreau Scholarship suggested itself as a means of furthering the interests of the College; and one of the by-products has been the deepening of mutual intercourse and fellowship of the members. Very recently a second effort in behalf of the welfare of the College was undertaken, and it was to me a most encouraging thing to witness the enthusiasm and spontaneity with which the idea of supplying the very necessary need of new drawing room furniture was accepted and planned for, and, in a comparatively short time, executed. The spirit of unity and friendship which animated our gatherings was comparable to that witnessed in the re-union of a large, harmonious family.

In the midst of the "earth-quake shocks" and "tempests" which still threaten civilization, the demoralization in men's colleges and the demand for "trained women" to fill the places left vacant by men, even the least observant can perceive that "education in general" must, perforce, undergo radical changes, if not immediately, then in that "some day" after the war.

"Some day—so many tearful eyes
Are watching for thy dawning!
So many faces toward the skies
Are weary of the night."

Three months ago a daily paper reported the appointment of the "latest war commission," created at the instance of the National Educational Association, to be under the supervision of Prof. George Drayton Strayer, of the Teachers' College of Columbia University. This commission, "in conjunction with federal officials, will take under consideration the immediate adjustment of education to present war conditions, and will study the problem of changed conditions that may be expected to follow the war."

No one can doubt the need of education nor the vastness of the problem who marched past the thousands lining the sidewalks the day of the Third Liberty Loan Parade. It was an impressive sight to see the quantities of children, from babes in arms and tiny tots with chins resting on the confining rope, to those of high school age and the wide-awake urchins who from their elevated perches on the bridge inquired, on seeing the word "Educational" on the banner, "What are them? School teachers?"

Would it be presumptuous for our little society to dream of taking part in such a world-wide movement? Phillips Brooks says, "There is a necessary limit to our achievement, but none to our attempt." And the proverb tells us that "he can who thinks he can." It may not be ours to decide whether or not four years of Latin shall continue to be required for entrance to college. Nor may we be called upon to assist at the last obsequies of the dead languages. But we surely can read and listen, and ponder and, aided by our own experiences as teachers, mothers, grand-mothers, and even maiden aunties, reach some sort of conclusion and be ready to furnish intelligent testimony if called upon. We may, as a result, come to stand with those whom a certain lecturer described as "demanding a technical education," a more technical, and a still more technical education." Or we may be more in accord with "The Student at Arms," who, having attended first the Military School of Sandhurst and then Oxford University, writes: "In the days of danger and death, a good many of the officers felt the need of an articulate philosophy of life and death, and recognized that Oxford and Cambridge had given their sons the power to evolve one, while Sandhurst and Woolwich had not." Of one thing I feel most confident: the New Education will recognize that there can be no well-rounded education which fails to provide for spiritual development.

Twenty years ago, MacMillan & Company published a little book by Professor Hiram Corson of Cornell University, entitled, "The Aims of Literary Study," in which occurs this passage: "The most practical education (but this, so-considered pre-eminently practical age does not seem to know it) is the education of the spiritual man; for it is this, and not the education of the intellectual man which is, must be (or Christianity has made a great mistake) the basis of individual character; and to individual character, humanity chiefly owes its sustainment." According to Henry Van Dyke, the "final result of true education is not a selfish scholar, nor a scornful critic of the universe, but an intelligent citizen who is determined to put all his powers at the service of his country and mankind." And Emerson declares, "Great men are they who see that spiritual is stronger than any material force; that thoughts rule the world."

It is, alas! always easier to diagnose than to cure. And this brings us to the very practical question of how we are to reach our goal. In the popular language of today we must seek greater efficiency; must be prepared; must mobilize and co-ordinate our forces; and, above all, must all co-operate. A writer in Du Pont Magazine uses the making of honey as the most effective illustration of this last word, and gives the following definition: "To co-operate is to join forces and something more. It is to join hearts as well as hands and slip a little soul in into the bargain"; and adds: "The A, B, C of success is this—Be a Bee."

The writer of a letter to the New York Times, under date of June 4, 1917, quotes President Hopkins of Dartmouth as having said, in his inaugural address, that "the true interests of the college demand, in far greater measure, the solicitude and intelligence of the alumni—more truly even than their financial aid." She then goes on to tell of the growth of the Alumnae Council of Smith College. "It has about one hundred members (there were at that date 5,962 members in their association) and twelve standing committees which study the affairs of the undergraduates, the alumnae, and the college in general. Of these the Committee on Graduate Work is dealing with the problem of improving the facilities for graduate instruction in America. The Committee on Local Clubs and the Publicity Committee are endeavoring to bring about a closer relation between the Alumnae themselves, and the Alumnae and the College. The one which at present seems more important than any other is the Alumnae Fund Committee. Of its work President Burton has said: "To me the significant thing . . . is the fact that the campaign has been initiated and carried on without the active co-operation of the Trustees and the President. It is a splendid thing when a college has alumnae who will plan and carry out a campaign like this. It means a new day for Smith College." I dare not say "Go thou and do likewise," but let me give you this advice: read carefully the editorial in this Recorder, and "Let it be when thou hearest the sound of going in the tops of the mulberry trees, that then thou shalt bestir thyself."

Pennsylvania College for Women has ever aimed to give a "distinctively Christian" education. Only a year ago Miss Coolidge said to me that it was the good instruction and atmosphere which brought us students, despite our lack of modern dormitories. A woman of my acquaintance selected a college for her daughter for the sole reason that the graduates of that institution with whom she had come into contact were possessed of a gracious womanliness and of a loyalty to their college which she craved for her child.

Our association is now in its "fiery forties" and contains about four hundred members. Suppose each one of us should stand for the high ideals of our Alma Mater, not only in theory but in fact; that each of us should become a "living epistle, known and read of all men." Should we not then, in mutual intercourse and fellowship be furthering the interests of P. C. W.? And, as her influence would thus be extended, should we not be promoting education in general?

MARY ACHESON SPENCER.

President's Letter

May 16, 1918.

The Editor of the Recorder has graciously suggested that a brief account of my recent trip to France would be interesting to the alumnae and friends of the College. While not flattering myself that this will prove to be the case, nevertheless I have no reluctance in offering such an account as a happy substitute for the traditional letter expected from the President at this time.

The unusual sensation of being offered membership on two commissions to visit France at the same time is exceedingly rare so far as my experience goes. This, however, was what took place when, early in February, both the American Red Cross and the War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association invited me to become a member of their respective commissions who were to visit France in the interests of these important organizations. The Young Men's Christian Association presented a field of service for which it seemed to me I was better fitted than for the Red Cross, while at the same time it in nowise curtailed opportunities to observe the splendid work now being rendered overseas by the latter organization. Accordingly, I accepted appointment with the Young Men's Christian Association and sailed for France February 17th with Mr. Ralph W. Harbison, Chairman of the Commission, Dr. Hugh T. Kerr, pastor of Shadyside Presbyterian Church, Mr. J. W. Kinnear and Senator LeRoy Percy, of Mississippi. The trip of nine days overseas was quite uneventful, devoid of seasickness and lacking even the thrill of an encounter with an enemy submarine. Upon arrival in France our party proceeded immediately to Paris, where itineraries were mapped out that carried us all over France, from the port cities to the most advanced front-line trenches. The Commission was expected to make a critical survey of the overseas work of the Young Men's Christian Association in the war zone, and report back to the War Work Council in New York such constructive suggestions as would tend to enhance the efficiency of Association service for our American Expeditionary forces. In fulfillment of this trust our party traveled between five and six thousand miles in France, visiting practically every important center where our troops are stationed, and inspecting every department of work undertaken by the Association for our American sailors and soldiers. We had, also, as I have already intimated, abundant opportunity to observe the work of the Red Cross and kindred agencies. As a result of our investigation we reached certain convictions, both regarding the American army and the work of these two organizations, some of which may be of general interest.

In the first place, we are fully persuaded that the overseas work of the Young Men's Christian Association is not surpassed by any agency in France in its contribution toward the maintenance of the morale of the American soldiers. The Association is literally "a home away from home" for our gallant lads. Its ability to serve is limited only by the physical and spiritual equipment of the 1,800 men and women who are now enlisted in its ranks. Five hundred are needed immediately to make the work of the Association fully efficient and thousands will be required to keep pace with our army when it reaches full strength, and to assure the presence of a Young Men's Christian Association hut and canteen in every camp along the battle front. The Association is at once a store, a recreation hut, and a social center. Without its ministrations the loneliness of camp life and the horrors of war would be intensified a hundred-fold. One home-sick lad in the front-line trenches, when I asked him if the "Y" was making good, replied enthusiastically, "Sure. It's daddy and mammy to us fellows out here." Mr. E. H. Sothern, whom we met in Paris, said to us that he considered the work of the Young Men's Christian Association the finest example of sacrificial service that the world has ever seen. This opinion is shared in large degree by the officers as well as the men of the American Expeditionary forces.

Another conclusion we unanimously reached was this, namely, that the American army is the finest, cleanest body of men in France today. To be sure, temptations of all sorts are rife, the restraints of home are lacking. Some individuals are too weak to stem the tide of impulse and desire, but the army as a whole is maintaining the high standards of our American life for sobriety, moral cleanliness, and high courage, even amid discomforts and dangers unparalleled in the world's history. The vast majority of our officers are striving with sincere purpose to keep the men physically and morally fit for victorious warfare. Captain F——, of the French army, told me that the American boys he had seen in action astounded him by their coolness and daring. He was loath to believe that they were raw troops and not seasoned veterans. It is my unshaken conviction that our boys, when they return—and a large majority of them will return—will be better fitted for citizenship than they would be had they never been subjected to the experience of army life.

In the third place, I think our entire party were more fully persuaded than when we left America that, barring a miracle, the war will be won only by a smashing military victory over Germany. Any army that can put up the offensive which the German army did in this recent drive on the Western front is by no means ready to quit the field. None of us should be deceived by the stories that come out of Germany with reference to the political and economic unrest of the people. I believe they are absolutely knit together in their determination to dominate the world by military prowess, and from the history of the past four years they have good reason to believe that this may yet be possible. To achieve, therefore, military victory of a decisive character, demands the whole power of America, financial, moral and military. We cannot at this time hold back any of the price. France and England are both war weary. The allied forces now in the field are not, in my judgment, sufficient to attain a decisive result. They can hold out, and they will hold out on the Western front until the millions of our American troops now under arms are ready to strike a telling blow.

Our duty it is then to support in every possible way the administration program, to show a brave spirit and a smiling face, and to maintain by every possible means the morale of our soldiers now in France and those who will soon go over. Unity here will prove as compelling a factor as the unity now manifest in the war zone through the appointment of General Foch, as Supreme Commander of the allied forces. The Red Cross and the Young Men's Christian Association are the two agencies fully endorsed by the military authorities, both here and overseas, to contribute various services, both military and non-military, that will assure the winning of the war. Support of these organizations, financial and moral, is incumbent upon every loyal American.

The Alumnae will be interested to know that the faculty and students of Pennsylvania College for Women have, during this past year, made a notable contribution to the work of both of these organizations. The report of the Red Cross Chapter, which appears in this number of the Recorder, is an exceedingly creditable record. I doubt if it is surpassed by any institution in the country when the number of students is taken into consideration. It is a record of which all of us may be justly proud. We are, of course, planning a continuance of these activities for the coming year, and hope to have for this work the cordial support of the Alumnae and friends of the College. This service cannot fail to achieve fine results in the life and growth of Pennsylvania College for Women.

Cordially yours,

JOHN C. ACHESON,

Message from the Dean

My first word to the Alumnae must be one of grateful appreciation for the cordial welcome given me this year. I have had the double pleasure of reviving old friendships and forming new ones. Never for an instant have I felt myself a "stranger in your midst." And now, at the close of a busy, happy year, I feel that I "belong." Such a welcome was doubly dear to me for I know, from my own love and admiration for Miss Coolidge, that it was not easy to see some one else in her place, but I know also that our loyalty to Miss Coolidge will outlive many deanships and that the hearty co-operation you have given me is a part of that loyalty.

I came eager to learn what were the duties of a dean. I am still trying to find out, but I can assure you of one thing—there is no monotony in the life. There are many problems, but no two days bring the same ones. There is an infinite number of petty details, but there are splendid opportunities for service. It has been a great pleasure to represent the College upon various occasions—once in New York City at the meeting of the National Committee of Bureaus of Occupations, and again at the Conference of Deans in Atlantic City. There President Woolley, of Mt. Holyoke, spoke on "The Ideal Dean." I shall not tell you what she said.

One who has had the opportunity of working with college girls this year may truly consider herself fortunate. Never was there a finer spirit of service among the students. The report of our Red Cross Auxiliary is given elsewhere, but I cannot refrain from merely mentioning the splendid work which has been done by both faculty and students. Our money contributions have been large in proportion to our numbers:

Y. M. C. A. War Friendship Fund.....$1,900.00

(100% of the faculty and regular students subscribed to this)

Second Liberty Loan.....	7,600.00
Third Liberty Loan.....	10,100.00
($300.00 of this was given in bonds for the Ar- menian Relief)
Contributions to the Red Cross previous to the May drive	486.18
Easter Egg Fund for French Wounded.....	11.40
Total	$20,097.58

In addition we sent 264 books to the camp libraries and a very considerable amount of clothing both for the French wounded and the Belgians.

Last, but not least, we contributed our President for three months. This was, however, in the nature of a Liberty Loan for, although it involved a temporary sacrifice, he has been returned with such high interest that we consider it an excellent investment.

One of our sources of inspiration has been the lecturers whom we have been fortunate enough to secure. It was a rare privilege to have as our guest Miss Helen Fraser, of England, who spoke to us on "Women and War Work" and brought a message so vital and so stirring that we would have been clods indeed not to respond.

As we look back over the year I am sure we all feel that it has been well worth while, and we can look forward to next year with good hope, realizing that the college woman will have mighty tasks laid upon her, and Pennsylvania College for Women—students, faculty and alumnae—will be ready and able to respond to any call with the same fine spirit of loyalty and patriotism which she has shown in the past.

FLORENCE KELLOGG ROOT.

Letter From Our Former Dean

48 Holt St., Fitchburg, Mass.

My Dear Editors:

It is certainly a reminder that the college year is passing and commencement at hand to receive an invitation to send a few words to the "Recorder." The cordiality of the invitation makes it a pleasure to respond, although material seems even more lacking than in the old days when, the "Recorder" articles due, the President was entitled to all the important college items, the alumnae to the activities of the world at large, and the students to the activities of the College, while the poor Dean often felt doomed to make bricks without straw.

Our year at home has no unusual features to report, but my mother's improved health, many guests, and the interests of my High School niece, who was a welcome addition to our household while her family was South for the winter, have made possible a busy and happy life. With one of the largest camps, Camp Devens, only twelve miles away, our little city has come very close to the war problem and now that a large house on one corner of our street has been offered to the Government as a convalescent hospital, it may come even nearer. During the fall, while the first recruits were coming to camp, there was need for much entertaining and our home was open to soldiers for many successive Sundays. During the Red Cross membership drive, in December, I had the privilege of working at headquarters. Of course we have knitted, sewed, "surgical dressed," etc. This week my mother is active in the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. drive for fifty thousand dollars for war work and if the state follows our city's example, it will double the quota.

In December, the chairmanship of the National Committee of Bureaus of Occupation fell to my lot and I am now starting on my second trip to New York and Washington in the interest of this work, which is taking on an even bigger and broader meaning under present conditions, with its greater need for trained women. This particular trip will end in Pittsburgh at the Spring Conference, on May 25th, at which time I expect to greet many of you.

My mother and I had hoped to be at Commencement, that we might see the class whom we knew for three years take their final honors and meet you all at the Alumnae dinner, but there has just come to me an opportunity for volunteer service which changes this plan. The Secretary of our Fitchburg Red Cross is going to France for an indefinite period and I am to take her place in charge of the office on June 1st. As our city is the center for Red Cross work in many surrounding towns, the office is a busy place. I consider it rare good fortune that I can try to do my bit at home where I need to be. Having been a lady of leisure (?), otherwise of "jobs" for a year, it seems quite attractive and restful to look forward to "a" job. A sentence that has become very familiar to my ears is, "You are the only person we know who has nothing to do, therefore, will you," etc. My time has been about equally divided between trying to meet half the demands and explaining more or less satisfactorily why the other half could not be met. I have sometimes felt myself still a Dean, whom I often used to define as a "Jack of all trades and a master of none."

I rejoice in all the good news of the college year and especially in the success of my successor. Dr. Acheson's call to France was an honor to the College, as well as to himself. The war activities of faculty and students are splendid and the spirit fine,—it will be good to come back and tell you all again what a satisfaction it is for me to have lived so many years at Pennsylvania College for Women. The beautiful "Resolutions" are stamped on my mind and heart and a daily incentive to better things and the loved diamond bar I delight to wear as "the outward and visible token" of your many kindnesses to me as your Dean.

Our door is ajar; come and see us!

Sincerely and affectionately,
CORA HELEN COOLIDGE.

THE ALUMNAE TEA

On Saturday, March 16th, the mid-winter tea of the Alumnae Association was held in the College Club rooms. A large number of the members of the Alumnae Association, and some associate members, who were among us for the first time, were present.

The program committee, consisting of Miss Edith Gray, '06, Mrs. Walter Ament, '13, and Mrs. J. H. McGinnity, '07, arranged the musical part of the afternoon, and a short and very enjoyable program was given by some of our own number. Miss Helen Steele, '16, and Miss Gertrude Goeddel, '14, gave piano solos, and Mrs. Ethel Williams Kiester, '14, sang.

After the program an informal business meeting was held. The report of the committee to present methods for raising money for new furniture for the drawing rooms in Berry Hall, was presented. This committee, composed of Mrs. Walter McLean, '10, Miss Dorothy Stobener, '17, Miss Florence Wilson, '11, and Miss Edna McKee, '04, gave a very thorough report, suggesting various plans. Some discussion followed and it was decided to start the fund by having a bridge and knitting party, and the president was authorized to appoint committees for this.

The afternoon closed with very informal and delightful visiting over the tea cups. The hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. A. G. Holmes, Mrs. Maurice Trimble, Mrs. W. K. Frank, Mrs. R. O. Fulton and Miss Alberta Bannerot.

THE ALUMNAE BRIDGE AND KNITTING BENEFIT

In order to provide funds for some much-needed improvements in the College drawing-rooms it was decided to have a bridge and knitting benefit at the Hotel Schenley on Saturday afternoon, April 13, 1918. In keeping with the present trend toward simplicity, all unnecessary furbelows were omitted and everyone tended strictly to her "knitting." About forty tables were in use, the bridge players and knitters being almost evenly divided.

Miss Alice Davidson, '98, was chairman of the committee in charge. Assisting were Helen Blair, '13, Elizabeth McCague, '98, Ida McCandless Stone, '98, Helen Steele, '16, Alberta Bannerot, '16, Elma McKibben McLean, '10.

The splendid efforts of this most efficient committee netted the beneficiary $370.25.

GIFT OF 1912 TO COLLEGE

At the Alumnae dinner of 1917, a splendid tribute to the memory of Dr. Lindsay was paid by the Class of 1912. It was announced that a sum of money had been raised among the members of the Class for the purchase of some much-needed books of reference for the library, Miss Brownson and Miss Coolidge to furnish the list. About fifty volumes for various departments have already been secured. These books, with the book-plate dedicated to the memory of Dr. Lindsay, form a handsome and valuable addition to the College library.

EDITORIAL

The Recorder extends this year its usual hearty greetings and best wishes to all the members and a special welcome to the new class. And with the realization of all the changes that have come to us since last we met and with an awakened understanding of responsibility, we present a message and a statement of facts, which we trust will gain the fair consideration of each and all of us.

Our Alumnae Association is a business association as well as a social one; it must be if it is to be recognized and is to cope with the interests of other associations and clubs with which it comes in contact, and it must, of necessity, be run on a business basis. Yet it has no definite financial support except the purely voluntary payment of the annual dues of $1.00, very few of which are actually and continuously paid in.

And what does this mean? It means that the treasury is always empty, that the virtual support and good name of the association, its standing in the community, the ability of the Alumnae as a body to stand shoulder to shoulder with like organizations, depends upon and is assumed by the efforts of a very few who, from year to year, carry it along, unselfishly doing more than their share in their determination to keep up the standard.

But this can not go on. It should not and it need not. We are a fairly prosperous Alumnae, thanks in a great part to our education, and, as individuals we hold our own with all comers. Yet as an association, we are seldom able to do anything for the College, to give it any little lift or be looked upon by it as a responsible part of it, simply because of the sordid fact—no money. Therefore, we are coming before you in a way which we believe you will agree is the fairest and most considerate, as well as the most general way possible. We are enclosing Pledge Cards, which tell their own story, and which, if accepted in the spirit in which they are issued, will solve the difficulty and at least assure the Treasurer of the wherewithal to publish and mail the Recorder. And we want to tell you that sometimes we have hardly been able to do even that.

Did you ever think how a little money here and a little there grows, if put together and given a chance? We have 400 Alumnae, we counted them in last year's Recorder and we know we have them. If each of us pledges only $1.00 and pays it, it would amount to $400.00; if $5.00 each, to $2,000.00. Think of it! And if $10.00 each—oh, well, there just isn't that much money.

Will you think it over before you put the card down? We don't care when in the year you pay it; we don't care in how many installments it comes in; you can send the Treasurer a nickel at a time if you want to; all we ask is your written evidence of your faith in us and your willingness to support financially, as well as morally, the Association to which you belong and the ideals for which the College stands.

You have subscribed to Liberty Bonds, yes, the first, second and third issue; you have bought Thrift Stamps and are buying them; you have paid your dollar and more to the Red Cross; you have learned to give freely on account of the great need. Will you, in the same spirit of generosity and sense of duty, heed our plea and sign our Pledge Card, remembering that every little bit helps? Will you let us ask in vain?

SIGN THE PLEDGE CARD NOW! H. B. K., '05.

CLASS LETTERS

CLASS OF 1873

Mrs. Richard Chislett reports the birth of a grandson, Richard Edwards Chislett II., on March 3, 1918.

Mrs. Thomas J. Gregg died some weeks ago, at her home in Englewood, New Jersey.

Miss Minnie Sellers has had on exhibition at Gillespie's some of her work during March and April.

Mrs. Lucy O'Hara Schoyer, who for many years lived in Geneva, Switzerland, has been making her home in New York since the outbreak of the war.

CLASS OF 1874

I can only give you one item for the Recorder concerning my class. That is the notice of the death of Mrs. Ernest F. Acheson (Jennie Stewart). Mrs. Acheson died at her home, 105 Maiden Street, Washington, Pa.—her home since her schoolhood days—some time in February. Mrs. Acheson had been in ill health for several years, so that her death was not unexpected. She had lost her husband about a year ago, followed by the death of her mother this winter. Mrs. Acheson leaves a family of five children, one son and four daughters, the son and two of the daughters being married. I am sorry that I cannot give you items of news concerning the other members of '74's class. They are all well, as far as I know, their addresses being the same as those given in last year's Recorder.

Yours sincerely,
Rebecca F. Renshaw,

CLASS OF 1877

Dollie Decker is full of patriotism. Since the war began she has given most of her time to relief work and has spent the last six weeks in volunteer service for the Y. M. C. A., at the Walter Reed Hospital, Takoma Park, Washington, D. C., in the convalescent ward, and she expects to go back ere long.

Lillian Pitcairn Taylor is just as devoted to war work as her sister. Wherever she is she "mothers the boys." She has spent three (3) months at Camp McClelland, at Anniston, Alabama, where she has given her afternoons to hospital work and devoted every evening to entertaining and mothering the boys, who gather in a room, provided by her, in the hotel. She loves the work and is glad of the opportunity to serve.

Grace Watson Warmcastle has five French orphans that she looks after and I notice has a Red Cross, also a Third Liberty Loan flag in her window.

Sue Locke Mason has two (2) stars in her service flag, and in a recent letter to your secretary writes, "I bade our sons good-bye with a smile and words of cheer, as I think their part is the harder, and we cannot afford to be selfish in our grief at this stage."

Locke Mason, the last to go, was with us for a six weeks' course in the U. of P. Ordinance Department, but at the end of one week was ordered to Camp Hancock, Augusta, Ga., and Day M., who was in camp at Jacksonville, has been transferred to a Base Hospital at Camp Upton, in the Q. M. Department.

Marguerite Fowler Richmond is a force in the great Red Cross work going on in Meadville, Pa., where they have a splendid equipment and great enthusiasm.

Sara McClelland, eldest daughter of Mrs. Rachel May Pears McClelland, is giving splendid service as a secretary in Y. W. C. A. work at Allentown, where she went with much enthusiasm and has proven herself most efficient.

Mary Miller spent two (2) months of this winter in the sunshine of Belleair Heights, Florida. Her daughter, Catharine, has been very busy trying to establish the International Institute for Foreign Women and Girls in Pittsburgh. under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A., and her son, James R. M., is devoting almost his entire time to the Food Conservation service.

It is with deep regret that "77" records the passing of May Hedges Talmadge. In college, May was a leader; in the social life and work of the women of Columbus, she was a leader; first and foremost in progressive movements among the thinkers and workers and it was only after a prolonged effort to live on that she gave up the struggle. With Mr. Talmadge and her family and friends, who loved her, we of "77" also mourn and by this expression do manifest our sympathy for them.

CLASS OF 1879

I am ever so sorry not to be able to send you a bit of news. You see I am the only living member of my class, and I lead a very quiet; uneventful life, although this last year has been full of all sorts of duties—but nothing interesting to out-siders.

I have just been notified of my expected nomination, in June, as your next President. I feel entirely unqualified for this most important office, because you younger women are so much more capable, but, as I told the nominating committee, I am certainly willing to do the best I can—for none of us can do too much for our noble Alma Mater at all times, and especially in these strenuous days, when every one's hands are full.

I do hope the Recorder this year will be most successful and I am sure it will.

Very sincerely yours,
Westenna M. Pardee (Mrs. J. M.)

to record, but I am very proud of my two boys, who are fighting for their country—Charles, at Fort Bliss, on the Mexican border, and Robert, “Somewhere,” I don’t know where, “in France.”

Annabelle McConnell writes:

I am sorry to say that there is nothing new or interesting or worthy of note in my life. I am still teaching and am interested in the Junior Red Cross work in the Wightman School. I send greetings to the Alumnae.

CLASS OF 1883

While enjoying rest and relaxation amid the delightful pine breezes of Lakewood, N. J., my duties as Class Secretary must not be neglected.

I want to thank every member of '83 for the prompt and cordial response to my letters requesting news for the Recorder, which makes the position a truly delightful one, enabling us to keep in touch with each other by this annual hand-clasp, through the medium of the pen, and the Recorder. I wish you could have all enjoyed the cheery reunions Mary, Rachel, Jennie and I have had during the past Winter.

Jennie Jackson made two visits to her aunt, Mrs. Magoffin. On the first occasion her cousin gave a delightful luncheon for her, and the second time Rachel Aiken entertained us at a very enjoyable four o'clock tea for Red Cross work. How we did enjoy these reunions, which almost make one forget the flight of time! I heard a lady remark, as she listened to our animated reminiscences of college days, “They are still girls,” and so we felt for the time.

Every message I have received from '83 rings with the note of sincere patriotism—Red Cross and War Work seems uppermost in every mind.

Rachel Aiken has been working with her accustomed energy in connection with the Twentieth Century Club Red Cross Auxiliary.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Jennie Jackson is a famous knitter, and I can testify to her skill in turning a sock heel, for she gave me valuable instruction along that line.

Anna McCullough Ogden writes from Pinehurst, N. C., whither she had fled for a little rest from her onerous duties as chairman of the Greensburg Branch of the Red Cross.

Blanche Evans Rust, we are glad to know, is enjoying much better health since her recent surgical operation, and has plunged into Red Cross work in connection with the College Club of Cleveland, O., finding, as she expresses it, "that the least heart-breaking days are the busy days."

Nellie Weyman Haines writes that she and her family are well and busy, interested in "Red Cross work, food conservation and every possible thing which will help our Government in the struggle." She adds, "We surely will win, for right is might, and God is over all."

Anna Lysle McLain is also busy in patriotic work, and writes: "Let us hope and pray for the end of this awful war."

Mary Acheson Spencer adds a varied touch to the usual record. She says: "The year which has elapsed since your last request for news has brought me changes and acquisitions. Marcus has become pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, of Washington, D. C.; Charles has been accepted for aviation service and is waiting his call. Three new grand-children have come to me—'Molly' Campbell Spencer, John Grant Curry and Francis Bailey Nimick, Jr. I have purchased a four-acre fruit farm on Coraopolis Heights, where a summer cottage is being erected. Christmas brought all my flock together—eighteen of us! Not much danger of my getting into a rut!"

In addition, let me add that Mary still graces the position of President of the Alumnae Association for the second consecutive year.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

With best wishes for all, and with the hope that each one of us may be enabled to do her full share as we "come to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

Georgina G. Negley,
Secretary.

CLASS OF 1884

Gertrude Walker Holmes, of the Class of 1884, reports her inability to make the members of her class respond to her request for "news"—but she modestly adds that she herself has knitted thirty pairs of socks, if we care to print that. Indeed we do, and are proud of it!

CLASS OF 1889

The Class of 1889 originally were seven, and now, so far as my knowledge goes, we are only two—Mary Bidwell Breed, who is Dean of the Margaret Morrison Carnegie School, and myself, teaching art in the South High School. Two of our number have died and the other three I am unable to locate, having written to the only address I know and receiving no reply. The two who are here, send greetings to the Alumni.

Elizabeth C. Riggs.

CLASS OF 1892

The first son of the Class of '92 to answer our country's call, is Maurice Trimble, Jr., who has just completed his sophomore year at Princeton and expects to enlist at once in some branch of the service.

Mary Trimble is at present enrolled at our own P. C. V., but is planning to enter the Junior Class at Wellesley, in 1919.

John Bryant Barker is in this year's graduating class at Shadyside Academy.

We all regret the very serious illness of Mrs. Hays, mother of Nettie Hays Flack, but we are glad that she is now improving in health and Nettie, who has been with her, in Avalon, since last January, hopes to be able soon to take her mother to her home in Parnassus. Nettie writes that it will be impossible for her to be at the Alumnae meeting this June, but she wants to be remembered to all the girls.

Sarah Milholland is just as busy and as enthusiastic over her work as ever and down on the Virginia shore, she is surely "doing her bit."

She seems to realize the flight of time since she has seen any of the class, for in a letter received some little time ago she asks, "Do any of the girls wear glasses yet? Do they have a few gray hairs? My eyes have done splendidly, for with the hundreds of books read and fine needle-work and crochet they are still good. But there are some gray hairs in this last year."

Sarah Trimble is assisting in the work of the Women's Council of National Defense. She is also Secretary of the Ben Avon Branch of the Red Cross.

Etta Easton Martin has taken a regular business course this last winter and besides has given a great deal of time to the Collegiate Vocational Bureau, of which she is treasurer. She sends us a short report of the work they are doing, which has increased considerably during the last year, owing to the demands of the war.

The Secretary of the Class has lately undertaken the Treasury of the Squirrel Hill Auxiliary of the Red Cross.

Hannah and Carrie and Sarah Milholland separated from the rest of us and from each other, in three different states of the Union. All sent greetings and regretted that they could not be with us on our anniversary last year. But though they are far away, they are often in our thoughts and we will hope for a class reunion in the near future.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1894

My Dear Editors:

One of the many sure signs of spring is the arrival of a polite permission to "write something" to the Alumnae Recorder. Every year, when I read the various letters from a disappointingly few members of our Alumnae, I register a promise to myself that "next year" I certainly will write one myself, even though I must invent the material. The news from others is so interesting to me that I feel ashamed of my dull career that I cannot add a few paragraphs. Besides, I have served on the Recorder Board, either two or three times, and consequently have experienced the feelings of an editor toward the rest of my generation.

Isn't it a shame that one with the will to write a small contribution should be absolutely devoid of a subject? The principal items wanted usually are change of address, engagement, marriage, or the arrival of a new baby. I have figured frequently in the Recorder in those respects—five times in the first, once each in the second and third, and four times in the last; so, really, I have been a good subject as a space-filler. This must have been a dull year; for I have not moved (and hope not again for a long, long time) and my family has remained the same size as to numbers, but not in stature.

So far as I know, nothing worth printing has been accomplished by the Class of '94. Like the Old Shoe Lady, we have so many children we don't know what to do—first; for we know very well the whole list of "things to do." And, perhaps, that is the reason the world has heard so little about us all. Our class is in a position betwixt and between, where we are no longer thrilled by a new engagement, nor harrowed by a broken one. Neither are we harrassed by a teething baby, nor unduly puffed up by the arrival of a new one. Only one—Mela Patterson Porter—has reached the honored stage of having a son in the service of his country (George Porter is with the photographic section); and none of us enjoy the absolute satisfaction which seems to come with the possession of a grand child.

Most of us spend our days—and, indeed, a part of the nights—trying to solve the problem of educating, dressing, and feeding a growing family; and, believe me, the food problem is a growing one just now. A few of the '94 children are old enough to go away to school; most of them are of public school age, and a few of us are lucky enough yet to have a small child left at home. So far as I know, I have the youngest class baby—one who is just mastering the wonderful arts of walking and talking.

Bess Raney, in New Castle, has the largest family of any of us—two fine, capable daughters, and three jolly, fat sons. Florence Aull is living in Wayne, with her parents, and bringing up four. Just this last spring May Krepps left Pittsburgh with her three to live in the vicinity of Philadelphia, where Mr. Holding's business called him.

I recently had a letter from Mrs. Baldwin, the mother of Eleanor Baldwin Harlow, who died some ten years ago. She left two sons, James and Robert, who are now somewhere about fifteen. But they have not visited Pittsburgh and have not met their mother's classmates

All the rest of the class are busily engaged in home work, church work and, just now, war work. Perhaps, in time to come, we will get around to accomplishing some of the wonders hoped for when we were in college. Maybe yes; maybe no.

CLASS OF 1896

We have a very interesting item of news about the Class of '96, and that is that Edith Edeburn, besides editing the town paper in Mt. Dora, Florida, is also TOWN CLERK. Just what the office involves, I do not know, but we feel greatly honored in having one of our class in such a position. Bess

Davidson is deep in Red Cross work in Ottawa, and yours sincerely is trying to combine Red Cross work and the care of a very lively family, greatly addicted to measles, chicken-pox and such things.

I will not bother you with our class register, as I am looking after that part of the Recorder myself. Am hoping the girls will respond well to your request for news and correct addresses, and I shall be very glad to have the latter, whenever you can send them to me.

Sincerely,

Anne Robinson Cooper (Mrs. R. C.)

CLASS OF 1897

Class of '97 sends greetings to the Alumnae and best wishes to you who have worked so hard to make this issue of the Recorder such a success.

CLASS OF 1901

C'est toujours le meme refrain to the request of the secretary for class news. Absolutely no items of interest.

From her western home, Maud Taylor suggests that the Alumnae Recorder readers be referred to her letter of half a dozen years ago (just as if any one kept a file of 'em) "It is pretty awful," she continues, "never to do anything different, isn't it? But my enthusiasm over my nice, big room at the Library never seems to wane. It looks quite festive, now, with its big flag and colored war posters and pussy willows and daffodils. Portland is the distributing center for camps in the northwest, so the books for the soldiers come in an endless stream and are fixed up with pockets, book plates and cards in one of the large rooms on the third floor. We wander in whenever we have a few minutes to spare, and do whatever the signs above the books say.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

"Of course, I have been knitting madly, as has everyone else. Fourteen of our library pages have enlisted, and we get such interesting letters from them, and also from the librarians who have gone to Washington to do war service work."

Carrie Kim's home circle was broken last February by the death of her father. At present, she is serving on the committee to revise the constitution of our Alumnae Association.

Helen Sands Ferry has her hands well filled in trying to bring up her little lad, "Bob," to be a useful citizen. while at the same time she is holding a secretary's position in one of our schools; and snatching odd moments to "do her bit" by knitting for the Red Cross.

As for myself, I am passing through a five week's quarantine with the unpatriotic placard "German Measles" at the front entrance. Three stirring children, not one whit sick, and inheriting a goodly portion of original sin, demand much more of my time and patience than any intricate mathematical problem of college days.

Rosetta M. Houston.

CLASS OF 1902

The past year brought to 1902, the first class sorrow in the death of Mary Blair. Those of us who knew and loved her tried, while she lived to make her know how deep that love for her was. Nothing we could say now could add to the immortal beauty of her life, which remained so beautiful and sweet through overwhelming misfortunes and sorrow. We whom she loved, were made better by her presence, and the influence of her spirit will endure.

Life has brought to the others of us just the average ups and downs. Margaret McClelland Herriott moved, some months ago, to Grove City, where her four stirring children find living delightful and manage to keep their mother from finding life a gray monotony. Elsie Braun Searing has moved her lares and penates to Roup Street, which seems to be a P. C. W. rendezvous. We thus just escape the three removes which are said to be as good or as bad as a fire. Mary Shrom has taken the name of Gay since the Recorder last appeared, and we hope is living up to her name.

Helen Dickey paid us an all-too-short visit in the fall, just a few weeks after Helen Sherrard had "come out of the West" with her dear little daughter. Margaret McKinney merely passed through the city, so we had a partial class re-union. Helen Sherrard is at present sojourning in California.

Grace, Clara and Bess are all busy with home duties, and Annie M. Young speaks for herself in the following letter:

Honolulu, T. H., May 1, 1918.

My Dearest Elsie:—

When your letter came I thought "It's dear of her to want something for the Recorder and I'll send it at once," which I am accordingly doing—immediately, after six weeks! That's the result of having eaten too many lotus leaves down here in the tropics. It's nothing to have two or three years elapse between one's intention and performance. For instance, every June when the Recorder comes, I say to myself, "I must write and tell them where I live," and lo! it's now nine years since we lived in Cottage Grove, and, thanks to my negligence, the same old address greets me on every communication from P. C. W.! Can your brisk Pittsburgh intellect grasp such sluggishness? Nine years to drop a postcard saying, "Please address Alewa Heights, Box 638." The psychological explanation of this extreme procrastination is—as everyone who has once lived here will tell you—that time in this latitude appears to pass with the greatest rapidity, months seeming to make way with themselves as swiftly as do days in America. We put something off till tomorrow and when what seems like tomorrow comes, tropical time has whirled us into year after next. No one but a Senior at P. C. W. can be expected to unravel the wherefore of this mystery, but it is nevertheless true.

Having written this long introduction and reached the body of the essay, I find I have absolutely nothing to say—no news that's fit to print. So instead of news, I'm going to preach, which will make everybody hate me.

If I were responsible for getting material for the June Recorder, (which, thank my lucky stars, etc.), I'd guide the mind of each alumna along certain channels by sending her a printed questionnaire, with blanks to be filled in, something like this:

What, besides passing your nth birthday, have you done this year that you never did before?.....

If you have any children, what is the special bent of each one, the thing which that child seems meant to do or become?.

What are you doing to develop this natural bent?.....

If you could go to college over again and take just one course, what would it be?.....

Do you think that in college your energies along any line or lines of study were misdirected? Along what lines?.....

If you could, after all the years since graduation, offer one constructive criticism to your Alma Mater,—make the one change in it, or the one addition to it, which you think should be made,— what would it be?

In your life today, what work do you most enjoy doing?.....

What is your pet hobby?.....

What is your one great ambition, the one thing you most long to "carry through"?.....

Personally, I should love to hear the answers to these questions from all the girls I used to know in college. Could I meet the girls, I'd certainly ask them just these things in less formal form. And I believe that for shedding light on our friends' physical, mental and moral histories—past, present and future—concise answers to some such questions as these would be worth volumes of autobiographical letters (to say nothing of the money saved the Recorder on printers' bills.) We know our old friends' names, and can easily discover where they live, and may safely assume that—being women—they are all more or less engaged in housekeeping (ever sacred profession). But, being about six thousand miles away from the nearest of them, and having seen only one P. C. W. girl (Madge Sproull) in seven years, I long to know something of the "true inwardness" of their lives, now that they are mature women; and the Recorder is my one connecting link and only hope. I wish all the "old" teachers would write letters to the Recorder, without any questionnaire; their minds need no guiding.

There is a certain something which I'm anxious to see brought about, and that is for Pennsylvania College to become a part of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae. In Honolulu our erstwhile "College Club"—having two hundred members, from thirty American colleges and universities—became this year the "Honolulu Branch of the A. C. A." Those of the two hundred members who are alumnae of colleges eligible to membership in the A. C. A. are national members of our re-organized club; the rest non-national. Now, behold the beautiful logic: YOUR sister alumna (meaning me) can become a national member by virtue of one year's graduate work done at Cornell, or one year's graduate work done at Northwestern, but cannot become such a member by virtue of four year's work done at P. C. W., whose A. B. degree was accepted by both these larger institutions as equivalent to their own! Neither Cornell nor Northwestern is my Alma Mater, I have no degree from them, and I will NOT join the A. C. A. in any such a manner. "'Tisn't the pie, it's the principle."

Just exactly what can we alumnae do to make P. C. W. eligible to A. C. A. membership before next commencement? It can't be such a difficult task, for P. C. W. undoubtedly has the necessary scholastic requirements. If endowment stands in the way, that's easy: That's only money and (in this day of drives) we can surely raise that. We have no RIGHT to remain inert and allow the alumnae of other colleges to take precedence over ours, merely because of red tape and technicalities. Tell me what I can do personally to help, for I'm far from headquarters and do not know.

Here are a few facts which need no comment:

Cornell University has in its Arts Course, a passing grade of sixty, and requires one hundred and twenty hours for graduation.

Pennsylvania College has a passing grade of sixty, and requires one hundred and twenty hours for graduation.

Furthermore, Cornell will grant its A. B. to a girl taking the requisite number of hours in her one favorite study, (I know such a girl who was graduated on four years of her pet chemistry and nothing else). These suggestive facts, coupled with our non-eligibility as A. C. A.'s (?) make me what the vulgar and uneducated would call "mad."

I just this moment opened at random the last Journal of the A. C. A., and the very first paragraph my eyes fell on was this:

"William Smith College—Began its ninth year with a slight decrease in attendance, eighty-four this year, as compared with ninety-four last." etc.

Ye gods! No aspersions on the Billy Smithereens (wherever they may be). They evidently stand up for their academic rights and perquisites better than we do, and hence are admirable. But, by the Purple and White, let's get busy!

Just one other thing along this same line: P. C. W. girls who have done good, scholarly work along literary and scientific lines are just as much ENTITLED to the possession of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Pi keys as are the girls of other colleges who have done similar work. Let's see to it that OUR girls get their rights and their keys and their credits, no matter how hard we may have to work to accomplish this result. I am an old, old lady, and I've traveled far and I know that in this wicked world such baubles as college keys do count after all. It isn't simply because Phi Beta and Sigma Pi reflect honor upon the girls who wear them, but because these girls reflect honor upon their Alma Mater. There is no virtue in our being modest vi-o-lets where the fair name and fame of Pennsylvania College for Women are concerned.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

With warmest aloha to all, I am

Yours for P. C. W.,

Annie M. Young, '02.

(The question raised by Mrs. Young's letter, "Why Pennsylvania College is not a member of the A. C. A.," can be answered by the terse phrase, "Lack of endowment." The academic standing of the institution assures its eligibility now that the preparatory school—Dilworth Hall—has been discontinued. The Board of Trustees is fully alive to the vital need of Pennsylvania College for adequate endowment and plans are being matured that will, we trust, place the College in the position to which its academic work entitles it.—John C. Acheson.)

Edith Stanton, who is still connected with the National Y. W. C. A., sends the following letter from New York:

Your letter suggesting that I write you about the War Work of the Young Women's Christian Association for "The Recorder," reached me just as I had left one of our Hostess Houses at Camp Pike, Arkansas. The Hostess House is an interesting proposition. The building is usually simple and attractive where women and girls may meet their friends when they come to visit the cantonment for the day, where they may find a meal at a very reasonable price, and rest rooms.

Some of the foreign speaking women have had tragic times during the last year. They came to this country understanding that their men folks were not compelled to fight. Then the draft was put into effect. Many of them tried to follow the men and came to the camps to visit them or remain nearby, thinking they could find work. The Young Women's Christian Association has felt called upon to assume the responsibility for these women. It has sent interpreters to the camps where foreign speaking women might be expected, and has tried to be of help in a practical way in finding work for these women nearby, or when this was impossible in urging them to return to their homes. They have also helped them to get in touch with the men whom they have come to see at the camps for the foreign names have proven a difficult job for the officers and people concerned about visitors.

The Hostess Houses are never erected except at the request of the commanding officers but our records show that 41 hostess houses are in operation, some located in the largest camps of the country, 27 in process of completion, and 8 more have been requested at the present time. The big central room in the Hostess House is usually fitted with curtains and furnishings which have some color and the reason for this is easily understood, when one is told that the soldiers will come all the way to the city to stand on the corners and see the colors in the women's dresses because the everlasting gray and brown of the cantonments becomes so monotonous.

I wish there were time to tell you of the club work and Patriotic League work that is being done in small towns near cantonments where are always to be found the high school and younger girls who are so likely to have their "heads turned" by the khaki uniforms. Their patriotism will readily find expression in better ways if they are given bigger interests and are shown that there is something for them to do and that certain standards of dignity are as necessary with soldiers as with the same men before donning the uniforms. This work is not limited to the towns which have no Associations but if you drop into many city Associations you will find sailors and soldiers being entertained at simple evening parties where everyone is having a good time in big groups rather than by twos in separate corners.

I ought not to close without telling you a little of our work in France and Russia. We have only eight workers in Russia but even these have started work in four places, although with the present uncertainty there, it is difficult to hold this. In France we have about 40 women and they are our best and most experienced secretaries. What we are doing there may be of permanent standing and may some time be turned over to the French women to continue. Some of the French women are working 11 hours a day in the munition factories and in many instances, have no place for the noon meal which they bring from home, unless it is to eat as they walk or sit about outdoors no matter whether it is cold or rainy. We have tried to open some large cafeterias where they will find food at reasonable prices, a warm room and friendly sympathy if that is what they need. Our War Council has also opened a hotel called the 'Hotel Petrograd' in Paris for American women who must be in Paris and have no other place to go. It has also opened some small huts near the base hospitals so that the American nurses may have a place to go when off duty for just a few hours. There is no other place outside the hospital and the terrific strain within the hospital walls will soon be a serious matter.

We have also been sending over some recreation leaders because our secretaries who have been over there say that the strain upon the French women during these years has been so terrible that they must learn to relax and play a little or some of them will not live through another winter.

I do not know whether you know that the National Organization is but twelve years old, although the first Association was organized fifty-two years ago in Boston. These last twelve years have been spent in making a strong national organization which extends over the entire country and which makes it possible to get in touch with the more than 1,000 branches within a very short space of time through the eleven field committees. Had it not been for these years of foundation work, it never would have been possible for the National Board to have called together a War Council of one hundred women in less than two months after war was declared and be actually putting out workers into the field to see what responsibility the Young Women's Christian Association should have toward girls and women throughout the country. So much of it has been emergency work and the problems met have been unprecedented.

You may know that the War Council asked the people of the country for four million dollars last fall to do this work and secured enough over that amount to carry it until next fall. I had the pleasure of executing the drive in one field consisting of Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Washington. Our allotment was $680,000, but we succeeded in 'going over the top' to the extent of $825,000. The response was most enthusiastic and I really enjoyed the experience very much in spite of the fact that most people do not get up much enthusiasm about raising money.

Very sincerely yours,

Edith N. Stanton.

CLASS OF 1903

This is our fifteenth anniversary—strange as it may seem to most of us. We have little time to think of the flight of years and past events in these days of rapid change and action. Our hands and thoughts are so busy with the all important present and our eyes are so anxiously gazing into the future, that we have little time for reminiscences. However, when we stop to think a bit, we know how far we have traveled along life's pathway, tasting most of its joys and sorrows, and gradually climbing upward through the maze of experience towards the fulness and meaning of life.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

I have no startling news to report of the Class of 1903. Most of the girls seem to be giving along in their appointed ways—only with new duties added.

The nearest approach to a wedding in the class was that of Anna Hunter's sister, "Bess," who was quietly married at home in December. Anna and Hilda are still busy with their school duties. Eleanor has given up most of her club work to take care of her business interests, and spends much of her time motoring to New York, Washington and elsewhere. Anna Myra is managing her family and household affairs in "These days of the high cost of living." Her oldest daughter, Jane, is ten, but already she is deep in the whirl of life as most of her time out of school is taken up with dancing, school music, lessons, etc. Hattie is so wonderfully busy with training her five children in the best ways to enjoy life and make the most of it, and with many patriotic and civic enterprises. She has had a most active part in developing the Phoebe Brashear Club and Home in Carick and has written and read several of her own poems to celebrate events of public interest. She is trying to develop the proper college spirit in her daughters by bringing them up to the college for the plays and making them familiar with the college and college life. They are also taught to buy Liberty Bonds which they are to use for their college education.

Sara is directing most of the patriotic and civic enterprises of Herkimer. In a smaller city, the training and executive ability of college women count for much and are greatly appreciated and in demand. Sara gives cheerfully of her time and service to all worthy causes. One morning she addressed 250 envelopes, into which she put, in the afternoon,

ALUMNAE RECORDER

1,685 assorted penny packages of flower and vegetable seeds—for school gardens. She says “What do you think of this for a name—Szczerbaniewicz? One of the many I copied this morning. None worse than this, many about as bad, and all rather strange—as the school is in a foreign section.

I have had no response from Ruth and Mary, and consequently suppose all is well with them.

For myself, I have had much to do in many ways, learning how to gather up the threads of my life again. I have tried to readjust myself to life in Pittsburgh and am glad of my many friends and interests here. The college has helped, as it brings many of us together oftener than might otherwise happen, and it gives us a common cause and interest.

Jennie McSherry Smith.

NOTES OF 1904

The members of 1904, as in countless other cases, have been caught during the past year in the current of the war and have been carried somewhat away from their usual moorings.

Edna McKee has devoted much time to Red Cross work, having charge of an auxiliary in the city, which turns out hospital supplies and knitting. Edna by plying the needles every evening has established a record for individual work in making sweaters, helmets, wristlets, etc.

Elizabeth Dearborn's brother “Hal” has entered the aviation corps and at present is stationed at Minneola. Elizabeth thinks a coal famine is worse in zero weather than any sugar one could be, for she felt the pinch of want of that combustible during the tie-up this winter in New York. She and, her neighbors feared it might be necessary to give up trying to keep the individual hearth-stones warm and each take his pittance of coal and unite it with the others in the stove at the town hall. Fortunately the sun shone in time.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Rebekah Eggers has had the oversight of three hundred and fifty comfort kits made at Fifth Avenue High School this year. The design was original with Rhea and was so complete that it received the highest recommendation from the Red Cross authorities. Rhea has a "Captain" brother in the medical service at Camp Gordon, who, when he goes "over" will be in charge of the tuberculosis patients. This year she had the honor of being one of three chosen to review the German text-books in use in the Pittsburgh High Schools and to discard those commendatory of Prussianism. Her spare time was spent in acquiring Spanish, of which there may be more to tell later.

Jessie Gray continues as Dean of the Flagler Preparatory School. She, too, has taken up the study of Spanish.

Helen Larimer has had a year of impaired health, ending in an operation and a two months' sojourn in the Pittsburgh Hospital. All indications now point to a good but slow recovery.

CLASS OF 1907

1907 has not had much excitement during the year, nor caused much. We wish one of our number could set the world on fire, but see no sign of it as yet. We have come to the conclusion that we were intended to fill up the ranks as privates, but one does not have to be in the limelight to find plenty to do these days.

Mary McKee reports a very happy winter at Hollins College, Va., where she has been teaching science. Science, however, is not her only joy, for she tells of long walks across the country and over the hills, and seems to take great delight in the Virginia scenery. She not only spends her spare minutes knitting sox, but is considered an expert in picking up lost stitches for the pupils, and besides all this Mary can give you the latest recipes for all the various kinds of war breads.

Her latest message is that she will be Assistant Professor of Chemistry at Connecticut College, New London, Conn.

Ellen McKee has changed her place of occupation to Wilkesburg. No doubt she is quite happy to be able to cross the street, and be at her office, which must be quite a treat when one considers the transportation facilities of the past cold winter. Ellen's attention is also directed to her war garden.

Grace Stevenson McKibben did not honor the East End with her presence this winter—that is, her permanent presence. We had hoped that the winter she spent up here before, would prove so pleasant, that she could not resist us—but not so. But she is just as busy in Coraopolis as she can be, for when one keeps house, with all the accompanying cares and precautions and substitutions that this day demands, one can be kept fairly busy.

Edith Allison Boyd is still in East Orange, and we don't know of any very unusual happening in her household, but no doubt there have been plenty of them, for two youthful members of a household can usually keep things lively and a mother busy. Edith's "kiddies" are delightful, and the whole class claims a share of them.

Clara Niebaum has spent another pleasant winter in Aspinwall, teaching in the High School. Can you imagine Clara tracing comparisons, between the present war and Caesar's campaigns in Gaul? Such does she do. Every time we see Clara she is working at "another sweater."

Madge Sproull has been spending a most interesting year in the Orient. She left Pittsburgh last July and sailed from San Francisco for Honolulu, where she spent a month. Then she continued her way onward to Japan. After visiting various points in Japan, she went to Korea. From here our last word of her came, and the plan then was to visit China and perhaps the Philipines and return to Japan. We expect

Madge home this summer, and are all more than eager to see her and hear all the details of her trip.

Bess Johnson McGinnity is about to experience a new thrill in the housekeeping art—that of moving. As this is written she is in the unenviable plight of receiving advice from all those of greater experience, as to how to pack, and what to pack, and when to pack. If she is still in evidence when this comes out in print, it is obvious that she has survived the ordeal, and will be able to be classed among those who give advice in the future.

Bessie Johnson McGinnity, 07, Secretary.

CLASS OF 1908

The class of 1908 proudly announces the fact that it is ten years old this year. Unfortunately neither of the out-of-town girls can be with us, so I'm afraid we won't do very much celebrating. We are all disappointed not to have a reunion this year, but some June time before long we really hope to have one.

Virginia Marshall Dann has had poor health this winter but is getting to feel like herself again.

Lilla Greene Simmons has a new little son, George Roger, who arrived the eleventh of April. Foster is delighted with his small brother and talks about what a "cute little pet" his brother is. Lilla is honored by having her brother, a captain in the A. E. F. in France.

Myrtle Grow Blakely we haven't heard from since the last class letter, but at that writing she was very busy and happy with lots of interesting things to tell about the three little Blakelys.

Mary Mellon McJunkin has also another son, whose birthday was the twelfth of November. Richard Hugh is the newcomer's name and his big brother, William, is already energetically training him.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Our increase (in numbers) in ten years has been really interesting, hasn't it? Just think, we have added four husbands, seven sons and two daughters. So it has been an eventful decade, and with all these young ideas learning to shoot, the next one will probably be even more so.

M. M. McJ.

Dear Classmates of 1911:—

This surely has been an interesting year for both me and Mr. Horvitz. Although I cannot call this my work yet my life is so closely entwined with it that I really feel as if it were my work. Mr. Horvitz, as you know, is connected with the War Service Commission at Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill.

Mr. Horvitz's work admits of three definite aspects—viz.: Religious, social and personal service.

The religious work is carried on in connection with the Y. M. C. A. work. He takes care of having the various rabbis come down from Chicago who give the Sunday services for all Jewish boys in the camp. These services are held in the Y. M. C. A. building. We certainly cannot speak too highly of the wonderful work that is being done by this organization, and the wonderfully broad spirit maintained by it.

The personal service consists of visiting the boys with whom we have come in close touch through our Hall in Rockford of which I am going to tell you later. This work, of course, can be done by me as well as by Mr. Horvitz for the boys do so love to have a woman visit them when they are ill. Not only myself but other Rockford women go too and we usually take a supply of goodies, magazines, etc. I, myself, have even had the sacred privilege of writing love letters for one of the boys who was suffering from a fractured arm. Besides the hospital work Mr. Horvitz is the medium through which the families may hear about and from their boys. Boys are sometimes very careless creatures and do not always realize how worried the people at home are when they do not hear from them. One of the signs at the Hall which meets with every mother's approval is "Have You Written Home Today?" Many other things too numerous to mention come under this classification. The ladies go out to camp in numbers to do mending for the boys so you see there is sufficient to keep one busy.

To my mind one of the most important things is the work done in the town. As Captain Sherman says who is head of the war camp activities at Camp Grant, "we can take care of the morale of the army while we have the boys in Camp but it's up to you people to make things attractive enough to draw the boys to your places of recreation while in Rockford. Of course there is always room for improvement but we do feel that much has been accomplished in that respect when we consider that only six months has passed since the opening of the Headquarters. The Headquarters consists of quite a large hall in which we have two pool tables for the use of the soldiers. Then we have three large reading rooms where the boys find books of various kinds, daily papers and late magazines. There are three comfortably furnished ladies' rooms, where the boys can entertain mothers, sisters and sweethearts who come from Chicago to spend the day. As yet we have no "Hostess House" at Camp Grant so these ladies' rooms are certainly appreciated.

We have organized the women of Chicago to send to our Headquarters every week-end home-made cakes, cookies and other goodies and they have been so generous in their response that we always have on hand cakes, cookies, candies, dates, nuts, and all manner of goodies. We have in charge a refreshment committee of which I, myself, am a member and any evening, especially at the week end, as that is when the large number of boys get their passes, we serve hot coffee, sometimes sandwiches, cakes, candies, etc. Some times we have organized parties, dances, concerts, and other times we just allow the boys to have their own fun. To our Hall come Jew and Gentile alike and we are proud to say that there is a remarkable good fellowship shown by all.

For all these things not one cent is accepted from any soldier and no boy is made to feel that he is accepting charity. It is done in just the same spirit as you and I would invite these boys to our homes to have a cup of tea with us. Although I must say tea is not quite so popular as coffee with the boys, as that is one thing that is poor at camp.

This is my small contribution to war work and I only wish I could make it much, much larger in this great world war.

With lots of love to you all,

Affectionately yours,

Gertrude W. Horvitz, '11.

CLASS OF 1911

Let's pretend we are all together once again in Miss Brownson's classroom and give an account of ourselves as she calls the roll.

Clarissa Blakeslee—Housekeeping and keeping open house for all classmates who may stray to Philadelphia. She seldom writes but is apt to materialize at the most unexpected times and places.

Sara Carpenter—Substituting in the Washington Seminary since April, where she is finishing out the term for her sister. We hope Sara got her house-cleaning done early this year.

Mabel Crowe—Teaching Latin in the Fifth Avenue High School and bringing up a small daughter in the way she should go to enter P. C. W. Mrs. Baird finds the latter the more exacting profession.

Alice Darrah—Has been managing a Baking Powder Company, but has retired from the business world to take care of her mother.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Irma Diescher—Having given up her position in the Hazelwood Branch Library, she wintered in California. She has now taken up the profession of housekeeper and is studying music for variety and spice.

Frances Gray—Little Jimmie is Mrs. Everhart's career now and a most engrossing one he is. Library work has no charms for her.

Margaret Greene—After a Greene and White wedding in August, at which Clarissa was bridesmaid, Mr. and Mrs. White went to Ossining, N. Y., to reside in a charming bungalow with a refractory coal range. In the interims of struggling with it, Margaret lends her talents to the Red Cross.

Minerva Hamilton—Proves you never can tell. Our literary light is now analyzing coal at the Mellon Institute for the H. Koppers Co.

Belle McClymonds—Mrs. Marshall has had a sad and a glad year. We all sympathize with her for the loss of her mother and rejoice at the coming of little James McClymonds Marshall, who arrived April 28.

Maggie May McCollough—Is teaching History in the upper classes of the Turtle Creek High School and yet finds time to knit sweaters galore.

Rachel McQuiston—Mrs. Kaspar is a busy mother and housekeeper, but living in Washington is right in the center of things and so cannot refrain from being still busier with volunteer work for the Government.

Edith Medley—Has left the teaching profession to its fate of manufacturing brains where nature has left a vacuum and is now enjoying life in the accounting department of the Pittsburgh Board of Education.

Edna Reitz—Has been teaching (whisper it) German in the Sewickley High School, but is now patriotically instructing the youth of that school in Mathematics. (She likes it better, anyhow).

Rosalie Supplee—Is the Social Worker at the Pittsburgh Maternity Dispensary. At last she has gotten down to first principles in reforming society.

Elma Trussell—After trying by turns teaching and stenography, and finding something lacking in each, Elma has now found the happy solution. She is teaching Stenography and Typewriting in the Union High School at Knoxville.

Gertrude Wayne—Mrs. Horvitz, our war worker, has sent an interesting account of what she is doing to make the world safe for Democracy.

Florence Wilson—Sophomore English in the Wilkesburg High School, is Florence's vocation; her recreation is knitting.

CLASS OF 1912

Dear Recorder:—

It hardly seems possible that a year has passed since I wrote my last letter to the Recorder. Since then a number of exciting things have happened.

The first event of interest was the marriage of our class president, Mary Rebecca Hardy, to Mr. Harry W. Reed. The wedding took place in June and after their honeymoon, the Reeds went to live in Detroit. May has made two trips to Pittsburgh, one in the fall and another at Christmas time.

Edith Chaddock was married in December to Mr. Lloyd Nichols. They are living on Highland Avenue.

We have one engagement to announce, that of Elvira Estep to Mr. Thomas Brainerd Coburn. As Mr. Coburn is in the Service, their wedding plans are indefinite.

Frances Cameron Doane has a son, George Duncan Doan, who was born on July 10th. Frances says he is a charming little fellow, but so full of life that he occupies every minute of her time.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Eleanor Davis Woodside, also has a son, who was born on February 12th. He is called Nevin after his father. He surely must be a wonderful baby for his fond mother says he is already talking. The Woodsides are now occupying their new home on Ninth Street, Oakmont.

Florence Bickel Swan is very much interested in her small daughter, Dorothy Elizabeth, who will soon be three years old. Dorothy is our class baby and a charming bit of humanity, indeed.

Maude Shutt Cochran has been training her young son in the way that he should go. Paul, who is now a year old, leaves his mother few idle moments. We are hoping to see Maude at the Alumnae Dinner this year.

Martha Sands Kirtland is still living at Poland and is devoting a great deal of time to Red Cross work.

This year brought sorrow to one of our girls. With sympathy, we record the death of Martha Kim's father, on January 31st.

1912 still has a goodly representation in the teaching profession. Our pedagogues are Daisy Sharp, Martha Kim, Helen Grooms, Elvira Estep, Calla Stahlman, Mary Keen and Lillian McHenry.

Mary Gray is still connected with the Children's Department of the Carnegie Library.

Hazel Hickson completed a business course and has recently been acting as Dr. Rule's private Red Cross Secretary.

Lillie Lindsay is taking a nursing course at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York. It is special war work. She reports that she is working very hard but finds the course most interesting.

Cosette Spence is still very enthusiastic about her work in the Juvenile Court at Philadelphia. We were delighted to have her with us at the Alumnae Dinner, last June, and to hear her interesting account of her work.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Esther O'Neill, as usual, finds a multitude of things to occupy her time.

Beulah Pierce seems to have joined the leisure class. She has spent the winter traveling and at present, is visiting in the South.

The Secretary has "nothing of interest" to report. She has passed a happy, busy winter in her new home.

Frances Davies Kerr, 1912.

CLASS OF 1913

Dear Sister Alumnae:—

Greetings from the class of 1913 now full-fledged alumnae of a five years' growth! Scarcely any of us knew so much could really happen in so short a time as has happened since that day in June, 1913, when we left the ranks of students and entered into the joys of "alumnaeships," and we are looking forward to a real, rollicking reunion this year, when we can talk it all over. Of course, the Recorder helps us to keep in touch with one another but there are always so many, many interesting things the girls will not entrust to print.

Our first reunion will not be without its cup of sorrow, however. This last year has brought us our sharpest grief in the death of Lucy Layman Lawrence, our class president during part of our college life and ever since graduation. The news came with such a shock that it is still hard to realize it can be true. This is the first break in our ranks and it seems to have come so very early.

Lucy leaves a young son, John Mason, who entered this world just too late for mention in last year's Recorder; and besides this baby we have one other to introduce, Robert Buka, Jr., Esther's curly-headed "hopeful." This youth claims as his birthdate July fourth, which we think augurs well for his future in the "land of the free and the home of the brave." Esther is a truly proud and happy mother.

The other babies of our class are gaining in wisdom and stature almost daily, so their mothers report. Florence Kingsbacher's son must keep his whole household at his feet judging from the news we get of him, and Faye Atkinson's "Peggy" is walking around getting into mischief everywhere, even trying coal for a diet. That must have been a most expensive food for a New York baby this last winter. By the way, did you know Faye was now living in New York? She is getting to be a regular globe trotter.

Emma continues to shroud herself in silence—we wish she would speak. Laila is just as good a housekeeper and homemaker as she used to be—only more so.

Helen Craig still abides on the North Side, and is actually learning to like it, what time she has at home after her war work is done.

Christine spent a few weeks with us in March and is most enthusiastic over New York—and Harvey. It was good to have her with us, if even for a short time.

Helen Blair is so busy with her various services, for the church, Y. W. C. A., Red Cross, etc., that we haven't found it possible to talk to her long enough to find out just what the rest of them are. Grace can still be found at Kingsley House, busier than ever now that one of their corps of workers has gone to France. Jeanne is still at Albany and is going to repeat her last summer's work this year, namely, teaching gym at the Cornell summer school.

We know that Louise Fletcher is still in Jamestown and suppose she is still doing her bit in the way of educating "young America" in her native state. Titzell and Elsie must be very busy teachers for we look for them to appear at each Alumnae festivity, but each time we look in vain. Betty forsook Mt. Lebanon this year and went to Ambridge H. S. We occasionally have an opportunity to see her and catch a few pearls of wisdom that fall from her lips.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Claire is achieving fame for us in the far west—is now the Supervisor of Physical Education of the Pasadena schools, but in her own significant words, “the slave of the children.” She has twenty-one schools to visit monthly and we hardly see how she can find time for those delightful hiking parties she mentions. Preparations for the annual May festival, in which over two thousand children take part, were in progress when she wrote.

Florence Keys and Margaret Minor still uphold the scholastic reputation of 1913 at Morgantown. They are both manifesting their loyalty to country—Margaret in her teaching of French, and Florence by her care of her enlisted boys, “mostly high school lads,” she says.

All has not been a path of roses for Martha this year, for after a semester as head of the history department in the New Kensington H. S., the strain of the work began to tell, resulting in the necessity for a complete rest. This she did not keep absolutely literally, though, for she has been touring the United States in the vicinity of Washington, Richmond and Camp Lee, and expects to spend the summer in Ontario.

By way of post-script—it is probably safe to say that we are all knitting. H. C. C.

CLASS OF 1914

Margery Stewart has been studying at Columbia this past year and receives her Master Degree in June. Her work has been in food chemistry and dietetics. She says she has, as yet, no definite plans for the coming year.

Hazel Rider is teaching in Uniontown. She says that nothing new or exciting has come her way in the past year.

Ethel Williams was married in December. Her husband's plans for the future are very uncertain, as most people's are, just now, the war having come between us and any peace of mind we may have had.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Guilietta Plympton has been teaching in the Fineview School and announces no change of occupation for 1918.

Margaret Brown was married in July, 1917, and has been with her husband, Lieutenant Scott Cleland, first at Fort Oglethorpe, Chattanooga, Tenn., and now (April) at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Georgia.

Josette Kochersperg says that she has done nothing but move about the country since her graduation. She taught for two years and then was married in 1916 and moved to Washington, D. C., where her husband was engaged in government work. She was there when war was declared last spring and says the living conditions there were almost unbelievable. Last summer she lived in Sandusky, Ohio, and this past winter has been spent there, instead of in Washington, because the congestion in the latter city prevented the return of the majority of men doing experimental work in agriculture. Jo says she has just passed through another seige of moving and is now firmly settled in Lakewood, Ohio—for the space of a few months, at least. She expects to get to Pittsburgh for the Alumnae Dinner this year and we all hope to see Jo again—for the first time since 1914.

Helen Sander is busy housekeeping. She has two babies and says her hands and her time are full, to say the least.

Gertrude Goeddel has been enjoying life as usual. When the secretary tried to reach her for news items for the Recorder, she found that Gertrude was in Atlantic City for Easter and was expecting to stay some time.

Mildred McWilliams has spent the winter in California and is now on her way home.

Pauline Burt has been teaching in Vassar this past year. She has been made assistant instructor in chemistry for next year. As a result of her research work she has had an article published in the American Chemical Journal, and now, in addition to her regular work, is engaged in research directed by T. B. Johnston, of Yale University.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

From the rest of the Class of 1914, the secretary regrets to report a deep and profound silence, and—as she hesitates to give voice to rumor—she can only hope for a fuller report next year.

Marjorie Boggs Taylor, '14.

CLASS OF 1915

Time has passed so swiftly and pleasantly for the Class of '15 that we can scarcely realize that we are three-year-old alumnae. Few sudden or unexpected happenings have taken place in our midst, but then, the Class of '15 has always been noted for progressing serenely towards honor and fame, but eventually reaching the goal.

Our biggest surprise and delight is our class baby! She is the dearest little girl that a class was ever blessed with and her name is Elizabeth Millicent Speer. We all think she should have been called Virginia, but "Betty" is a splendid substitute.

Janet is still our society lady, but is proving herself worthy of her calling, for never was there a more delightful hostess. But despite her social duties, Janet still has much time for Red Cross and indeed all the other organizations which tend to relieve the suffering of the present war.

Betty, too, is busy with Red Cross, Decades, social service, and business of all kinds and degrees. She is rapidly approaching perfection in her secretarial work and we expect soon to hear of her appointment as private secretary to the President.

Hallie is pursuing a placid, happy life on Mt. Washington, working hard in the cause of down-trodden humanity and incidentally very much interested in the welfare of one particular human being.

Jane has been to the hospital for a very serious operation, but we are glad to report she has recovered splendidly. At present she is teaching in California.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Mary Ruth is still as popular as ever in her little school at Glenshaw. Her troubles, however, have very materially increased by the possession of a new Jeffreys and her heroic endeavor to keep it in the straight and narrow path.

Lorna is proving herself veritabily the most successful school "marm" of the class. Who can doubt her popularity with the realization that all her splendid enthusiasm is directed toward the welfare of the Cresson High School. Her most recent achievement, I believe, is the establishment of a town library. She is rarely ever at home, but when she is, we always catch a little of her inspiration.

Olga is as happy as a lark, teaching high school in her own town. She and Lorna are almost equally enthused over their work.

As for the writer, she is at present teaching, but planning very soon to desert the profession. Surely everyone knows of her approaching marriage, in June, to Joseph Hunter Hamilton, class of '14, Washington and Jefferson.

Grace M. Davies, '15.

CLASS OF 1916

To say that the members of the Class of 1916 are busy not only along the lines of daily occupation but with some form of war work as well, would be superfluous.

Some of our girls may still be classified as teachers; others have entered the business world with its ever-increasing hustle and interest; a few of us are remaining at home aiding with the numerous duties and social demands of a household. The Associated Charities, the Y. W. C. A. and the Red Cross have called workers from our ranks. We are even represented at one of the army camps by one who, like a well-disciplined soldier, obeyed the command of her lieutenant and was promoted to the rank of Mrs. So far she is the only girl of the class to change her name, but before another publication of the Recorder, at least one other shall have followed her example.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

As a whole, the class is trying to prove, perhaps I may say, is proving, that the lessons of our Alma Mater have not been taught in vain.

At this time, when humanity is united for a common purpose and the tie of comradeship is more keenly felt than ever before, we greet you, sisters of the Alumnae Association, especially those new members of the Class of 1918.

CLASS OF 1917

Have you noticed the remarkable increase in intellectuality and enthusiasm in the general teaching body of Western Pennsylvania? The "casus belli" is quite evident—1917 has contributed over one-half of her proteges to the mercies of the unfeeling school boards.

Martha Crandall is guiding the little cherubs of Warren, Pa., along the perilous paths of learning. She has to teach only nineteen more years before she gets that pension.

Martha Dunbar wields the rod of iron in her home town. We will venture to say that our ex-House President makes those youngsters toe the mark.

Katherine Keck is showing her home town of Greensburg the advantages of an education at P. C. W. We trust that she has not taught them all that she knows in one year.

Ruth Law believes in a life of rapid change and great variety. She is general substitute for anyone who feels the need of a sudden vacation.

Katherine MacKenzie is trying to forget the sins of her youth in order that she may deal severely with the young hopefuls of Aspinwall, who seem to be following in her early footsteps.

ALUMNAE RECORDE

Helen Pardee is teaching nearly everything in the curriculum of the Sagertown High School. As compensation for her versatile accomplishments (which include the coaching of the basketball team) she has the honor of bearing the impressive title of assistant principal.

Louise Reinecke is literally spreading herself over the entire town of Carnegie. As general substitute (or shall we say "goat") she has taught every subject in the high school except ———— and ————, and has entertained with her stories every grade in the grammar school. However, for the last four months she has had a regular position teaching history and English.

Dorothy Stoebener tried to swallow the whole curriculum of Margaret Morrison, but was induced by one of those wicked school boards to accept a position in Glassport, the salary of which will make her independent for life.

Aline Van Eman is enlivening the village of Blairsville by her cheery and vivacious manner. She found the town rather dull at first, but we have noticed marked improvement lately. Incidentally she teaches in the Blairsville High School.

Jane Errett had a fellowship at Mt. Holyoke thrust upon her. Some people are born great, you know, and others——. Jane is thriving, however, and keeps us informed of her career by voluminous letters to a certain Titian-haired damsel of her acquaintance.

Dorothy Eggers is the first of our members to enter the commercial world. She does a little bit of everything in a real estate office on the North Side.

Ruth Gokey and Elizabeth McClelland have deserted the ranks of their virgin sisters and taken unto themselves husbands. Ruth is with her husband, Lieut. Roy W. Walters, of the Medical Corps, at Camp Oglethorpe, Ga. Elizabeth McC. Crawford is at present living under her paternal roof, while her husband is at a U. S. Aviation School.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Estelle Shepherd, in her capacity as librarian, advises the students of the Western Theological Seminary just what books they should read. Of course she has not read any of them herself, but then, she always recommends the thickest one as the most likely to have everything in it.

Leah Cluster is showing the town of New York just how social service work is done in Pittsburgh, and especially at P. C. W. She is attending the New York School of Philanthropy and reports that she has found one or two new ideas to try on her "socially" depraved friends.

Edna Balsiger seems to have shrouded her movements in deep mystery. We hear that she is teaching "somewhere in Michigan," which might as well be "some place in France," for we cannot seem to find out any of the details.

Ada Spriggs thought that the town of Prosperity was the most likely to crown her maiden efforts in teaching with success. We have not heard just how the town is taking it, but we notice that it is still on the map.

Carrie Bailey is living a life of complete isolation. No one has seen her; she writes to no one, so we have appointed a committee to investigate this strange case and relieve our troubled minds. You never can tell what Carrie is up to!

Elizabeth McC. Crawford.

THE JUNE MEETING

The regular June meeting of the Alumnae Association, Pennsylvania College for Women, was held at the College on Friday, June 8, 1917. The meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. Charles Spencer, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and accepted. The Class of 1917 was called in.

Moved and seconded, that Dr. Acheson be asked to come in and talk just after the President's address. Carried.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Mrs. Spencer then welcomed the new Class into membership and gave her President's address.

Dr. Acheson spoke frankly of their plans for a new college site for larger development and growth; also of the urgent need of endowment.

The report of the Treasurer was read and accepted.

Lecture Committee reported disbursement of all their funds to aid College in obtaining Edmund Vance Cook, poet.

Scholarship Committee, Miss Renshaw, chairman, reported aid given to three students, all doing very satisfactory work. Mrs. Jones gave financial report. Accepted.

Recorder Board, Mrs. McGinnity, chairman, presented Recorder. Accepted with sincere thanks.

Miss Bronson reported binding of Recorder file in five volumes, at price of $1.35 per volume. Accepted with thanks.

The Secretary gave a report of the musical tea held March 17, 1917, in the College Club Rooms. Accepted.

The question of monthly meetings came up, was discussed and left for decision, especially in regard to dates for further action in the October meeting.

The Committee on Associate Membership, Miss McCague, Miss Sharp, and Mrs. McKnight, made the following recommendation, which was unanimously adopted:

"After a careful consideration of the question, this committee recommends that Pennsylvania College for Women follow the example of other reputable colleges, and receive as Associate members of the Alumnae Association, former students who have not graduated, but who have completed, satisfactorily, a course of study of not less than one year in the college; that such students should become associate members by sending their names to the Secretary of the Association and paying, in advance, their annual dues, which shall be the same as that of active members; and that such associate members should have the same privileges and the same obligations as the active members, except that they shall not vote or be eligible to office, or serve on standing committees."

Special Scholarship Fund Committee, Miss Edna McKee, chairman, reported $1,540.00 raised, $24.00 interest. Still need $252.97 to complete fund. $90.97 was raised in the meeting. Report accepted with thanks as the committee has done hard work and conducted a systematic campaign.

The Secretary read the resignation of Miss Rachel Aiken as trustee of the Scholarship Fund. Moved that it be accepted with regret and that fund be placed in care of a trust company. Carried-

The following tribute was read by Mrs. Mary B. Miller:

"Miss Aiken has given freely, faithfully and competently her services, for over twenty years, as Trustee of the Helen E. Pelletreau Scholarship Fund; her responsibility has been greater than we have realized. The money has been kept well invested in 6% mortgages and interest collected, when due, without fail and without cost. We have never lost a dollar. This is a fine record and has not been accomplished without sacrifice on her part. In recognition of her long time service, I believe that the Alumnae will wish, at this time, to make formal acknowledgement to her. Therefore, I now ask our President to give this body an opportunity to express to her a vote of thanks, laden with our full appreciation.

Moved and seconded that Mrs. Miller's tribute to Miss Aiken be spread on the minutes and a copy sent to her. Carried with rising vote of thanks.

Mrs. Spencer presented material from State Federation for consideration of members.

The Association ratified the action of the committee on resolutions in regard to Miss Coolidge. The illumined parchment was shown, read by Mrs. Baird and ordered to be spread on the minutes.

Whereas, It has seemed best to Cora Helen Coolidge to resign as Dean of Pennsylvania College for Women, after ten years of successful administration, and

Whereas, The Alumnae Association has learned of her resignation with profound regret.

Resolved, That in her departure we are deprived of an association with one of God's noblest women, a generous friend, a genial companion, a woman of exalted ideals, true purpose, sound judgment, and one faithful in matters of trust.

Resolved, That her success and influence are due to her unwavering faith in God and the Right, to her indomitable energy, ready comprehension and power of quick accurate decision, prudence, tact, and keen sense of humor.

Resolved, That we, the Alumnae Association of Pennsylvania College for Women, express to her the appreciation and loyalty which we feel for her and for her splendid achievements in strengthening our Alma Mater. Under her administration the undergraduate body has steadily increased, the institution has steadily progressed in its proper work and has grown in popular favor. Internal harmony has been promoted by her womanly spirit, which has closely bound together all members of the College and Alumnae. The entire community of Pittsburgh will feel the loss of a valued friend and high-minded citizen.

Resolved. That while thus expressing our deep regret, we most sincerely wish her the content and happiness that rewards the consciousness of duty fulfilled and work well done.

Signed by the Committee,

Mrs. Mabel C. Baird, 1911	Mrs. G. W. Martin, 1892
Mrs. Chislett, 1873	Miss Harriet McCarty, 1897

Miss Elizabeth McCreery, 1887	Miss Martha Kim, 1912
Miss Elizabeth McClelland, 1917

Report of Miss Aiken, trustee of Scholarship Fund, read and accepted.

Moved, that choice of trust company be left in hands of committee for final settlement. Carried.

Mrs. Warmcastle reported balance unpaid on resolution for Miss Coolidge and asked for action.

Moved that Treasurer pay this balance. Carried.

Committee on Gift for Miss Coolidge, Mrs. Miller, chairman, reported purchase of a diamond platinum bar pin and asked for the approval of the Association.

Moved, that Committee receive hearty approval of the Association. Carried.

This was followed by roll call, to which 103 responded, the second largest meeting on record.

Library Committee, Miss Brownson, chairman, reported an expenditure of $47.97 interest, for much-needed books. Accepted with thanks.

Sara R. Carpenter, Secretary.

THE FALL MEETING

The regular Fall meeting of the Alumnae Association, Pennsylvania College for Women, was held in the College drawing room on Saturday, October 6, 1917, at 3:00 p. m. Owing to the absence of Mrs. Spencer from the city, Mrs. Pardee, our vice president, took the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and accepted. Miss Anne Houston, Treasurer, reported a balance in the treasury of $10.04. Her report was accepted. A letter from Mrs. Spencer was read by the Chair.

The Lecture Committee reported that they had no funds. Moved, that we continue the practice of sending out cards to solicit the dollar for the Lecture Fund. Carried. The Secretary was asked to intrust Miss Sadler to get the cards out as soon as possible.

Miss Renshaw reported that the Scholarship Fund had been placed by the committee with the Commonwealth Real Estate and Trust Co., at 3% interest.

Miss Edna McKee, chairman of the committee on raising Scholarship Fund, reported that there was still $62.00 to be raised on the principal. Suggested that we advance from interest to bring up the principal. This suggestion was adopted and ordered to be carried out.

Miss Helen Blair, chairman Associate Membership Committee, reported that her committee had made out a list of eligible members and also had written a letter suitable for mailing to each prospective new member.

Moved, that Secretary report this meeting to the press, emphasizing our plan in regard to adoption of Associate members.

Carried.

The question of monthly meetings came up for discussion with the result as follows:

Moved, that we have one social meeting during the year.
Carried.

Moved, that this meeting be held at the College Club.
Carried.

Moved, that the Chair appoint a committee to carry out plans and collect expenses. Carried.

Mrs. Miller reported that the College dens had been cleaned up at a cost of $225.00, no refurnishing being done. Suggested that we do something in a public way to make money for this purpose.

Moved, that the Chair appoint a committee to consider whether we shall assume the expense of $225.00 for cleaning up the dens. Carried.

Miss Kim, chairman of the Committee on Constitution.
asked for more time, since the committee is re-writing that document.

Moved, that the Fall meeting be held the first Saturday of November. Carried.

Miss Root, our new Dean, then addressed the meeting and, following adjournment, tea was served.

Gertrude Wayne Horvitz,
Secretary Pro Tem.

The Lecture Fund Committee is able to report two very good lectures for the past year—one by Dr. H. C. Goddard, of Swathmore, and the other by Miss Helen Fraser, of England.

The Pennsylvania College for Women Auxiliary of the Pittsburgh Chapter of the American Red Cross was organized in October, 1917. The purpose of the organization was to make it possible for every member of the College to engage in practical war work without loss of time involved in seeking work-rooms outside the College halls.

At the beginning of the second semester, one hundred and fifty-three members of the College body, including both faculty and students had pledged a definite number of hours of work ranging from one to four hours each per week. In February the Colloquium Society became affiliated with the Pennsylvania College for Women Auxiliary and six of its members have worked here.

Thirteen members of the Auxiliary under the instruction of Mrs. A. F. B. Morris took the presented course in Surgical Dressings and qualified for the examination.

The number of articles completed by the several departments totals for the year:

Surgical Dressings.....	13,023
Sewing	684
Knitting (To May 14).....	514
Funds have been received from the following sources:
General Donations.....	$ 34.18
Given by Miss Starr and resident students of Woodland Hall to purchase a knitting machine	55.00
Given by Student Government Ass'n to purchase layettes for French mothers..	35.00
Proceeds of Red Cross Benefit, given by the Dramatic Club of the College under the direction of Miss Vanda E. Kerst.....	250.00
Presented to the Pennsylvania College for Women Auxiliary by Colloquium.....	112.00

Total$486.18

The gift of one sewing machine by Mrs. West of Colloquium should also be acknowledged here.

The auxiliary has expended approximately $190 for permanent equipment, including together with smaller necessities:

4 14-foot tables.	2 Gauze Rollers.
2 Sewing Machines.	1 Knitting Machine.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Through its agency fifty-three Christmas packages were sent to American soldiers, it expended $35 in layettes for French mothers; it donated to the Second Red Cross drive $50. The treasurer reports on hand approximately $125 to meet emergency calls for the coming year.

The service rendered through this organization has been one of love. It has therefore enriched the hearts of the workers in a measure not at all proportionate with the visible results.

Laura C. Green, Chairman.

N. B.—In the second Red Cross Drive the College reports its contribution as $1,601.00.

NEWS OF COLLEGE ACTIVITIES

It is an undisputed fact that the Recorder would by no means be complete without its column of college news, but it is a question as to whether the girls realize how keen is our interest in the things they do, an interest confined not at all to the more recent graduates, but shared alike by the graduates of all classes no matter in what part of the country the Recorder finds them.

The following messages direct from the girls themselves bring us right up to the very doors of the College and invite us to a "close up" of the many things within.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

This year has seen a change in the meeting place of the Young Women's Christian Association. The drawing rooms became rather crowded last year, so now we feel very much gratified in having the use of the Lecture Hall, which is large and spacious. The meetings held here each week have been very interesting and there has been an average attendance of sixty. Various members of the faculty have given talks and all of the meetings have been helpful.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The year opened with the customary "Get-Acquainted" party in the first week of school. In November our Association had charge of the P. C. W. campaign for the Student Friendship War Fund for Y. M. C. A. work. Our quota was set at $1,000 and we succeeded in raising $1,900. During the campaign we co-operated with the Christian Associations of the University of Pittsburgh, the Carnegie Technical and the Margaret Morrison Schools; this proved so helpful that it has been suggested that a permanent committee be organized, made up of representatives from all the schools.

The annual bazaar was given up, due to war conditions, and in its place a Pop Concert was given, the returns from which are to be used in sending delegates to the summer conference at Eagles Mere.

More than the usual interest has been shown in the Student Volunteer Movement. Several girls have attended meetings of the Student Volunteers of the city schools and we were well represented at a conference held in the interests of that organization at Westminster College in March.

In the spring a special effort was made to enlist students in voluntary Bible study classes. As a result five classes were organized and were led by students under faculty supervision. Mr. J. Lovell Murray's "Call of a World Task," proved to be the most popular text book and very lively discussions of all sorts of present day problems have resulted from its study. If these classes succeed in awakening at least part of our students to the great spiritual needs of today the work of the Y. W. C. A. this year will not have been in vain.

THE STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

The Student Government Association has been given more responsibility in the way of college activities this year. For the second time the students had entire charge of the annual Hallowe'en party. Our mid-year dance was also entrusted to our supervision with apparently no disastrous results. The Third Liberty Loan Committee, consisting of students, was very successful in its campaign at college. We were gratified on several other occasions to have an opportunity to exercise our executive ability.

Our Association was represented at the Annual Conference of Women's Inter-Collegiate Association for Student Government. This contact with other College organizations for self-government proved very helpful to our board. As yet we are not permitted to vote at these conferences, but it is well to have the Pennsylvania College for Women brought before the eyes of the Inter-Collegiate world.

The honor system in regard to chapel and lecture attendance, and conduct in the library has been used throughout the year. Various "checks" on the system have shown encouraging results.

The Student Government Board has had a number of conferences with Dean Root. These meetings served as a connecting link between faculty and students, making co-operation possible.

Our association gave money to make layettes for French peasant babies last fall.

THE DRAMATIC CLUB

This year (1917-18 has been the most successful, financially and otherwise, in the history of the Dramatic Club. In January, a tea was given for Miss Kerst and the new members at which the enthusiasm of all was very marked. On March fifth the yearly business meeting of the Pittsburgh Center of the Drama League of America was held here and the club gave a private presentation of "The Bravest Thing in the World," by Lee Pape for their entertainment. March eighth and ninth the annual children's program was presented. A program consisting of two plays, "The Bravest Thing in the World” and “The Three Wishes,” a play of French folklore. The proceeds from these plays, two hundred and fifty dollars, were given to the P. C. W. Auxiliary of the American Red Cross.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

May 11th, when the High School Sophomores of Allegheny County were entertained at the College by the A. C. A., a play was given by the club. The dramatic work of the year culminated in the Senior play very much simplified this year on account of war conditions.

THE SOROSIS

Miss Mary Crawford, '19, associate editor of the Sorosis for the year 1917-18, was recently elected editor-in-chief for 1918-19. Miss Crawford, we believe, is well able to fill her new position.

The Sorosis has suffered this year from a decided lack of literary material. This is due largely to the fact that the pressure of additional work has been heavy, making great demands upon the students' time, and reducing all but required work to a minimum.

A special “Senior” number of the Sorosis is now being planned, which will be the combined May-June number. It is hoped that this will be the best number of the year.

THE PHI PI CLASSICAL CLUB

The Phi Pi originated but last year and is growing splendidly for so young an organization. Its most pretentious activity so far has been the presentation of Plautus' “Menaechmi” in Latin, assisted by the Dramatic Club.

The charter members of the club numbered twenty-one and the membership has been increased this year by the reception of the Freshman Latin class. Our purpose is a double one, to present phases of Latin and Greek literature for the discussion of which there is no time in class-room work and to become acquainted with the members of the classical departments of the College.

THE OMEGA LITERARY SOCIETY

During the past year the Omega Society has studied the development of the Russian novel from Gogol to Tolstoi. At each meeting one novel was discussed.

At our open meeting, a most enjoyable and entertaining one, we had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Chester B. Storey read from current American poetry.

The year's work has proved of great interest and very profitable.

DER DEUTSCHE VEREIN

Miss Bennett says: "Why hate the watch, because you don't like the watch-maker?" and that is the sentiment of the members of Der Deutsche Verein in respect to German language and literature. In Germany at the present time English is being studied with unprecedented enthusiasm, and why? Just so they can understand the movements of the Allies and carry on spy work. Why should we not do the same in our schools, and in this way perhaps help our government.

This year our club has held its regular meetings and many new members have been admitted. Our Christmas meeting was particularly interesting, as it took the form of a Christmas party, like those held in Germany, with a Christmas tree, Weihnachtskuchen and punch. Two of our meetings were Red Cross meetings, at which we made surgical dressings. Our final meeting will be a picnic at Highland Park, at which a good time is anticipated. At the end of this year the club finds itself with a complete membership ready to begin again next fall with even more enthusiasm than it has shown this term.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

THE GLEE CLUB

The Glee Club, under the enthusiastic direction of Mr. and Mrs. Mayhew, has been most successful this year. It is the largest club we have ever had and the special interest and co-operation of the Freshmen has been particularly appreciated, and also gives promise of a splendid future.

We had our usual Home Concert in December, and the annual Joint Concert with the Musical Clubs of the Carnegie Technical School in March. We also sang at the Christmas Vesper service, the Commencement Concert and appeared on many other programs during the year.

THE MANDOLIN CLUB

This year has been a very busy one for the Mandolin Club at P. C. W. When the Club assembled in the fall, there were only four members from last year's club, no leader and no pianist. Ethel Davis was chosen leader and she has proved herself most capable. A great many new members were added and now the club membership totals thirteen, a lucky number.

Two concerts were given this year; the first, the Home Concert with the Glee Club, given in the fall, and the second the Joint Concert with the Tech Clubs, given in March. In addition to these concerts the club has played at various schools, the Home for Incurables, the Orphan Home, and other kindred institutions.

THE COLLEGE MUSICAL CLUB

The College Musical Club is an organization new to the College this year, but during its first season it has achieved a gratifying success. Some interesting programs have been given, among these a duet program and a symphonic program, this latter given by our Toy Symphony under the able direction of Mr. Hines. The aim and purpose of the Club is to provide programs of merit and interest, to provide recreation and inspiration for those musically inclined and to foster in the college a further appreciation of music. It is the sincere hope of those who have been interested in the work during the past year, that the Club may continue a fixed institution among the college activities and prove more and more a source of pleasure and inspiration.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

THE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

We were honored this year by having for our physical director, Mrs. G. O. Lantz (Miss Esther Hubbard), who came to us from the Trenton, N. J., Y. W. C. A. and has proved herself an enthusiastic teacher in everything which we have undertaken.

As a sort of prelude to our work for the year a tea was given in the "Gym" to the entire school for the purpose of letting everyone know that the Athletic Association intended to "do" things.

School had not been in session long before the girls became anxious to get out on the hockey field, to take "one of those funny looking clubs" and see if they could hit the ball. A large number of girls reported for practice at first, but finally the number diminished as the game was a little too strenuous for some. Later on, class teams were formed among the Juniors, Sophomores and Freshmen, and interclass games were played. The Juniors succeeded in winning the championship in this series.

Soon after hockey season, came basketball and in this the girls worked very diligently to secure a varsity team. Owing to the limited number of enthusiasts and lack of practice the varsity team was obliged to play under difficulties, but by doing their level best succeeded in defeating Waynesburg and making good showings in the other games they played. Inter-class basketball aroused interest as well as the games in which the members of our own faculty took part and played so well.

This spring there is to be a field meet the events of which are open to all classes, and from the present number signed up it shows that the winners of the purple and white ribbons will have to work hard to come out ahead of their opponents.

Tennis season will open just as soon as the weather permits with a long list of names in the singles tournament and quite a number in the doubles. The winners in these two events will be awarded the school letters just as the girls of the varsity team in basketball.

This spring the various classes have appeared in the field with gloves, bats and balls. Everyone who goes out is having the most amusing times in learning to throw a ball straight as well as to use the gloves and bats for their proper purposes.

The year of the Association has been an interesting one and we hope has shown everyone that P. C. W. can accomplish things in the athletic line, if the girls will respond by giving their hearty support to the Association's every undertaking.

Helen Ailes, President.

ARIEL CLUB

Under the able leadership of Miss Louise Holcomb, the Ariel Club was organized during the spring of 1917. It's membership now numbers fifteen and all of its members are learning much about birds and their habits through study, lectures and expeditions. Miss Elizabeth Sheppard, of the present senior class is the president now and under her careful guidance, we are certainly progressing.

JUNE — 1919

The President's Address

Class of 1919, we most heartily welcome you into our Association!

You have two distinctions, one in being the largest class to enter our ranks in the history of our college; the other in that last year's class came to us in the dark hour of our nation's war, and you come to us in the dawning of the morning of peace.

We shall look to you for the assistance in our work which your numbers and your ability indicate you can bestow upon us; and we hope that never again will there come a time when after such a conflict the keynote of our gathering will be a new peace. We trust you will bring to us the fresh enthusiasm, fresh energy and hearty co-operation which we need, and that will at once make you feel perfectly at home among us.

What is the one word we hear echoed and re-echoed from pulpit, press and lecture platform? Reconstruction! It seems to be the slogan for all reforms, and all new enterprises, and for all classes. Does the word have any real meaning for us?

It is almost five years since the shot was fired that startled the world and set the whole earth in a conflagration, and we are just beginning to take a deep breath of relief that it is all over, and that the months and years of agony are things of the past, at least for us who live in this favored land. But as the devastated lands of Europe can never be the same as they were before the war, so we must all realize we should never again be just the same as we were before this awful experience.

Many are thinking and teaching that, Phoenix-like, an entirely new world, and entirely different and improved condition of religion and civilization will now spring into being and in fact an unprecedented state of perfection is about to be ushered in which will transform governments, society and individuals.

But alas! for my part I can see no proof or evidence of such transformation; but I do think there is one outstanding lesson that has been learned and one trait of character that has been developed as never before in the history of the world, and that is, men have learned to think less of themselves and more of others.

From the soldier, who laid down his life for the high ideals of liberty and justice, to the frivolous society butterfly, who gave up her life of idle luxury to throw herself into work for her country or welfare work for our army, all have learned the blessed experience and sweet satisfaction of self-denial for the sake of others.

Now the question is, shall we drift back again to our self-centered lives. This will be impossible for most thoughtful women, and we find many are now looking around for new channels for their aroused energy and enthusiasm, and many doors stand most invitingly open to us. Which shall we enter? We know perfectly well that all who are gathered here to-day have more or less interest in that for which our association stands—else why would we be here, and if we are alert to our duty and privileges we will see that just here our beloved Alma Mater comes to us with outstretched hands and calls us to devote to her some of the time, some of the energy, some of the ability we have been lavishing at the call of our country.

This is a time of peculiar need and opportunity. We are about to enter our jubilee year and we have come to a time when we want to arouse the attention and interest, not only of our whole city, but of this entire section of the country. Why do we feel we have a right to do this? Because we know we have an institution that is not only worthy of attention, but has a rightful claim upon the money and patronage of our citizens.

Now that women have come to the front as never before, and are filling positions of great usefulness, and will be called into more and more prominence as the years go by, what question can be of more importance to the thinking public than the best culture and education of women?

There are many and varied opinions as to what constitutes the best kind of preparation for woman's life work. Many will tell you a business education is all that is necessary in this independent, bustling age; others, that only a technical school or university can supply that which the young woman of today requires; but we maintain that however extended her study and research may be in after years, that in a college such as ours, the true elements that are necessary to an all-around development for her rightful place in the world can all be found.

One great element in education is the influence of the instructor. After careful statistics were taken in a large body of students as to how many teachers they could recall in all their education from primary grades up, who had exercised a definite influence on their lives, it was found by Charles Franklin Thwing that an average of only one teacher in seven had made any impression at all upon them, and that the one thing that counted most was close contact and personality.

ALUMNAE RECORDE

Therefore, in a college like ours, where the students come in much closer touch and under direct influence of their teachers, how much greater are the possibilities of their being helped and their lives moulded by their professors than in a great university or technical school where the personal touch is almost impossible.

The great Kant, in an essay on this subject, says: "There are four foundation principles of true education. First is that, that through education man must be subject to discipline; second, he must receive culture; third, he must receive discretion, and fourth, moral training."

Another educational writer has said almost the same thing when he describes true education as "the power to think, the power to appreciate and the power to become righteous;" or as the Greeks were want to put it, to learn the true, the beautiful and the good.

Is it not true that all these principles will much more readily be developed in a college like this where the necessary elements are found than in a great university, however fine its other advantages may be? As to the last important point, "moral training," the fear of God and belief of His word have almost disappeared in many schools. I have recently read a most startling series of articles in one of our journals on Paganism in our universities, and the facts were appalling. Hence, how can their students receive the necessary moral training, when there is no other true foundation upon which righteousness can be built?

I have known more than one student, both boys and girls, whose earnest youthful faith was utterly shipwrecked by the winds of unbelief by which they were surrounded in our large institutions of learning. I am sure you see here how important are the claims on this community to firmly establish and maintain our one Women's Christian College.

Now, as to technical education: It is not the only thing necessary to success, and the educational world seems to have completely lost its head on this point. The one who has been trained "to think, to appreciate and to be righteous" will readily adapt herself with a small amount of technical work to the business office, the school room or the home, in a way that will be an honor to herself and to her Alma Mater. We see proof of this every day.

These are some of the arguments which convince us we have a cause worthy to demand the attention of Pittsburgh.

A false impression has been broadcast among us, that a very large sum of money is to be expended on the jubilee, of which one-half is to be raised by our association. It will cost a good deal of money, especially the wonderful pageant, but it has been decided to make this pay for itself by charging an admission to the two performances; and we are asked for no specific sum, but to raise all we can, being assured no more of it will be expended in this way than is absolutely necessary, the remainder to be used in any permanent way we shall decide.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Some will say, why all this fuss, why so much time and money expended upon a celebration? Is not the college prospering and everything going along all right? The poet says:

"Ambition is the spirit in the world
That causes all the ebb and flow of nations,
Keeps mankind sweet by action; without that,
The world would be a settled filthy mud."

We do not want to stagnate, therefore let us be ambitious.

There will be much work to do this coming year, and many will be asked to serve on committees. Many, judging from past experience, will ask to be excused on the plea of other duties and interests. It is not always easy to comply with these requests, as some of us know full well; but it will only be when there is a united unselfish effort on the part of each one to do her share that we shall meet with success. Sir Walter Scott says:

"There never did and never will exist anything permanently noble and excellent in our characters which is a stranger to the exercise of self-denial."

I have every confidence in the members of our association that we possess this noble quality, so shall look for strong proof of this.

How well some of us remember the time we raised the Endowment Fund. The enthusiasm ran high and we were not only surprised at the number who worked but at the success which crowned their efforts.

Not only will we be busily engaged this year in earning money for the Jubilee Fund, but when next June comes around it will mean a great deal of time and hard work expended by somebody. Do not let us shirk our part and then look on and freely commend or criticize the work of others; but let us all put our shoulders to the wheel and, like our brave soldier boys, daunted by nothing, strive to reach the goal of a great success, an occasion of which we shall be proud, which shall always live in our memories and which shall strengthen the tie that binds us together. And not only that, but one that will so commend the college to this community that the money necessary for our future greatness will pour into the coffers of the Pennsylvania College for Women.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

LETTER FROM DR. ACHESON

May 27th, 1919.

To the Alumnae of Pennsylvania College for Women:

The college year just closing, although unattended by any outstanding features, has been marked by conscientious work and earnest purpose. Early in the session we were compelled to close the college for one month on account of the influenza epidemic. Fortunately no cases of the disease developed among the faculty or resident students, and all returned, without exception, when the ban was lifted. By a readjustment of the schedule and the shortening of regular holiday seasons all academic work lost has been fully made up.

The four years through which we have just passed have been with us, as with many other educational institutions, a very trying period. The abnormal conditions created by the war, and especially the tremendous advance in the cost of operation, increased the yearly deficit to an alarming figure. Loyal friends, however, came to the rescue with a guarantee that has made possible the continuance of all departments without interruption. For this evidence of loyalty and interest the Alumnae, I am confident, are as grateful as are the Board of Trustees. With the close of the war we have been enabled to resume very largely our normal college activities, and by the Fall of 1919 we should be on a pre-war basis so far as enrollment is concerned. The academic department has suffered in no respect by reason of the war, but the special departments, such as music, art and expression, have shown some decrease in enrollment.

I am happy to advise the Alumnae that the prospects for next year are most encouraging. From present indications we are justified in the belief that the session of 1919-1920 will record the largest enrollment that the college has ever enjoyed. Faculty and students are bending their energies to this end, with the slogan "One Hundred Freshmen for September, 1919." May I appeal to the Alumnae to give their cordial support to this effort, for without their co-operation we cannot hope to realize our goal.

Our thought now is, of course, centered in the Fiftieth Anniversary Celebration which will be held in June, 1920. The Alumnae has already heard through Miss Kerst, Chairman of the Faculty Committee on Arrangements, many of the details connected with this important occasion. It gives me very great pleasure to say that the Board of Trustees seriously desire to make this year the most important for the future of the college of any in its history. The war of necessity made it impossible for us to prosecute any plans for the enlargement of the college that had been taking shape under the direction of the Board. To have made the attempt at any time during these past four years would probably have been to invite failure. Now, however, since peace is in prospect, the Board has taken up again the plans it formerly had under consideration and is endeavoring in every possible way to carry them to a successful consummation. At one of its recent meetings the committee formerly appointed to devise plans for the enlargement of the college was increased by the addition of several members and its powers enlarged so that it could act quickly and effectively. It is the purpose of the Board of Trustees to prosecute a campaign for endowment and building funds during the year 1919-1920. The plans, so far as worked out, contemplate a thoroughly modern institution in point of physical equipment, with an endowment sufficient to maintain the work of the college on the highest academic basis.

This enterprise then is the all important one for the Jubilee Year, and if it can be carried to a successful conclusion will mark the anniversary exercises in June as the most important event in the life of the college. The Alumnae Association, which has always been so loyal to the interests of Alma Mater, will have full opportunity during the year to co-operate with the Board in the consummation of these plans, when details and methods have been more fully worked out. We are justly proud of the record made by the college during the half century of its existence. The Jubilee Year which is now opening offers an unparalleled opportunity to create a bigger and a better college on the foundation which has been so well laid. May we all determine to unite our efforts to this end and to withhold no services that will make the realization of this ideal possible.

JOHN C. ACHESON.

MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

Next year at Commencement time we shall be standing on a height from which we can look back over the last fifty years, and from which we hope to be able to look forward into the future. There is much to be done before we reach that height and so I am especially glad to have the opportunity of reaching all the Alumnae through the pages of the "Recorder."

We are starting upon a year that can be so valuable for us all. We shall all be working together for our Fiftieth Anniversary celebration and it lies in the power of the Alumnae to make that celebration one of the biggest, if not the biggest, event in the life of the college and I mean this not in any transient sense. There will be much pomp and ceremony but this will be merely the outward sign and the visible token of that spirit of loyalty and pride which animate the graduates of the college and which must be handed down to the generations which are to come. It is no small thing for an institution to have lived for fifty years and all that time to have stood for the very best. You may well be proud for you know there has been laid a foundation worthy of no mean structure.

We are looking to the Alumnae for a considerable sum of money. There is really no limit to the amount we should like to have, but we are not planning to spend all that you give us in riotous living. We are going to spend only that which is absolutely necessary to have a celebration that is worth while, dignified and in keeping with the status of the college, whatever it may be at that time. The amount left over could be used for anything which you might wish in the way of house furnishing or equipment of a tangible nature, an Alumnae Anniversary gift, in fact, whether it be $5,000.00 or $500,000.00.

But to return to the celebration and what its meaning and value may be to the Association. Its value will increase in proportion to the number of the Alumnae taking part in it. Can you not imagine how worth while it might be to have every living graduate back for reunion next year and how much more worth while it would be for each one present to be able to say to herself, "During this past year I have actually done my share in the work of the Alumnae Association," for we all know that our love for an institution or cause is proportionate to the effort expended in its behalf. So if for no other reason this celebration should be of value because it will bring us all together in one big effort. In a recent number of the "Atlantic" I read that the war had called forth three fundamental qualities: (1) Determination and faith. (2) Readiness, adaptability and the power to quickly absorb and profit by the experiences of others. (3) The capacity for work. These are exactly the qualities this coming anniversary should call forth. Determination to carry to fruition the plans for the future of the college and a mighty faith that these things shall come to pass. A readiness to profit by the experiences of others. There are many ways of doing things. Let us be ready to adapt ourselves to someone else's way if this proves more expedient. The capacity for work. Many of the Alumnae have proved that they have this capacity to a great extent. During the coming year there will be ample opportunity for all the rest to show a like capacity. Backed by the determination, faith, adaptability and work of all the Alumnae, not only will the coming anniversary be an unbounded success, but the impetus gained there will carry the college well into the next fifty years.

EDITORIAL

During the fierce struggle which has but recently closed, the spirit of service that was manifest in our country exceeded even the most fanciful dreams of ante bellum days. Everyone, from the greatest to the least, was willing to sacrifice his all for the glorious cause of democracy. And one of the many facts that became most evident in all the varied phases of war activities was the invaluable service rendered by the women of our nation and particularly by the college women.

Now, as we face the momentous epoch of reconstruction with its manifold problems, we certainly must feel that this willingness to serve a great ideal—this spirit that rose to such heights while we were engaged in war—should not be lost, but should rather be directed into other channels; indeed, into those very channels that will insure for us and for all future generations, the realization of the splendid principles in behalf of which so many of our sons laid down their lives.

If we really wish to make this world a better place in which to live, how can each and every one of us do her part individually and collectively? The answer is not far to find. As college women, our first thought in these stirring times should be directed toward the necessity of education as a fundamental requisite for intelligent service, and we should be particularly alive to the possibilities provided by the colleges of America for the higher education of women.

We are proud to call ourselves Alumnae of Pennsylvania College for Women, an institution which has ever aimed to develop the finest fruits of true culture. But what have we done to aid in its success, to help in the noble cause for which it has stood these fifty years? Yes, fifty years—a half century of glorious history. For next year we shall celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the College—our Jubilee Year. Surely such an occasion is worthy of the greatest possible effort on the part of every Alumna. To use the words of one of my co-workers on the Recorder staff, who very cleverly inflicted this editorial upon me, "It is the greatest event in our history and we want every member to help. The celebration belongs to the Alumnae, because the Alumnae is the College."

Commencement week of 1920 will be marked by such a series of festivities that it will linger forever in the memories of those who are fortunate enough to be present. This mammoth celebration will be ushered in with the Baccalaureate Sermon on the morning of June 6, and will close on June 10 with the second performance of the pageant and a students' celebration.

A special day—June 8—has been set aside as Alumnae Day. There will be class reunions and general celebration in the morning; luncheon at the College; the pageant in the afternoon and the Alumnae Dinner in the evening. The success of Alumnae Day is in our hands. Let us be ready for the task. The secretary of each class should make every effort to have an enthusiastic and worth while class reunion on that day. We want all the Alumnae to be present, even though they must travel from the very ends of the earth. For what distance is so great as to prevent any P. C. W. Alumna from attending the fiftieth birthday anniversary of her beloved Alma Mater?

Other interesting events will be Historical Day and Educational Day, when we shall have the pleasure of hearing an address by a noted speaker and a concert by a famous opera star.

All these admirable plans, including many other alluring features, have been devised by our faculty, but our co-operation will be necessary in order to carry them out completely.

Therefore, if within the coming year, you are requested to do your share to bring these plans to a successful fruition, show the same spirit that you did when taking part in the Liberty Loans, or the Red Cross, or any one of the other interests which meant so much to you during the war.

YOUR ALMA MATER CALLS YOU. ARE YOU READY?

L. M. L., '16.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS LETTERS

CLASS OF 1876

Jennie Jenks, from her report, seems to be very busy. She is chairman of the Woman's Committee, Council of National Defense, Jefferson County. She also reports that she is keeping house, teaching music and playing the church organ.

Jane Wightman and Lydia Gracie seem to be leading a life of perfect ease, as they report that they have done nothing. We are inclined to doubt their word.

Kizzie Negley reports that she has been working hard at the East Liberty Branch of the Red Cross.

Emma Norton spent a part of the winter in Florida. One of her sons has been commissioned as a First Lieutenant in the Quartermasters' Corps.

CLASS OF 1879

Westanna Pardee is the only living member of the Class of '79, so she has a great deal to do to uphold the honor of the whole Class. In addition to her arduous duties as President of the Association she has sent four children into the working world. Her oldest son, Dr. A. M. Pardee, has taken the chair of chemistry at Washington and Jefferson College. Her daughter, Elizabeth, has gone into missionary work, teaching piano in a church school in Texas. Helen is teaching in the New Brighton High School, and Walter is in the service as a corporal in the Medical Corps at Parkview Hospital. Mrs. Pardee also spent several months in Florida.

CLASS OF 1880

Kitty Wilson has sent two sons to war, one of whom received the Croix de Guerre. She has been very active in the work of the Woman's Club in Glen Osborne.

Annabelle McConnell varied her life a little by spending two months in bed with a sprained ankle. She is still teaching in the primary grade and is Managing Editor of the Pittsburgh School Bulletin, published by the Teachers' Association.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1881

Fannie Axtell Harmon has spent the past two months in Florida. Fannie has the largest family in our class—four daughters and two sons. Two daughters and a son are married, and the younger son is in service in France.

Sara Fredericks Marks is the very busy wife of the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Tidioute, Pa. Sara is president of the Woman's Club of Tidioute and treasurer of the Erie Presbyterial Home Missionary Society. Sara writes: "Our Woman's Club is starting a public library this year and for years has superintended a serving school in connection with the public schools. I am grandmother to three of the finest children in all the world—Billy, Jimmy and Sara Fredericks Marks, the second. As to what I have done the past year that I never did before—I did everything there was to do the year before." Sara has two children, Prof. James Marks of Kiskiminetas Prep. School, and Miss Helen Marks of our own college.

Emma Kearns Coyle has the proud distinction of having two sons "over there." Emma writes: "My two boys have been in the service from the beginning, going to France in August, 1917, and one is not out of Germany to-day. Edwin has been promoted to a captain of the famous Rainbow Division. William enlisted with our old Eighteenth, now the One Hundred and Eleventh Machine Gun Company. I am happy to say both were saved. Certainly a miracle, at least with Edwin, as he was in almost every battle and had only two slight scratches on his face which, he writes me, are disappearing."

Emma has three sons—the eldest, Dickson Kearns Coyle, is married and lives in Pittsburgh.

Elizabeth Thomas Imhoff has just returned to Pittsburgh after spending a most interesting and pleasant month in Washington, D. C.

Elizabeth writes: "My son, Wallace, was stationed at Rich Field, Waco, Texas, the past year, as Second Lieutenant in Aviation. He built a forge and foundry for repairing disabled machines for Rich Field, as well as repairing many of the map-making planes. He put three improvements on the Liberty Motor. One was a strainer for the gasoline, another was an automatic valve for keeping the oil and gasoline separate and the third is too mechanical for me to explain. All three are now used successfully on the Liberty Motors. Since his discharge from service, Wallace and his wife and baby daughter are living at Auburn, Pa. My younger son, Kenneth, has also been in the service. He went overseas last September and is still at Nantes, France.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

My daughter has been married three years and we have a dear little Elizabeth Jane Murray to look after now, so I am a very busy grandmother. My best regards to all my classmates."

CLASS OF 1883

The Class history of '83 for the past year, so full of world interest, contains nothing peculiarly momentous.

All the questionnaires have been faithfully filled and returned, and bear evidence to the continued patriotism of '83.

With the questionnaire from Jennie Jackson came one of her characteristic cheery letters full of vim.

She is living quietly at home with her aunt and sister, and having accomplished her share of war work, is grateful that the conflict has come to a close.

Rachel Aiken registers as having no official employment, yet admits that if she were in business her time could not be more fully occupied, and knowing Rachel's energy and efficiency, we may well believe it. Red Cross work with the Twentieth Century Club and W. S. S. for the Government have numbered among her good works.

Anna Lysle McLain continues to be occupied with good deeds, having taken into her home a boy and girl from Unalaeka, whom she is trying to help, and we know she will succeed in the noble effort to give the consecrated human touch to these young lives.

Anna McCullough Ogden writes from Battle Creek, Michigan, where she has been recuperating after her strenuous labors as chairman of the Greensburg Branch of the American Red Cross. She says: "If there was anything connected with that work that I did not do, I have not heard of it." That is a type of the devotion which has helped to win the women's end of the Great War.

Blanche Evans Rust writes from her Cleveland home. The death of her only brother was a source of deep sorrow to her, which we can appreciate, knowing the strong ties of affection which have always existed in her family. War work occupied much of her time during the conflict. Blanche is not yet very strong.

Mary Acheson Spencer writes: "I am feeling facetious at 7 A. M. this spring morning before I have had my breakfast." Just like Mary to meet the day's duties promptly with a cheery welcome. Mary's new work has been the building of "a dear little white cottage across from the Currys on Coraopolis Heights where I expect to spend the summers. "Her family consists," she adds, "of seven children, her brother George's daughter, three in-laws, and eight grandchildren, and so I head a tribe of twenty!!!"

Nellie Wayman Haines, in addition to her other duties, serves as chairman of the Music Committee of the Women's Club of Butler, Pa. She, with her son and daughter, sing in the church choir, besides sometimes presiding at the organ. She also gives piano lessons to her two younger children, at the same time keeping up her own practice. As ever, Nellie is happy in her work, and seems to have solved the problem of enjoying the harmony of life.

As for your humble Secretary, life is as busy and full of interest for her as ever. She can truthfully record a new and unique task in the past year. As chairman of the Historical Committee for the Centennial Celebration of the founding of the congregation of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church, she has been doing intensive work, which while most interesting and delightful, yet she must confess to a sense of profound gratitude that centennials are not of frequent occurrence. However, this one was most successful, and of especially tender interest to her.

O! that you might all have been able to attend the inspiring meeting held at the college in the late winter to launch the P. C. W. Jubilee, at which Mary and I were the only representatives of '83. Let us all endeavor to promote the Jubilee Celebration, each in her largest measure of efficiency, and look forward to being present at the consummation in 1920.

And now, my dear classmates and fellow alumnae, may I pass on some thoughts which I feel are of very deep individual import at this time.

War work will not now fill hands and hearts in the same measure as during the conflict.

What a wonderful work has been accomplished through the Red Cross organization!

Faithful in war, faithful in peace,
May her service of love never cease
Until suffering know full release.

But, let us not forget that Jesus Christ opened the portal to altruism, and we would not have the Red Cross to-day had we not first had Calvary.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Let us then contribute the same measure of zeal, devotion and efficiency to the work of the New Era Movement just launched in our respective churches for the advancement of the Master's Kingdom.

Thus shall we best help to solve the serious problems of the present crisis, and hasten the return of the Prince of Peace.

GEORGINA G. NEGLEY,

Secretary.

CLASS OF 1884

Dear Recorder:—

The Class of '84 has made few changes but all send hearty greetings to their Alma Mater. Miss Clark remains at home and is too modest to tell of her work which I feel sure she has done, being such a good Samaritan. Mrs. Stillwell has been actively engaged in war work; has one son. Her address is Lakewood, N. J. Miss Meloy was one of the organizers of the Helen Coolidge Club for Social Service. She at present is teaching at Pennsylvania College for Women.

It is with deepest sympathy I report the death of Rev. R. A. Elliott of Cambridge, Ohio. Since his demise Mrs. Elliott and daughter have been living at Denver, Colo. The daughter is teaching and Mrs. Elliott simply resting for the present. Mrs. Elliott has three children, two sons and one daughter; one granddaughter born September 16, 1918. As for myself I have been engaged in all kinds of war work, surgical dressings, knitting and hospital supplies. Am also grandmother to two sons and one girl, born December 5, 1918. All are coming to pay me a visit the first of May.

Very sincerely,

GERTRUDE W. HOLMES,

Class of '84.

CLASS OF 1887

Janet McCune reports that she has had two sons in the service since the beginning of the war. The older one, who is an Ensign, hopes to be released soon, and the younger one is now on his way home from France.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1888

Dear Alumnae Editor:—

The Secretary, Class of 1888, thanks you indeed for the convenience of your questionnaire. To be sure some members objected that not enough space had been allowed for their activity records, but in other cases there was more than enough space!

The sum of the whole canvass has been interesting, and the information acquired ranges far and wide. We all have taken part in war work, knitting, sewing or making surgical dressings in Red Cross rooms; we have held executive offices in our local Red Cross chapters and we have been chairmen of Liberty Loan committees. We have sold bonds, have worked on canteen committees, have adopted French war orphans and have not neglected our respective local charities. Specific items of interest are as follows:

Miss Alice Stockton, who once took part in a suffrage parade, was true to her convictions and taking advantage of right given to women in New York, voted last November.

Mrs. John Milliken reports the birth of a grandson. Shawbut L. Walz, Jr., last August, when the father was with our Aviation Force in France.

Mrs. Hetty Boyle Callery was married March 22, 1919, in her Pasadena home, to Mr. Louis K. Hyde of Plainfield, N. J.

Miss Dorcas G. Beer has spent the winter in California at the late home of her sister, Mrs. I. A. Lothian, who died last October. After graduation at Wooster University Mrs. Lothian studied and trained her voice for grand opera singing. Following a period of concert work she sang two seasons in the Teatro Nazionale, Rome, Italy, where the King and his family were frequently among her audience. A recent issue of the Wooster Alumni Round Table pays Mrs. Lothian a beautiful tribute.

Mrs. Armstrong has spent the winter in New York, her Vandergrift home being closed as her brother, Capt. John A. Boale, M.L., is still in the army.

The Class of 1888 extends greetings to the Alumnae of P. C. W.
May the tribe increase! Class Secretary.

CLASS OF 1891

Ella C. Scott and Margaret Easton are still upon our mailing list although they keep their occupations and interests shrouded in deep mystery.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1892

Dear Editors:—

The longer I live, the more sympathetic fellow feeling I have for those five, foolish, sleeping virgins who did not have their lamps ready at the appointed time. Perhaps oil was as scarce in those days as class news is in our time.

But whether or not we have been making readable history, this last year, with its strenuous war demands, has kept the members of '92 very busy.

Etta Easton Martin responded to our country's call by taking a secretarial course at Duff's College and then giving her time, as registrar, to the Home Service Section of the American Red Cross. This, has meant the taking charge of the monthly reports of the Section and the giving of seven hours daily, from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. to this work.

In answering the "Present Employment" line of your questionnaire, Carrie Porter Hill said she felt like writing—"Preacher's wife—nuf ced."

And this means a great deal, for we all know how faithful and efficient Carrie is, both in her own home and her husband's parish. Owing to a war work interrupted year at College, her daughter, Mary, is gaining some valuable experience as society editor of one of Richmond's local papers. However, Mary expects next year to resume her studies.

Although residing in our country's metropolis Hannah claims that she is living a very quiet and uneventful life, and suggests if any thrills are necessary for her report, that the Secretary will supply them. She sends loving greetings to all the girls.

Nettie Hays Flack has always been most loyal to her Alma Mater, and in filling out her questionnaire, she characteristically adds "Best wishes for P. C. W." We all sympathize with Nettie in her sorrow over her father's death last December at Hyco, Va., where of late years he had made his home.

Maurice Trimble, Jr., has resumed his studies as a Junior at Princeton. Last summer he enlisted in the Naval Aviation Division and completed a four months' course at the Boston Ground School. He is a fine ball player and this year is a member of the Princeton team.

William Trimble is completing his last year at Ben Avon High School.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Sarah Hamill Trimble says her special work this last year has been in connection with war activities of the Ben Avon Woman's Club.

John Bryant Barker is in the Freshman Class at Haverford College. He transferred there after being mustered out of the S. A. T. C. at Swarthmore.

Harriet Barker is now a special student at P. C. W.

We regret that we have no word from Sara Milholland, for Sara's letters are always worth reading. But through this page we send her a friendly greeting.

E. B. B.

CLASS OF 1894

Many of the '94 girls seem too busy to write, or else have no item of interest to send. Those who did write, sent very interesting letters. Under the question "What have you done in the past year that you never did before," Sue Riddle Paine mentions, "Running a power machine for the Red Cross; district nursing in the slums during the influenza epidemic; registering men for draft; Italian and French interpreter for Red Cross and working as telephone operator during strike." I don't believe any of the rest of us can equal that record.

Mela Patterson Porter writes of her son George, who is in France with the Photographic Section of Aviation: "It might interest you to know that he has made some invention in the aviation camera that has been used by the government over there."

Florence Aull Lacock writes that she has been busy the past year knitting and sewing for the Red Cross, and training up her two boys and two girls in the way they should go.

May Krepps Holding is delighted with living in the East, so close to the seashore and to New York City. She adds, "I am afraid hereafter I shall be known only as Laura Anne's mother, for she has become quite a musician, and has played in three recitals this winter, one before the Woman's Club at an evening entertainment in the club house here."

'94

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1897

Carrie Eggers is busy and happy in New York City filling the position of Director of Practical Work of Women in the Bible Teachers' Training School. She has made good use of her opportunities for doing real war work at home, for in addition to her Red Cross duties and emergency help in the recent epidemic, she and her associates gave to the nurses the use of six floors of their building, thus carrying on their own work under great disadvantage, but in mentioning these things Carrie says, "Of course sacrifices of personal comfort are minor matters in these momentous days."

Edith Stockton spent her Christmas holidays in Florida, and Harriet McCarty is now away on a two months' trip to California and places of interest enroute.

CLASS OF 1898

Alice R. Davidson is taking the Spring Course at the School of Horticulture for Women at Ambler, Penna.

CLASS OF 1901

Carrie Kim informs us casually that she started out the semester with a hundred and eighty but she has since reduced this number by some sinister means which she does not reveal. She has added the teaching of French to her list of accomplishments and also followed the fashion by having the "Flu."

CLASS OF 1902

Though scattered far and wide the members of 1902 give evidence of busy, purposeful lives.

Helen Dickey is an instructor in the University of Chicago.

Grace K. Shear assisted in conducting Red Cross Shop and Tea Room in Akron, in addition to keeping house and taking care of her small son.

To Clara has come the joy of welcoming a little daughter, Eleanor Francis, and the sorrow of losing her mother and aunt. In stating that she nursed three children through the mumps and has in all two sons and two daughters to care for, Clara thinks that further remarks are superfluous.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Margaret Herriott is just as busy as a good mother with three active sons and one equally stirring young daughter can be.

Margaret McKinney has been elected Secretary of the Associated Charities of Fairmont, and still finds time (and opportunity) to help out her family when there is need of special efficiency.

Annie M. Young is devoting her energies to the welfare of her three charming little daughters and a very busy husband.

Helen Fuller proudly informs us that her city has partial suffrage now and that she voted in the city election. However, she still finds time to care for her little daughter, Elizabeth, and further remarks that she will be in Pittsburgh for the celebration at P. C. W. in 1920 "or bust"!

Mary Shrom Gay contrives to keep busy with housekeeping. During the past winter she helped nurse relatives sick with the flu.

Edith Stanton acted as director for five months for all Women's Work in the United War Work Drive for the Central Department, composed of 14 states (headquarters in Chicago; object, to raise 59 millions in those states). As an anti-climax she is at present (as for some years past) Executive Secretary in the Office Department National Board Y. W. C. A.

Elizabeth Van Wagener is keeping house at home for her father and mother.

Ann spent the winter holidays at the home of her sister Rose, during her enforced absence. Housekeeper and assistant to the nurse when the three little nephews and niece, and later, the maid, were stricken with the flu, left her with few idle moments.

Elsie has had one year of "Maidless" housekeeping and let me tell you the effort to have a smoothly running menage, a well fed family of five and a little fun in between is quite sufficient contract for one.

CLASS OF 1903

Another year has brought many new experiences to the Class of '03, as revealed in the letters and questionnaires received by the class secretary.

A rare treat was the letter from Ruth Johnstin, who says that the secretary's sarcasm seems more effective in producing a letter from her than all the secretary's appeals for news. It is something to have learned how to reach the lady at last—though the sarcastic attack may be overworked in the future. But for the present, we learn that Ruth is still teaching Chemistry at Milwaukee-Downer, and, though sorely tempted to give up her work and devote her talents to the service of her country, she finally decided that, since teachers were scarce, it was more patriotic to stick to her post and train other women for service. In answer to the question, "How many children do you have?" she replies "Nothing but a French orphan"—but even at that she has more than some of the rest of us.

Eleanor Fitzgibbon is bubbling over with enthusiasm about her splendid country home, "Montpelier Manor," situated twenty miles from Washington and Baltimore. It is full of historic interest as it was built in 1740 and owned by Major Thomas Snowdon, who often entertained George Washington there. It must be a lovely spot with its ancient box hedges, its encircling oak forests, its great variety of flowers and birds, and the aeroplane mail between New York and Washington passing overhead twice a day as regularly as clock-work. But Eleanor doesn't sit in idleness, dreaming of the past and present beauties of her home; she is full of hustle as well as romance, and is deep in the mysteries of raising 4,000 baby chicks, 800 ducklings, and 100 Berkshire pigs. She is now taking a real, practical course in Biology and we wish her all the success in the world.

Sarah Pfeil Baker has also taken up a new and wonderfully interesting work. Sarah's past, present, and future employment is that of "Homemaker," and as a home without a child cannot be a complete and ideal thing, Sarah has acquired a perfectly darling baby girl to fill the home, her heart and her life full of love and interest. Her new work is, in her own words, "taking a practical course in the science and art of the care and training of children, the subject of both practical and original research being one, Elizabeth Brown Baker, more commonly known as "Betty." We had the pleasure of seeing Betty last Thanksgiving and she is deserving of all the wealth of affection Sarah and her husband lavish upon her. She is truly the "only real absolute monarch in the world."

Hattie Duff Phillips is about the busiest person one could find in a year's search. She is not only the mother of five active children, three girls and two boys, who must be trained in the very latest and most approved methods, but she is settlement worker, Liberty Loan campaign manager, Emergency Hospital head, and dear knows what not. She says in her note, "I am still very much interested in the Brashear Settlement which is doing a wonderful work. However, the most part of my life is making worth while the day for five busy, energetic youngsters. I used to think that when the children were older I would have more time for other things; but the older they grow the more I feel the responsibility of their future—but a beautiful responsibility. I realize more every day the advantages of the college education to a mother. I believe the curriculum can be changed to advantage in some few points, but in a big way the academic work for four years is really a wonderful foundation for a modern mother.” There is some food for thought.

Anna Myra Petty Irwin is another one of our homemakers, and she looks more like a big sister to her three splendid children than their mother. Right now she is unusually active moving into her fine new home on Darlington Road. Her daughter, Jean, is blossoming into a young lady very fast and her leisure is taken up with dancing school, music lessons and trips to Atlantic City to visit her grandmother. Her parents are seriously considering her future college, as admission to some of our largest and best colleges has to be sought many years in advance these days. May it ever be so with P. C. W.

We had a real treat at Christmas time when Hattie summoned us hurriedly to a luncheon to meet Mary Willson Coleman, who was in the city visiting her parents. Mary's human side is developing quite rapidly these days as her three little girls won't let anything else happen. Since her oldest goes to school, Mary writes me that her house holds only two children most of the time. Before then her family usually consisted of sixteen or thereabouts as Mary had to run a day nursery for the neighborhood. We asked Mary if she still took a vital interest in her husband's Greek Classes, but she told us that Greek had failed her, as her husband has had to teach some kind of military tactics the past year and she didn't know much about such. A great change has come into the Willson family. Dr. Willson passed away February 13th and so Mrs. Willson has sold the home where the family lived thirty-eight years and is moving to Wilkinsburg to live with her son, Burt, who has a church there.

Anna Hunter is still teaching at the Schenley High School and enjoys her work and her visits to her married sister, Bess, who lives on the Potomac in Virginia. Hilda Sadler is secretary of the Belmar School and as she is always going to the theatre or some lecture; she must be keeping up her intellectual development. She is apparently very busy. And Jane! Oh well, she is learning to live and trying to help others to do the same and to find beauty and happiness in the sunshine, the wind, and the rain.

JENNIE McSHERRY SMITH.

CLASS OF 1904

The Class of 1904 has had its usual year of activity in various branches of war, college, church and home work, within almost every case, some practice in the new profession of amateur nursing. Our love for P. C. W. is, if possible, increasing and we are all planning to make our "bit" toward the Jubilee a worthwhile bit.

Nancy Blair is always busy, but as usual, refuses to particularize.

Elizabeth Carpenter Dearborn has moved to Summit, N. J., and finds the new home most pleasant. Her letters hint of extremely interesting things she has been doing "for the first time," but she says she thinks it would be safer to go on record as doing the thousand and one things every mother of a rather stirring family of four kiddies must do. The sorrow of the war has touched Elizabeth in the death in France of her only brother.

Rebekah Eggers is teaching French in the Pittsburgh High School and has been deep in Red Cross and other war work. Rebekah was one of the accepted volunteers for Red Cross duty overseas, and the signing of the armistice preceded by only a few weeks the time planned for her leaving Pittsburgh. Incidentally, Rebekah is turning over a new leaf in some important matters such as "answering letters promptly."

Jessie Gray is still Dean of the Flagler Preparatory School, in Jacksonville, Florida. We hear of Red Cross pageants and several allusions to studying Spanish, so it seems safe to infer that Jessie, like all the rest, is "busy."

Edna McKee Houston is a 1904-ite who always "regrets" not having anything new to report. Edna has always done so many things that we are not surprised to hear of or from her in connection with all the P. C. W. undertakings. With a "Major" for a husband, naturally all kinds of war work have made their successful appeal to her and Edna, too, has been "busy."

Lida Young is "manager-in-chief" of the Swissvale Carnegie Library, and "just loves" her work. Lida has been spending some of these nice spring days in moving, and her new address is 5410 Howe Street.

Helen Thomas Larimer feels that ambition and accomplishment didn't work together very well this past year, but hopes to make a better showing soon. Life has been pretty quiet with Marjorie's first promotion and fervent desire for a wee white puppy, taking their place among the "exciting" events. H. T. L., '04.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1905

The Class of 1905 has little of moment to report this year, and I am happy to say that little is good if uneventful. As a class, we are, I am delighted to record, outnumbered by our babies, which is as it should be, thanks to the good mothers among us. Outnumbered by one only, someone will laugh, but when you consider that our six wee ones belong to two of us only, and that there are three possibilities left, perhaps your mirth will subside somewhat. Please note I said "possibilities," politely avoiding the word "probabilities."

Florence writes, with a headline underscored—This is Not for Publication—that she did not fill out the item, "Present Employment," on the slip I sent her, "for as yet I haven't heard or been able to coin a word that exactly expresses just what I am doing. That is, one that will cover the ground." That, I am sure, will strike a responsive chord among many Recorder readers. She speaks of seeing some of the old P. C. W. people, among them Miss Green and Willa McNitt, and says that our old friend, Miss March, is as dear as ever. She is planning to come to the anniversary next year, but is not at all sure, due to the many and startling things that can happen to a family over night. She and her two little men send greetings and best wishes to everyone.

Betty modestly puts the word "Housewife" on the dotted line specifying "Present Employment," and then tells me in a short note that they have moved on a chicken ranch and already have six hundred baby chicks. As she has four little bells ringing on her farm, I'm sure they and the six hundred chicks give her "enough" to do all the day long. She writes very enthusiastically about California life as she lives it and I hope some day to look in on her 'way out there.

Frank, I am very sorry to say, has had a right miserable time for the last year, having wretched health caused primarily by asthma. She writes very cheerfully and bravely from her apartment in the King Edward, that things are about the same and that it might be worse. We hope, with all our hearts, that it is going to be much better, for Frank is just the one to enjoy life and its offerings.

Helen made a flying visit to Pittsburgh just before Christmas last year and reported herself then, as having taught some school, kept some house, nursed some, and at that writing was the "business man" of the family—the magic word "business" having brought her north.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

For myself, the days go quickly, I am busy from morning till night, still pursuing business and occasionally catching up with it, wearing no wreaths nor winning laurels, doing a little better every year I hope, and still once in a while wondering, "what it is all about."

CLASS OF 1906

April 15th sounded afar off when the little note came, urging a report from each girl, but April 15th is here and this secretary is not ready. True, I know about my classmates, but it is a little hard to write for the Recorder.

Willa yet will cause her classmates to appreciate the honor of being such, for she untiringly delves into the mysteries and villainies of germs. At present located in St. Louis, working in the Washington University, in Barnes Hospital, she could unfold to her classmates much that is beyond their ken. However, Willa is still Willa and we're not afraid.

This month we three of 1906 have been drawn closer through sorrow. James L. Rifemberick, Verna's husband, has been called to a better land. The summons came April 6th, at eventide. Little Ruth, aged 3, scarcely realizes the change which has come. She looks out on the world with a smiling face and a smile comes back to her.

With the slowing up of Red Cross work the third member of '06 thought she saw a little leisure ahead, but alas! that is only a myth. And while the days go by, each one is crowded with the little things which just must be done.

CLASS OF 1907

The Class of 1907 has had a great sorrow during the past year in the death of Edith Allison Boyd, on December 13. Edith was dearly loved by us all, and had many friends in the college who will grieve with us. It is the first loss that has come to our number, and we all feel that no class reunion can ever be quite the same again without her. We remember Edith at college as always bright, happy, cheerful and optimistic, and these very valuable qualities she later carried with her into her own home. Beautiful and lovely, as she always was, those who knew her best loved her for her beauty of character, and loveliness of spirit. Edith had two adorable little daughters and one small son. Her death is an unspeakable loss to these little ones and to her husband, for Edith was a wonderful mother and homemaker. But a very beautiful memory of her will remain with them, as it will with all who had the joy of knowing her.

Most of us have been pursuing the even course of life in the busy way that the last year has forced upon us.

Clara Niebaum has once more spent a happy winter teaching in the Aspinwall High School. Clara, being fortunate to have good train service, is able to travel back and forth each day; and so has the advantage of living at home and teaching out of town.

Ellen McKee is yet more fortunate in that direction, as her home and place of business are across the street from each other, which arrangement allows Ellen more time for knitting, gardening, and other arduous tasks.

Mary McKee has once more returned to New England. Mary believes in investigating the whole United States. We are anxious to find out her ultimate decision as to the really right place to live. She is now teaching in Connecticut College, New London, Connecticut. As this is a return to New England for Mary, and as the news has just come that she has agreed to remain for three years more at the college, perhaps we may assume that she has found the perfect spot.

When Grace Stevenson McKibben spends the winter in Corapolis, we only expect to see her about twice, and the expectation usually proves true. We much prefer to have her spend the winters in East End. In the first place, we see her oftener—in the second, it sounds well to say that one of our number can boast both a summer home and a winter home. At last accounts Grace was reported to be in good health and spirits.

Bess Johnson McGinnity has spent a busy and happy winter. As soon as Red Cross work began to lighten, the rummage sale loomed up, and for several weeks she was able to direct her thoughts and energies to nothing else. But as "Rest is Rust," she is probably glad to be busy.

B. J. McG., Secretary.

CLASS OF 1908

We have had a very uneventful year and I'm afraid there is very little exciting news to relate. The Class letter is always a most welcome visitor (though a rare one this year) and we find even the every-day news interesting to each other.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

We always enjoy Myrtle's letters from San Bernardino, and the news of Alfred and Edwin and Caroline, especially the snapshots.

Virginia said when besought for "news" that she positively hadn't any. She lived the same place and had the same husband and the same children and was going along just as usual.

Lilla, however, is moving this spring to White Plains, N. Y., where they will make their home. Lilla and her family enjoyed the two weeks' furlough which her brother George had this spring, after seeing active service in France. Besides leading his company in battles he had been made a major and adviser on trench artillery on the staff of the general of the third corps. Like everyone else they are thankful the war is over.

There really isn't any news about Mary this year. Though interested in everyone else, I'm afraid she can't add a single item herself.

N. M. McJ.

CLASS OF 1911

Perhaps the greatest change in the Class of 1911 has been the gradually decreasing number of school teachers. From ten, the year following graduation, there are only four who have found the proposition interesting enough to remain—Mabel Crowe Baird, Maggie May McCullough, Edna Reitz and Edith Medley.

Elma Trussell has been engaged in war work in Washington, D. C.

Florence Wilson spent the summer in Washington doing government work and last October sailed for France where she has spent a busy and happy winter doing recreation work in Evacuation Hospital 36, Nantes. She would appreciate letters from the girls, though she says her time is so occupied she can't promise an answer.

Clarissa Blakeslee also went to France as a reconstruction worker with the Red Cross. A card from Athens announced she had left and would return home in the near future.

Alice Darrah visited Margaret Greene and had a trip to Mississippi during the year. Her marriage to Mr. Anderson R. Sheppard was a surprise to most of us. We sincerely sympathize with Alice in the death of her mother last fall.

Sara Carpenter has been at home where she has taken the usual interest in events pertaining to the college. The death of her brother a few days before the armistice was signed on the field of duty in France was especially sad. Words are futile at such times and only those who have passed through the shadow can understand.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Frances Gray Everhardt has had a trying winter due to illness and Jimmie has not regained his usual health after an attack of influenza.

Irma Diescher reports the unusual experience of moving the winter's supply of coal across the cellar.

Margaret Greene White has been in New York City awaiting Ensign White's discharge from the Navy. She hopes soon to be in their own home.

Minerva Hamilton had a severe nervous breakdown, from which she is gradually recovering.

Rosalie Supplee reports the unenviable experience of moving twice in one year.

A letter from Gertrude says that she expects to make her home in Chicago. Mr. Horvitz has been engaged in the electrical manufacturing business and has charge of the western territory.

BELLE McCLYMONDS MARSHALL,
Secretary, Class of 1911.

CLASS OF 1912

This year has brought sorrow and the loss of loved ones to six members of our Class.

Lieutenant Duncan Cameron, brother of Frances Cameron Doane, was killed June 24, 1918, at the Miami Aviation Field just a few days before his escadrille sailed for France.

Thomas Brainerd Coburn, husband of Elvira Estep Coburn, was "killed in action" on July 15, 1918, at the second battle of the Marne. He was a member of the One Hundred and Ninth Regiment of the Twenty-eighth Division. His commission as Second Lieutenant came a few days after his death.

Ellsworth K. Davies, only brother of Frances Davies Kerr, died in a hospital in France on August 15, 1918, three days after being gassed in action with the One Hundred and Eleventh Regiment of the "Iron Division."

We express our heartfelt sympathy also to Hazel Hickson and Eleanor Davis Woodside, both of whom lost their father during the past winter, and to Daisy Sharp in the death of her brother, Jack, who died from pneumonia at Fort Worth, Texas.

Our Class has something important to tell and that is the arrival of a new baby on February 26, 1919. His name is Harry William Reed, Jr., and he is the son of Mary Hardy Reed, our Class president. Mary and the baby are visiting in Pittsburgh.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Frances Cameron Doane reports that she has done nothing except keep house and watch her hair turn white over the antics of her wee son; George Duncan Doane is an adorable child and a tireless bunch of activity.

Nevin Woodside, III, is a charming little fellow, full of energy and into everything. He allows Eleanor few idle moments.

Maude Shutt Cochran and her family have moved to Jamestown, New York. She has two wonderful boys and her whole time is occupied in training them. Maude writes that she is making every effort to bring up a real President for these United States and thinks Paul, her two-year-old son, who happens to have red hair, will be qualified, for a man needs red hair for that position.

Martha Sands Kirtland modestly refrains from answering my wild appeal for news and Florence Bickel Swan and Mary Gray write that they have done nothing new or exciting during the past year.

Esther O'Neill, as usual, has found a multitude of things to occupy her time. Last August she decided to work, so while shopping one morning, she stopped in the Pennsylvania Railroad Office, secured a position immediately and returned home with a "job," but none of the things she was supposed to purchase. During the winter, "Tess" suffered from a severe attack of the "flu," but she has fully recovered.

Beulah Pierce seems to have been "here and there and everywhere." After her return from the West, she secured a position in the office of the Adjutant General in Washington, D. C. She found "war work" in our capital most interesting. She is now employed in the Sales Department of the Procter-Gamble Company in Pittsburgh.

Lillie Lindsay is continuing her course in nursing at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York and likes it very much, especially the surgical work. Hazel Hickson is secretary of the Junior Red Cross in Pittsburgh.

Daisy Sharp, Martha Kim, Helen Grooms, Calla Stahlman, Elvira E. Coburn and Lillian McHenry are still classified as teachers. Mary Keen is principal of the high school at Madison, Connecticut. She writes that she sometimes becomes quite homesick for P. C. W. and her classmates and frequently dreams of them as she has no leisure for thinking of old friends in her waking hours.

Cosette Spence is still extremely enthusiastic over her work in the Juvenile Court at Philadelphia.

Edith Chaddock Nichols is evidently lost in the "wide, wide world." I wrote to the only address I knew, but my letter was returned. I telephoned to several classmates for news of her but none of them had seen nor heard of her. I hope that Edith will be located before another Recorder letter is due.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

F. D. K., Secretary.

CLASS OF 1914

War work and routine have had a happy effect upon the members of 1914. A deluge of replies overwhelmed the surprised and pleased secretary where she humbly requested a little information. Whether the little printed slips distributed by a discerning Alumnae secretary to the class secretaries had the desired effect, or some other cause contributed, the result was delightful. I think everyone has been learning to do what one 1914 girl put as her answer to the question, "What have you done this year that you have never done before," and that is, "Learned to work twenty-four hours and call it a day." So with many of us!

Anne Rutherford says some interesting things in her reply—which I quote in part—"I am still teaching Latin and English in the Washington High School and, in spite of discouragements, for the most part like it better every year. I find that it was much easier to learn Latin than to try to instill it into others. I started work towards my M. A. degree at Columbia last summer and if all goes well, Janet and I are going there together next fall for the whole year. Of course, plans may not materialize and one or both may go on teaching, but we surely hope to go."

Marguerite McBurney has been teaching in the chemistry department of our own college this past year.

Gertrude Goeddel has been busy with her music as always. She confesses to joining the Tuesday Musical Club and the Cecelia Choir in the past year.

Hazel Rider says she has been doing the same old round of things as ever, and aside from indulging in the "flu" twice, has done nothing extraordinary or uncalled for.

Margaret Brown has finally settled down to housekeeping; after a year and a half pursuing Scott from camp to camp she has drawn a long breath and sits down beside her own fireside and tea kettle. From all reports she is enjoying it very much and has had the nerve to entertain a large party of at least eight people at dinner (her own cooking, too.)

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Word from Phoebe Knight says that she has been continuing her own chosen work of teaching with war work of all kinds as a side issue.

Juanita Husband and Ethel Williams have both had husbands in France. Ethel's is back safely, but I do not know if Juniata's has returned yet. They also have small daughters born a month apart, of which fact announcement is made elsewhere.

Giulietta Plympton is teaching English and Latin in the Arnold High School, Arnold, Pa.

Mary Larage is teaching French in the Homestead High School. She announces no plans for the future.

Pauline Burt has been an instructor in the chemistry department of Vassar College for the past year. Her future is also uncertain.

Margery Stewart has had charge of the chemistry department of the Kenilworth High School of Kenilworth, Ill. She has not decided what to do the coming year.

Josette Kochersperg has moved again, her pet diversion it would seem, and is now in Columbus, Ohio. For her own career in the past twelve months the secretary can report such incidents as an operation, a baby, a sick father, sick mother, the "flu" twice, etc.—but what's the use of talking "flu!" Farewell until 1920.

MARJORY BOGGS TAYLOR, 1914.

CLASS OF 1915

The Class of 1915 is scattered somewhat but bound closer together than ever. Our small number has lost a very dear member. Those who knew Lorna Burleigh will appreciate our loss and will know how much we, who were close to her, miss her loyal friendship, enthusiasm and inspiration.

Grace Davies, who is Mrs. Hamilton, is still a shining light in the darkness of Ellsworth, whose heart she won several years ago.

Virginia Morris Speer still feels marriage is not a failure. The "1915" aunts of little Betty Millicent presented their class baby with a silver mug a few months ago.

Janet Campbell still leads a life of leisure and ease in Butler. We have an idea she does more than she says, but we cannot prove it, we see her so seldom.

We hardly ever see Jane Johnston, but hear from her occasionally. She is teaching in California, Pa., and doing other important things.

Olga Losa continues to be an educator in Coraopolis, and we hear, not from Olga, for she is very modest, that she is a successful one.

We hear the same thing of Mary Jeffery, who not only educates Glenshaw, but socializes it as well.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, besides being under government control, has Betty Cameron to reckon with, and suffered lately while Betty had a leave of absence on account of illness. We are proud to own one real business woman.

The writer is still engrossed in social work and has been running over Allegheny County for nearly a year in the interests of the Red Cross.

MARY HALL ESTEP.

CLASS OF 1916

Once more the time of year has come when the bonds of friendship seem to be more tightly drawn and we greet our sisters of the Alumnae.

I wonder if a class ever existed whose members were egotistical enough to boast of their achievements. If so, its secretary must have rejoiced. Such, however, is not the nature of the Class of '16. I think the girls must perform so many worthy deeds they have no time to tell about them.

Teaching still continues to hold the attention of more of the girls than any other profession, and yet the school room is gradually losing its attraction for them. During this last year Ethel Bair took a course in Y. W. C. A. work and she is now a secretary at Washington, D. C. Martha Gibbons became interested in the chemical department of the Goodyear Tire Company, and by her work there has helped to win the war and give pleasure to American motorists.

The girls who are engaged in social service have been doing splendid work along this line, some of their achievements are recounted when the Cora Helen Coolidge Club meets at P. C. W. Melba Martin is the only one who has transferred her activities so far away as Boston.

One more member of the Class has changed her name and instead of signing herself Alberta Bannerot she writes, "Mrs. William Lappe." Our other married lady is busy getting ready to go to housekeeping when her husband, Captain McCaw, returns from France.

ALUMNAE RECORDE

Although those of us who had no definite occupation had more time to devote to war work most of the members of the class found time to take an active interest in the Red Cross and those other organizations which have been the nearest approach to the front-line trenches that the average American woman has attained.

FRANCES ELEANOR BOALE,
Secretary.

CLASS OF 1917

If an unknowing stranger should drop in upon one of the little gatherings which the "town girls of '17" sometimes affect and listen for a time to the spirited conversation, he would be likely to exclaim, "How strange that the whole class should become school teachers!" Alas, 'tis not so! A scanty half of our number are practicing the pedagogical art, but being accustomed to hold forth to a more or less intelligent audience, they feel it their duty to lead the conversation along instructive lines. Those of us who have occupied business positions of great responsibility sit by silent, for what would these dreamers understand of the intricacies of finance, etc., and we hesitate to thrust technicalities upon them. There is Dorothea Eggers, who has been for the past year with the Potter Title & Trust Co. She has become quite flippant with law terms and now offers herself as legal adviser to any of her classmates in distress.

Here is Betty, who can now qualify as an expert bank bookkeeper (having had one year's experience in three different banks). Three different positions in one year—sounds rather suspicious, but the facts are these: She learned her trade at the Homewood Peoples Bank while her husband tried to decide whether he would navigate the air or the sea. Having decided upon the latter, Betty packed up her luggage and moved to Norfolk, Va., where she earned a precarious living in a bank there. She remained with her husband until he was discharged and is now settled once more in her own home. She wishes to state that she has added a guest room to her suite and her friends have an urgent invitation to come and occupy it.

Perhaps our teachers do have a little cause for complaint. Owing to the epidemic they were all obliged to take vacations—some of them also took the flu. Dot was one of these careless people. Having nursed the whole family through their share of it, she promptly came down with it herself. Her children were perfect dears, of course! They did page after page of unassigned arithmetic problems just to please their beloved teacher. It is a wonder Dot did not have a relapse. She teaches, by the way, at Miss Shearer's private school (very select, oh, dear, yes.) Ten years from now she can say that she has taught all of the socially prominent in the city of Pittsburgh.

Aline also had shadowy thoughts of departing this world via the diphtheria route, but she reconsidered in time. She is now her plump self again and has returned to her teaching. She teaches Latin and Algebra in the Junior High and she just loves it! Now, Aline!

Jane is the one who will do the class proud. She is a Graduate Fellow and Assistant in Physics (sounds sort of hard, but I guess it is all right) at Mount Holyoke and expects (they always say "expect") to get her A. M. in June. Oh, dear, how very learned! Jane longs to see the world after her rather cloistered life and has rashly joined an agency. I suppose she is going to waste herself on some poor urchins who do not know half as much as she does. Or perhaps she meant a detective agency.

Helen Pardee flits back and forward between New Brighton and Pittsburgh and so we see a little more of her than formerly. She teaches her usual round of subjects and tells us that she likes it. They all say that, though, but you never can tell when some mere male is going to make them change their minds.

Martha Dunbar has been pursuing her lately acquired husband over the country. Not that he is eluding her already, but you see he was a Chaplain in the Navy and one can never tell what might happen next. They were stationed at Cape May where Martha did "light housekeeping." She is now residing in the manse at Cross Creeks, Pa. (dear me, did we ever think that we would come to this?) and probably doing a little "heavier" housekeeping. So far she has refused to exhibit her husband to an expectant class, but we hope that she will rectify this error in the near future. Carrie is teaching at the Union High School in Burgettstown and the wires between there and Cross Creeks have burned several times. Up to the present writing she and Martha had not succeeded in setting up any closer lines of communication. Carrie, we might say, is head of the science department and teaches History and Civics on the side. Carrie always could cover space when she felt inclined.

Ada, as far as we can find out, corresponds with no one, and refuses to divulge her inmost thoughts and feelings. We have discovered by underhand methods that she teaches five classes of Algebra in the Wellsville High School. We hesitate to state whether she has become more plump or more lean under this strenuous treatment; at any rate you have to be pretty healthy to teach five classes of Algebra daily.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Louise is teaching English in the Fifth Avenue High School, but that is a mere incident in her life because she is going to Harvard this summer. How that girl does thirst for knowledge! Yes, sir, she is going to take one hour's work a day. The rest of her time is to be spent in the liberal education of meeting people. Alas, whose fate may be concealed in this simple statement! The plans so far are vague, but there is talk of "motoring" up in a Ford touring car and perhaps walking back—who knows? Louise has, during the past few weeks, kept house while her mother was visiting in the South. She has seemed exceedingly grateful for a square meal occasionally, so we feel for her long suffering family.

Katherine Keck occupies the same position as she held last year in the Greensburg H. S. Last summer, she informs us, she tried to break the back of an adding machine and in the fall hesitated as to whether she would remain to subdue the animal or return to teaching. She chose the latter and shows no signs of regret. After all, there is nothing human about an adding machine.

I doubt if any of us would recognize poor Martie. Alas, she has fallen from the heights of the frivolous and become hopelessly "schoolmarmish." As a result of the familiarity of one of her non-cherubs in addressing her by her Christian name, Martie yanked her hair back tight and acquired the frightful habit of looking over her glasses. How terrified the poor youngsters must be! She had an awful attack of the Flu, but does not wish any sympathy wasted on her because she will go without her "gums." She has had an honor which makes the rest of us envious. She is the only member of the class who has viewed with awe the perfections of our class baby. The subject no doubt begs description, but Martie seems to have fallen a victim at first sight. Ruth took the baby for a flying visit to Warren. She seems to be traveling around the country considerably. Her headquarters just now are at her home in Jamestown, but she recently paid a visit to her husband in Washington and we hope soon to have her as a permanent resident of Pittsburgh. How that baby will be spoiled when he becomes acquainted with all his new aunts!

Edna Balsiger is now Principal of the High School at Rural Valley, Pa. She just teaches Caesar, Cicero, Algebra, Geometry and Physics; also all of the eighth grade, making fourteen classes a day. I wonder what Edna does in her leisure hours. She is planning also to send all her graduates to P. C. W., so we will soon find out what sort of a teacher she is.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Estelle is still at the theological seminary. We will hear of her preaching a regular sermon soon. She is the head librarian now and is very keen about her work. Her heart still remains in France, but there seems to be some hope that he will swim across soon. The sooner the better because we are all just dying to go to a wedding.

Ruth Law has spent most of her time at home nursing first a tooth and then a toe. Between twinges she did a little substituting whenever called upon.

Kate is still at the Aspinwall High School. She tells some dreadful tales of the bad boys, but Kate seems to be surviving their rough treatment.

We are in receipt of a business-like, typewritten sheet bearing the insignia of the New Kensington Red Cross and we note the name of our classmate as secretary of the above mentioned organization. We presume that the letter was dictated to a stenographer. Leah informs us further that her title is "Executive Secretary of Civilian Relief," that she is financially independent of her worthy parents and that she presides at a roll top desk of her own. We hear from other sources that she did quite wonderful things during the flu epidemic and no doubt "ran" the town in general.

Owing to the delay in the demobilizing of troops in France and elsewhere we have no new engagements or marriages to report. If they are all discharged at once what a gay time we will have! In the meantime we live in hopes.

E. McC. C.

CLASS OF 1918

The year 1919 finds most of the class of 1918 members of the teaching profession. Fourteen, out of the class of twenty-four, have, since last fall, been teaching young ideas how to shoot. The business world has gained by the shrewd wit and intelligence of seven of the class. Only one (thus far) has married.

Early in the summer of 1918 Eulalia Fournier became the wife of Mr. Kenneth Babbit, of Beaver, Pa.

The undersigned is eagerly awaiting a promised letter from the Oriental member of the class, Kamala Cornelius. Thus far we do not know what she is doing, but we do know that, whatever it is, her beloved India will be the better for it.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

We hesitate for lack of positive information to venture to name the business firms which have profited by inroads upon our class. We can only safely name those who have entered the business world. Their positions range from that of general manager to office boy-president. They are Mollie Davidson, Elizabeth Eggers, Elinor Goldsmit, Janet Hill, Emilie Kates, Dorothy Minor and Kathryn Myers.

Rachel Alexander has been substituting in the Washington, Pa., schools.

Esther Evans has taught in the high school in Wellsville, Ohio.

Eleanor Fuller has taught "almost everything" in the MacDonald, Pa., high school.

Charlotte Hunker has taught "Math" in the high school in Ben Avon, Pa.

Ruth Kauffman has taught science in Strongsville, Ohio, high school.

Ruth Logan has taught in the grades in Wilkinsburg, Pa. Ruth probably had a reason to wish to be "near home."

Ruth Long has taught Mathematics and Ancient History in the Ligonier, Pa., high school.

Annetta Marks seems to have been keeping the home fires burning in her home in Pittsburgh.

Betty McKenzie has taught in the grades in Wellsburg, W. Va.

Jo Paul has taught science in the Bellevue, Pa., high school.

Betty Sheppard has been teaching literally "everything" in the Coraopolis, Pa., high school. She "taught two hundred pupils a day and thoroughly enjoyed it."

Winona Sterling has certainly "gone out into the wide, wide world." She has taught History in the high school at Eustis, Florida, and had enough experiences "to fill a book."

Martha Temple has taught French in the Washington, Pa., high school.

Lorena Van Kirk has been teaching in her home town of West Newton, Pa.

Olive Wolf has taught English and Modern History in the Ligonier, Pa., high school.

R. OLIVE WOLF, Secretary, Class 1918.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

"Hope Villa," Kilparik, Madras, South India,

April 3, 1919.

To the Members of the Alumnae Association of Pennsylvania College for Women.

Dear friends:

Last year I had the privilege of being with you, but this year I am far away in a different land altogether, but even though I am living far off yet my heart is still in P. C. W. I cannot forget the dear old college and all my friends. I wish very much that I could be present for the Alumnae meeting and for Commencement, but it is impossible. Even though I am far yet I shall be with you in spirit on that day. As I belong to this association I don't feel as though I am out of college, but feel quite happy to be in it yet.

I suppose you all know what I am doing now. I have been an Assistant in Chemistry in the Women's Christian College in Madras. I enjoy the work immensely. The four years' course that I had in P. C. W. has helped me to do so many things after I came home. I am quite happy here at home. I miss my American college life very much, but I am glad all the studying is over and now I have begun to do things and help lots of people and I am sure this is a far better thing than study. When I was there last year we used to say that we'll be out in the cold, cold world, but it is not so. Life becomes more interesting when we become quite independent and begin to do things in this world. I hope it will be the same for the girls who are graduating this year.

Dear class of 1919, I congratulate you as a whole class for your success. I wish you all a happy time and a successful life. It would be nice if I were there to congratulate you personally, but as I cannot be present in body I shall be in spirit and I'll be thinking of you that day here in India and wishing you all good things. May God bless each one of you abundantly and make you a channel of blessing wherever He may choose to send you. I wish some of you were coming to India. There is so much to do and I sometimes do more than I can and then begin to think of you all and wish you could come over here to help others. God will send you if it is His will. Congratulations and love to each one of you from your far-off friend, Kamala Cornelius.

I was very sorry to hear of some of the deaths that occurred in the Association, some of whom I knew personally and some whom

ALUMNAE RECORDER

I did not know. May God comfort their loved ones. We shall no doubt miss them, but we know that God has called them for a higher and nobler life to live with Him, so they must be happy and therefore we should not grieve.

I send my greetings to each and every one of you and I hope you will all have an enjoyable time at this Commencement time.

With all best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

KAMALA CORNELIUS (Class of 1918).

THE JUNE MEETING

The regular June meeting of the Alumnae Association of Pennsylvania College for Women was held at the college Friday, June 7, 1918. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Spencer, and the minutes of the last meeting read and accepted. The following report submitted by the Advisory Board was read by Mrs. Pardee:

Three meetings were held during the year.

At the first, June, 1917, committees were appointed to "prepare a list of eligible association members," "to revise constitution" and "to nominate officers."

At the second, held in February, 1918, Miss Helen Blair reported progress on preparation of the list of associate members. The dean, Miss Root, was present. She reported that the drawing room furniture in Berry Hall was in a deplorable condition. On this occasion the Advisory Board decided to hold one social meeting as per action taken at the Alumnae meeting in October, in the College Club rooms, on March 16. Committees for social meeting were appointed as follows: Hostess committee, Mrs. A. G. Holmes, chairman; entertainment committee, Mrs. J. H. McGinnity, chairman; committee to make plans for refurnishing Berry Hall drawing room, Mrs. Walter McLean, chairman. A very delightful meeting of about sixty members took place March 16, a musical program being furnished by Miss Steele, Miss Goeddel and Mrs. Keister. The energetic chairman of the furnishing committee made a thorough and comprehensive report as to conditions and amount of money needed; also valuable suggestions as to ways and means of raising same. A benefit bridge and knitting party was decided upon, to be given April 13. Moved, that report of Advisory Board be accepted. Carried.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Miss Davison, chairman of committee in charge of bridge and knitting party held at Hotel Schenley, reported $372.25 cleared and turned over to treasurer of Association.

Mrs. Warmcastle, chairman of refurnishing committee, reported rooms ready for inspection. In addition to installation of electricity, reupholstering, purchase of scarfs and lamps, the committee reports the gift of a davenport table from Mrs. Spencer and another table unasked for from the class of '98. They asked for pillows and lamps. The total disbursements included $60 from the accumulated interest on the permanent fund.

Motion carried that this report be accepted with thanks.

Mrs. Miller reported $1,250 in the Florence I. Holmes Davis Memorial Library fund.

Mrs. Clarke presented a valuable classical library, which had belonged to Mr. Pelletreau, brother of Miss Pelletreau. These were gratefully accepted by the college library committee.

The treasurer's report was read by Miss Houston and accepted with thanks.

Mrs. Searing, chairman of the Recorder Board, reported that the books were ready at an expense of only $2 in excess of last year despite many more pages. Moved, that this report be accepted with thanks. Carried.

The class of 1918, 24 members, was then welcomed by the president who made a splendid speech in which new associate members were also welcomed into the association.

Miss Root, the dean, also gave an informal welcome and spoke of her appreciation of the warmth of greeting extended to her by the Alumnae. She also gave a brief report of school conditions and activities, especially in regard to the six-day schedule.

Miss Sadler reported for lecture committee and Miss Renshaw for scholarship committee.

Miss Helen Blair reported on the activities of the associate membership committee.

Miss Meloy announced that on May 18, 1918, there had been formed the Cora Helen Coolidge Club for social service. The members include social service certificate graduates of P. C. W. Moved, that this club be given a cordial reception by the Association and be requested to report in Recorder each year. Carried.

Miss Beard, chairman of the Alumnae committee on the jubilee to be celebrated June, 1920, gave a comprehensive report of their plans, asking future co-operation of members.

Mrs. Miller asked the chair to appoint a ways and means committee to co-operate with the jubilee committee. Carried.

Mrs. Searing presented Miss Houston's plan for a treasury contribution from each member, amount to be optional, pledge cards to be distributed at the meeting. Moved, that we accept Miss Houston's plan as presented, money to constitute a contingent fund. Carried.

Mrs. Jones moved that we withdraw from the State Federation. Laid on table till fall meeting.

The committee on revising the constitution presented the new document for consideration. Accepted as offered with a few minor changes. Moved, that revised constitution be printed in next year's Recorder. Carried.

Announcement was made of National Educational Association convention to be held in Pittsburgh June 25-July 5, 1918.

This was followed by the roll call, to which 183 responded.

Nominations committee, Miss Ellen McKee, chairman, presented the following slate:

President.....Mrs. John M. Pardee, '79
Vice President.....Mrs. J. H. McGinnity, '07
Recording Secretary.....Mrs. Mabel C. Baird, '11
Corresponding Secretary.....(To be appointed)
Treasurer.....Miss Helen E. Steele, '12

Recorder Board—Chairman, Miss Louise Reinecke, '17; Mrs. Maurice G. Gay, '02; Miss Leora M. Lewis, '16.

The secretary was instructed to cast the ballot electing these officers for the coming year.

Moved, that the president appoint a corresponding secretary for this year only. Carried.

Moved, that Miss Reinecke be empowered to appoint the fourth member of the Recorder Board. Carried.

Mrs. Phillips gave $25 for the work of the jubilee committee and Mrs. Clark gave $25 to help buy lamps for the newly furnished drawing rooms.

On motion, the meeting adjourned.

SARA CARPENTER, '17, Secretary.

THE FALL MEETING

The regular fall meeting of the Alumnae Association of the Pennsylvania College for Women was held on November 30, 1918, instead of October, the postponement being due to the influenza epidemic and the consequent prohibition of public meetings. It was held in the drawing rooms of the college. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Pardee, and the minutes of the June meeting were read and approved.

The treasurer, Miss Steele, gave her report, which was accepted with thanks.

Announcement was made of the appointment of Miss Estelle Sheppard as corresponding secretary, this appointment not having been made at the June meeting.

Then the question of withdrawal from the State Federation of Women's Clubs was discussed. Miss Kleister was appointed by the chair to investigate what other Alumnae Associations were doing in regard to the matter.

The lecture committee reported $6.50 in the treasury. Miss Sadler, treasurer of the committee, said that the financial response to that fund had not been as prompt as usual. In answer to discussion as to continuance of this fund, a motion was carried that it be continued. The wish was expressed that Miss Sadler receive an assistant, to be appointed by the chair.

Miss Beard, chairman of the jubilee committee, reported that their plans were not matured. On account of her frequent absence from the city, Miss Beard requested that another chairman be appointed for this committee.

A motion was carried that the president appoint a general committee for the jubilee, the present committee to stand as a sub-committee. Mrs. Spenser was appointed head of the general committee, Mrs. McLean of the sub-committee, whose work was to be especially to solicit new college members.

One phase of the associate membership was discussed—the interpretation of the phrase, "one year of regular college work," had given rise to various opinions. A motion was carried that the chair appoint a committee to decide that question.

Miss Root, the dean, who was present, gave some interesting items about the college work. In the United War Work Campaign the college had subscribed $2,202; a Christmas pageant was to be given by the students for the benefit of the Armenians; the tentative program of the jubilee celebration was presented, which was most comprehensive.

Mrs. Miller requested that a committee of ways and means be appointed to co-operate with college committee. Motion was carried.

Suggestions were made as to various ways of raising money for the Alumnae's share of the jubilee expenses.

The meeting adjourned by motion.

MABEL C. BAIRD, Resident Secretary.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

REPORT OF THE HELEN E. PELLETREAU SCHOLARSHIP COMMITTEE

The Scholarship Committee has a very gratifying report to make to the Alumnae Association this June. It gives us great pleasure to tell of the good work accomplished—and the fine records made by our scholarship girls during the last year at the P. C. W. We are so much richer now than in past years that with an income from our ten thousand dollar scholarship fund, we were able to assist five students in 1918-1919. I believe that this is the largest number of students we have ever helped in one year. Our Dean, Miss Root, tells us that every one of these girls has made exceptionally high marks in all of their studies, making A+ and A, B+ and B in almost every branch of their work. Miss Root says that "our girls" are among the brightest and finest all-around students in the college, that we can well be proud of them and their work. Two of our scholarship girls were Seniors last year and are graduating this June, they are coming into our Alumnae Association and I am sure we will welcome them most warmly and cordially, for they will bring to us a new spark of enthusiasm and the "last word" in college life. Three of the scholarship students who were Sophomores last year, we will have with us again next year, and two new students are added to our list, so we will still continue to assist five students during the coming year.

It is pleasant to keep in touch with "our girls" after they have graduated and left their college home, and to follow them in their work in other lands and scenes. You will all remember, I am sure, our interesting little Hindu girl, Miss Kamela Cornelius, who was one of our scholarship graduates last June, who captivated us with her sweet, gentle manner, soft dark eyes and attractive looks. Miss Root tells us that she has returned to India, her native land, where she is teaching in Madras College for Women. She is happy in her work and she is giving to her less fortunate sisters the benefit of her Christian college training and education. The good influence that she has carried with her from her beloved Alma Mater, the Penna. College for Women, is being received and felt among all with whom she is associated in far away India.

REBECCA F. RENSHAW,
Chairman of Committee.

THE CORA HELEN COOLIDGE CLUB

On May 18, 1919, a group of professional social workers who are graduates of the Social Service Department met at the college to form a union. It was decided at this meeting that all graduates of the department, whether professional social workers or not, should be eligible to membership in the club which was formed and that the privilege be extended to advanced students of Social Service in the college who are completing the requirements for the certificate. At a subsequent meeting it was voted that professional social workers who have been full-time students in the department for one year be asked to join the club.

During 1918-19, bi-monthly meetings have been held at the college. Miss Rosalie Supplee has been president, Miss Grace Woodrow secretary.

In no respect has the club been more felicitous than in its name. At the first meeting the name of Miss Coolidge was appropriated, and with her consent the new organization became the Cora Helen Coolidge Social Service Club. The idea that the College could teach social service first existed in the mind of Miss Coolidge. It was because of her sympathy and thoughtful planning that this innovation has become an integral part of a college which is made up of standardized departments. Each member of the club recognizes that the college training which prepared her for her chosen work was made possible by Miss Coolidge, and the name is an expression of allegiance.

Clubs, like people, have personality, and there is not space even for a list of the good qualities of this club. But I must say one or two things—Our coming together has brought out information as to the prominent positions held successfully by our Social Service girls, which has surprised us. To the students who will graduate in Social Service in 1919, the Cora Helen Coolidge Club has been a necessary link in fellowship with earlier graduates and with the world of social workers outside the college. After a year of association with this club it would be difficult for me to look forward to the training of future students without it. That the club has grown into vigorous life in one year is due largely to Miss Supplee. She has been untiring in her interest, and she has secured speakers who have brought to us inspiration and fresh knowledge. Next year, I trust, some one from our membership may express through the Recorder what the two-year-old club will mean to her. We hope for much from this intimate group of workers, who in their daily occupation practice the meaning of the word "Co-operation."

The College, May 10, 1919.

LUELLA P. MELOY.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

PHI PI

The Phi Pi has been principally busy with the study of a Roman banquet as told by Petronius in "Trimalchio's Dinner." From this we got the material for use in working out our own banquet, a real one, at which the new members were guests. This was the real event of the year and the entertainment for the guests at the dinner was also used in the Open Meeting, where we presented "The Pot of Gold," by Plautus, very successfully.

MARJORIE ERRETT,
President 1918-1919.

THE CHEMISTRY CLUB

The Chemistry Club was organized at P. C. W. during the autumn of 1917. The purpose of the Club is to afford an opportunity for advanced students of Chemistry to become acquainted with and to discuss subjects of current interest in the world of science.

Although this field always offers varied and engrossing material, yet the many new inventions which the war has brought about have made our monthly meetings of special and ever-increasing interest.

JUNIOR CLASS ACTIVITIES

The Junior Class this year has been actively interested in all events around the college. All its members have taken part in the athletics as well as in the social side of college life. Everyone joined heartily in the basketball games, hockey games and tennis matches. In January the Class entertained the students by giving a "Baby Party"—thereby asking everyone to forget their present age and look back a few years. A spread for the Freshmen was held in the gym one night as a "get-together" meeting. The Junior-Senior dance, held in May, marks the close of the year. Being the class to graduate in 1920, and therefore the class to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the college, the Juniors are looking forward to a year full of activities under the leadership of their new President, Wil-lard Crane.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

DRAMATIC CLUB

By a revision of the constitution, the Dramatic Club was opened to the whole college. This change has increased the interest in the activities of the Club as well as its membership.

Two plays have been presented during the year. The first, a Christmas masque, "The Evergreen Tree," by Percy Mackaye, with music by Arthur Farwell, was given at Christmas time and took the place of the customary children's play. A play by Moliere, "The Affected Young Ladies," was presented April 11, for the benefit of the Year Book. Both plays showed that the Club is keeping up its high standard of work.

An interesting meeting was held in March. Mr. Charles Bregg, dramatic critic, spoke on the "Modern Drama and Dramatists." The talk was most interesting and profitable.

CERCLE FRANCAIS

This year saw the organization of a Cercle Francais at the college. For several years this organization has been planned, but until this year no definite step has been taken. The purpose of the Club is to further interest in the customs and literature of the French people, and to be of value in French conversation.

The charter members were ably assisted and encouraged by Miss Ely, Miss Merritt and Miss Starr.

Early in the year, a short comedy, "Les Deux Sourds," was presented by the class in French, 21-22, and a second comedy, "La Claire Voyante," was given by French, 17-18, at the last meeting. One of the interesting meetings was that at which M. Louis de Tremandan spoke to the Club about his experiences at the front.

THE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

The Athletic Association of the Pennsylvania College for Women has just passed through an eventful year, the success of which was due to the splendid college and class spirit manifested. In spite of our enemies the "flu," the weather and laboratory, we succeeded in having an enthusiastic hockey season, with the Seniors as champions. The school was entertained at a tea given by the Association, and in addition to the tea there was a rousing song practice in preparation for the fiftieth anniversary celebration.

Spirit and enthusiasm reached a climax during the basketball season. Thanks to the loyal support of the school, the varsity team beat Beaver College unmercifully, surprised the team of coaches from the city by a score much in our favor, and although the team did not measure up to its standard at Pitt, nevertheless, on our own floor we caused many anxious moments for the Pitt players who won by one point. With four well-matched class teams we had the most exciting class games. It plainly appeared that the gymnasium was unable to hold the large crowds that attended these games.

This year the tennis courts have been more in demand than ever before, due to the large enlistment in the tournament. P. C. W. is not lacking in baseball fans, else we would not have had the interest which was manifested in the baseball games. The athletic year closed with a field meet at which high jumping, broad jumping, three-legged races and ball throwing were the principal events.

Having accomplished so much under the present circumstances, we expect our hopes to be realized when we have a new gym.

THE GLEE CLUB

The Glee Club this year feels itself no infant to the usual P. C. W. Glee Clubs, since it has a membership of thirty-five.

It has given all the regular annual concerts, i. e.: The joint concert with the Carnegie Institute of Technology, the numbers at the commencement concert and the commencement service. In place of the regular so-called "Home Concert," the Glee Club helped furnish the music for the Christmas masque, Percy Mackaye's "Evergreen Tree," which was presented by the Dramatic Club.

In addition to these appearances the Club sang at the evening services of the Shadyside Presbyterian and Sixth Presbyterian Churches. At present we are arranging a suitable date on which to give, along with our Mandolin Club, a concert at Parkview.

In view of the fact that our long, enforced vacation last fall has made the work of the entire school seem rather rushed and broken up, we feel that the Glee Club has had a very successful and profitable, as well as a pleasant year. This we owe to the perseverance and kindness of our directors, Mr. Walter Wild and Miss Emma Selmeier.

THE SOROSIS

Although it has had to labor under the most unfavorable financial conditions, due to the increased cost of printing and the discontinuing of advertisements by many business houses during war time, the Sorosis has lived through another year and has proved itself a very valuable element in college life.

Because of the financial situation, it was decided to have four issues of the magazine instead of eight, during 1918-1919, and in view of the prolonged interruption at the time of the influenza epidemic, more than four numbers would have been impossible.

But while the business management has had a difficult time, the staff has been greatly encouraged because of the interest shown by the students, both as contributors and subscribers. Acting upon student suggestions, several important changes have been made in the plan of the book. Reports of lectures, club notes and class jokes have been eliminated and the magazine divided into several departments, i.e.: Literary, including stories, poems and sketches; Public Opinion, concerning college; Athletics, Exchanges, Alumnae and Editorial. Girls from each class are numbered among contributors to these departments, and at no time has there been a lack of material. Special mention for contributions and helpful aid should be given Louise Reinicke, '17; Margaret W. Witherspoon, '19; Mary L. Stevenson, '20—(Editor-in-Chief for 1919-1920); Betty Shipley, '20; Elizabeth W. Fleming, '20; Katharine McFarland, '20; Eleanor Bardsley, '20; Miriam Crouse, '21, (Literary Editor for 1919-1920); Frances Fredericks, '21; Elizabeth Sprowl, '21, and Lillian Edsall, '22.

The circulation for the past year included every student in the college, a majority of the faculty and a number of the alumnae. Among the magazines listed with the Exchange Department are the Vassar Miscellany Monthly, Mount Holyoke Monthly, Smith College Monthly, Barnard Bear, (Columbia), The Phraetra, (Wilson College), Oberlin College Monthly, Goucher Kalends, Cornell Era, and The Tartan, (Carnegie Tech.)

INTERNATIONAL POLITY CLUB

The International Polity Club was organized early in 1919 by the students for the purpose of studying problems of peace and international reconstruction. The Club is one of many such organizations in the United States which the American Council of International Conciliation assists by suggesting lines of study and supplying timely literature.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

About eighty students enrolled for membership and held their first regular meetings in February. There are two meetings each month. At the first meeting a programme is presented by the members. The second is an open meeting with a lecture by an outside speaker on the chosen subject for that month. This plan has been very successfully followed and six interesting meetings have been held.

The subject for the first meeting was the League of Nations, which was discussed by the International Law Class. After the journal programme had been presented, the meeting was opened to general discussion by all the members. The open meeting two days later was a splendid lecture on the League of Nations by Dr. W. F. Pierce of Kenyon College.

For the second month the question for discussion was the probable future and the rights to independence of the small subject States of Europe. Various members presented the case of Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Jugo-Slavia, Lithuania, Finland, the Baltic Provinces and the Ukraine. At the open meeting, Mr. E. D. Taber gave a delightful lecture on "The Czecho-Slovak Nation."

In the third month the subject was "National Life of the Slavs of the War Zone." Serbia and Poland were especially emphasized. At the open meeting, Mr. C. W. Sypniewski reviewed the ideals of the Polish State as revealed by its history.

With all the problems of interest and importance coming before the public in these days of great change, the approaching year will no doubt open a field of still greater usefulness and activity for the Polity Club.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

The Young Women's Christian Association had a membership of one hundred this year, with an average attendance of eighty. The meetings were varied by talks from faculty members and outside speakers. We were fortunate in having two student secretaries, Miss Katherine Richards and Miss Helen Thoburn, visit at college for several days; this stay proved inspiring as well as helpful.

At the first of the year the Association made itself known to the Freshmen by sending each girl a rose with a card of greeting. The year was opened with the annual "Get-Acquainted" party.

In November the Association had charge of the P. C. W. campaign for the United War Workers Campaign. Our quota was set at $1,750. P. C. W. not only went "over the top" the second day, but gave a total subscription of $2,202.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

In the spring an effort was made to interest students in voluntary study classes. As a result six classes were formed and were led by students under faculty supervision. Frank M. Sheldon's book, "Christianity, Democracy and Internationalism," was used as a text book, and very lively discussions on present-day problems, questions of religion, etc., have resulted from its study.

Two new schemes for financing the Association were inaugurated this year. A direct appeal was made to the Association members; this netted over $150, while a joint rummage sale with the "Pennsylvanian" Board brought in $75 more. Of this amount $35 will be given to Madras College, India, and $90 for our Eagles Mere Fund means that we should send a large delegation that will bring back new ideas and great enthusiasm for the furtherance of Association work next year.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT BOARD

The work of the Student Government Board started earlier than usual this year for P. C. W. had charge of the Student Government at the Eagles Mere Conference last June.

During the latter part of 1918, a faculty-student council was organized at the college. In this council, which is composed of Dr. Acheson, Dean Root, Miss Green, Miss Ely, Miss Starr, and the members of the Student Government Board, are discussed any affairs of interest or importance to both faculty and students. Very interesting monthly meetings have been held throughout the year.

That wretched little "flu" germ banished the usual Hallowe'en party. The students all united in making up for that loss by having an especially good time at the mid-year dance.

Two Liberty Loan drives under the chairmanship of Miss Brownlee were successfully launched in the past year. The results were heavy ones in both cases, for P. C. W. went over the top with her accustomed vigor.

During April, the college became a charter member of the Inter-collegiate Vocational Guidance Association. We hope this means another step in spreading the fame of the "College on the Hill" to all surrounding and far-distant hills.

Aside from financial difficulties, due to a recent bank failure, the year has been a pleasant one. Since its close is very near, we have elected next year's Board. The result of the election, which makes Miss Julia Aspinwall the executive, is very satisfactory.

THE MANDOLIN CLUB

When school opened in the fall the Mandolin Club was quite at a loss how to begin the year's work. This was due to the fact that the majority of its members had graduated and that Miss Alice Butterfield, who had been its very efficient director for several years did not return to P. C. W.

The Club was fortunate, however, in securing Mr. Liefeld and Miss Frances Meritt for its instructors. Under this excellent supervision the Club was built up wonderfully. The members now number seventeen, which includes three guitars and one banjo.

During the year, the Club answered many calls for music in different parts of the city. In April a concert was given for the benefit of the Year Book, and in May the joint concert between the musical clubs of P. C. W. and Tech was given.

So, in spite of the difficulties with which the year was begun, the members all feel that it has been a very happy and successful one.

OMEGA

Omega was somewhat handicapped in having a late start this year, due to our prolonged vacation, and it has been impossible to have the usual number of meetings. Nevertheless, those which have been held were both interesting and profitable. American humorists were chosen for study—Irving, Mark Twain, Bret Harte, George W. Cable, Riley and Field. The first meeting was conducted by our new honorary member, Dr. J. Elmer Bailey. We were delightfully entertained in the spring by Mr. and Mrs. Putnam at their home on Negley Avenue.

Omega, like everything else at P. C. W., is looking forward to the anniversary next year and hopes that all the old Omega members will be back for a great reunion.

THE RUMMAGE SALE

If you have never experienced the joys of a Rummage Sale you must surely apply as a saleslady at the next P. C. W. affair. The

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Ways and Means Committee for the Jubilee Celebration, feeling the need of a little ready money, undertook the Herculean task of staging a Rummage Sale. Old clothing, furniture, bric-a-brac, etc., were collected from over-crowded attics and these relics were offered for sale at very nominal prices. A store room was secured in East Liberty and for two days and a half, April 3, 4 and 5 the battle waged.

The place was besieged by ardent shoppers and it was necessary to call in the law in the form of two policemen to maintain peace and order. The bargaining was sharp but, nevertheless, our stock in trade, as well as the salesladies were completely exhausted by noon Saturday. The committee took heart, however, when they discovered that they had cleared the sum of $888.94.

The Committee is planning another sale for the Fall, so kindly do not wear out all of your old clothes but save a few for "The Cause," and if you wish to have the time of your life apply as a saleslady—no experience required but we would prefer that you have a speaking knowledge of Italian.

THE DANCE

Those of the Alumnae who still consider themselves kittenish enough to trip the light fantastic, graced the chapel floor once more at the dance given by the Ways and Means Committee. About seventy-five couples were present and the returns, although not large, were quite satisfactory. Ninety-six dollars and ten cents was cleared, which added materially to the Jubilee Fund.

DECADE III

Decade III has been very busy this year. We have had monthly meetings with an average attendance of eighteen. In May we had our open meeting for seniors with an attendance of thirty-five. We had a cake sale from which we realized $34.75, and from this amount we are giving $25.00 to the Alumnae Association. This is a real live organization and we are hoping for larger attendances next year. Come and get acquainted with some of the Alumnae and enjoy these meetings. If you wish notices of the meetings kindly inform Margaret Lee, '16, and she will be glad to send you a notice each month. Our president for next year is Louise Reinecke, '17.

ALMA MATER

ALUMNAE RECORDER

JUNE—1920

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Class of 1920, in behalf of our Alumnae Association, I extend to you a most cordial welcome. You join our ranks on a most auspicious occasion. You will always be called the "Jubilee Class," and we shall expect you to live up to your reputation, and bring to our Association golden thoughts, golden deeds and surely there never was a more golden opportunity for such service. As each new class enters our Association, we have high hopes that among their number are those who will take their place among the exceptionally capable and accomplished women who have made the name and fame of our College.

May it be so with the Class of 1920.

The eventful day toward which we have looked and for which we have planned for so long, has at last arrived, and as we gather here at the opening of our great Jubilee celebration, happy anticipation of what is before us, mingled with memories of the past crowd upon us so that we are almost bewildered.

This is naturally a time for retrospect, but before we indulge in reminiscences or allow our minds to wander in the dear old paths of girlhood days, let us see what are the present conditions which confront us.

Having reached the dignified age of fifty years, let us look about and take an inventory, and see what has been acquired in this half century.

What have we to show for all the money expended; the hard work of our eight honored Presidents and many faithful teachers; the thought and time bestowed by many trustees (one hundred, in all, having served in that capacity); and the earnest efforts of the loyal Alumnae?

First of all, our College is thoroughly established. We have made a name for ourselves, a name that stands for a first class woman's college, the only one in Western Pennsylvania.

We have kept pace with the progress of modern education and step by step we have advanced until now we stand abreast of the best in the land, even if our fame is not so great or our equipment so fine as some of the others.

We have graduated five hundred young women, and at present we have an Association of over four hundred Alumnae, whose love and loyalty are unquestioned and who are women of whom any Alma Mater might be proud. Our members fill positions of honor in the business and professional world, are recognized leaders in club and social circles and most prominent in church and benevolent work wherever their lot is cast. Musicians, artists and writers are found in our ranks, and our students have come to us not only from all over our own country, but even one from far away India.

When our nation was called to enter the lists, and take our place with those who fought tyranny, oppression and brutality across the water, graduates of P. C. W. were among the first to volunteer to go abroad and stand by their brothers ministering to their wants, or to labor at home, together with those who were then students in the College, with self-sacrificing and untiring zeal.

Another splendid work of our Association has been to establish and carry on the Helen Pelletreau Scholarship fund, by which already thirty-one girls have been enabled to receive a college education who, otherwise, could never have done so. Many of these received assistance throughout the four years of their course.

Next we must take an inventory of our physical equipment and we are ashamed to acknowledge how meager and inadequate it is. We wish, on this anniversary occasion, that we might proudly boast of beautiful and extensive buildings, a spacious campus, and all the complete equipment so necessary for a thoroughly modern college; but, alas, while these things do exist, they exist at present only in our imaginations and in the architect's drawings. However, this is not all "building castles in the air," but very real and tangible planning for the magnificent goal which we are approaching, and to reach which we must bend every effort. The most necessary thing after our generous friends provide us with an ideal location and buildings is, of course, an adequate endowment and the raising of $1,000,000 for this purpose is the task upon which the members of our Association have pledged ourselves to enter. It looks like a tremendous undertaking but it is not impossible, and we should feel proud that we are considered worthy of this great responsibility by our honored trustees, and that they have such confidence in us. Giving seems to be on a different plane than it used to be. Such vast fortunes have been accumulated and such tremendous sums have been contributed for various causes in recent years, that people are no longer staggered by large undertakings. Let us all put our whole hearts into this cause, and bend all our energies to accomplish it; and let us not be easily discouraged or timorous because we know we have a most worthy cause, and we are bound to succeed, and some day every one who does not do her part, will feel like hanging her head in shame. One point is certain to appeal to the best citizens of our community—this College stands for nothing but the highest on the great moral issues of the day. A noted speaker the other day thundered out to an audience of ministers in our city the terrible warning that Bolshevism is not only encouraged but actually taught in some of the universities of our country. We know that in teaching sociology no professor of Pennsylvania will sow the seeds of anarchy or our teachers of psychology lead our daughters into the vagaries of spiritism, that deadly evil teaching that is so rampant everywhere. The Word of God was the corner stone upon which this College was founded fifty years ago, and it has never swerved from those ideals, and stands as staunch as ever, as we all realize who know our President, Dr. Acheson.

So much for the present and future, let us now turn our thoughts backward. Today is a time when each one of us turns over the pages of memory and pictures of long ago come vividly to mind and we see the faces of dear companions and beloved teachers. Many of them have gone from earth, some in girlhood and some in ripe old age, and our hearts grow very tender as we ponder on these old scenes. How we admired some of those teachers, and how great was their influence in our culture, and in forming our characters! We love to recall their little peculiarities which only endear them the more to us now. "Memory is the only Paradise out of which we can never be driven" and we revel today in its delights. How care-free and happy were those girlhood days, and we can almost hear the merry laughter and foolish chatter, and we delight to think of the many pranks and schemes and frolics in which we indulged. It is a kind Providence that veils the future from our eyes, so that no knowledge of cares or sorrows to come could mar those light-hearted hours. In my own class there were just three of us, and we presumptuously chose for our class motto, the Latin one, "Omne trinum perfectum." We were all brimful of anticipation of life's joys, and yet in a short time one was buried in her bridal robes with her infant in her arms, and the other after a few happy years of married life was called home—and I alone am left.

But we must not let our hearts be clouded over by such thoughts for this must be a very happy day. There are no friends like the friends of school days, and some of us were very close to each other—as Shakespeare puts it—

"We still have slept together,

Rose at an instant, learned, played, ate together.

And wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans

Still we went coupled and inseparable."

It is hard for some of us to realize that it is so many years since we stood in the place the Class of 1920 stands today, for "Winged time glides on insensibly, and deceives us, so there is nothing more fleeting than years." This ought to draw us all more closely together, and we should all be so youthful in our feelings, today, that the youngest one here will feel perfectly at home with the oldest. Let each one drop all formality, fear, and prejudice, and let us make this one of the red letter days of our lives, and a day long cherished in the annals of our College.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

LETTER FROM DR. ACHESON

May 8th, 1920.

The Alumnae Association of Pennsylvania College for Women:

The year just closing has been in many respects the most successful ever enjoyed by the College, and the outlook for the future is most hopeful. A fine spirit of loyalty exists among the faculty and students and the work of the institution, from an academic standpoint, has been excellent.

The Freshman Class numbers sixty-one, the largest in the history of the college; while the total enrollment of students during the year approximates two hundred. The resident students have more than taxed the capacity of Berry and Woodland Halls, making it necessary to secure rooms for various members of the faculty in private homes on Murrayhill Avenue. At this date, entrance for the session of 1920-1921 exceeds by two-thirds what it was at this time last year. No additional quarters in the neighborhood, except at exorbitant rentals, seem available and we shall, without doubt, be compelled to reject all late applications for residence. The situation thus developed is a forceful argument in support of our plans for the enlargement.

Primary interest, at this time, centers, of course, in the semi-centennial programme to be celebrated at the Commencement season in June. This occasion, we hope, will prove worthy of our history and prophetic of our future. Too great praise cannot be given to Alumnae, Faculty and students, who are co-operating so zealously to make the Jubilee a great success.

Of most vital interest to the Alumnae is the inauguration of the Jubilee campaign for approximately $3,000,000, which is already under way in the quiet solicitation of those from whom large subscriptions may be expected. It is our hope that by Commencement substantial progress on this fund can be reported. The service of the Alumnae in the solicitation of 1,000 subscriptions of $1,000 each for the Endowment was pledged at a special meeting of the Alumnae held some few weeks ago. Mrs. William Watson Smith has consented to take the chairmanship of a committee which will have this special feature of the campaign in charge. Full instructions will be issued by this Committee to the Alumnae with reference to their participation in the Jubilee Fund programme.

The feeling of good will toward Pennsylvania College for Women throughout the community has never been more marked than at the present time. This, combined with the growing recognition of the important place that woman's education must hold in the new day, are assets that bespeak success in our efforts for a larger and better equipped institution.

The spirit of confidence on the part of the Board of Trustees and the enthusiasm and loyalty of the Alumnae and friends of the college are strong factors in assuring the ultimate success of the Jubilee Fund. Let there be, therefore, unity of spirit, unity of purpose and complete co-operation in the execution of all plans. A program of this sort will insure complete victory.

Very truly yours,

JOHN C. ACHESON.

ALUMNÆ RECORDER

DEAN ROOT'S MESSAGE

In my greetings to the Alumnæ this year, I wish that I could express, even in part, my appreciation of the splendid work which you have done to make this Anniversary a success. Surely no college was ever more blessed in its alumnæ than is Pennsylvania College for Women. One of the pleasantest features of the preparation for this celebration has been the opportunity it afforded to come more closely in touch with many of the Alumnæ; and I hope that you have come to know more of the present generation of College students, to inspire them with your loyalty and your hopes for the College in the future, and in turn to be reinspired by them.

This closer union between Alumnæ and under-graduates is much to be desired, for there is nothing that so promotes the finest college spirit among the students as the realization that behind them stands a strong alumnæ association eagerly watching their progress, ready to lend a helping hand, and always demanding the best from the students of today. On the other hand, there is nothing that so stimulates the interest of the alumnæ association as the knowledge of what is going on in the College today; and so for all of us it is well at this commencement time to look back over the year and see what we have gained—whether we are approaching the realization of our ideals, for it is easy to become so engrossed in the details of living from day to day that we lose sight of the goal.

The emphasis this year has undoubtedly been laid upon the development of the sense of individual responsibility among the students, and the spirit of co-operation. With this in view, upon the request of the students themselves, and after careful consideration and deliberation on the part of both faculty and students, the complete honor system was adopted, both in the matter of the social life of the College, the academic work, and the house government. The manner in which the students responded has been most gratifying. We all realize our imperfections, but we can also see our progress, and see that much has been accomplished in this half year of experiment. At the conference of the Deans of Women in Cleveland, the most helpful paper was given by Miss Georgiana White, the Dean of Women at Cornell University, who brought out the fact that as deans we were too prone to care for a smoothly running institution than for the development of the students—not that the two are incompatible, but that if at times one must be sacrificed let it be the machine, not the student; for through the self-government association the student has the opportunity for receiving that training which will make her a valuable citizen when she leaves college, capable of doing her share in a truly democratic government.

One of the most delightful as well as helpful events of the year was the series of talks and personal conferences given by Miss Helen Bennett, Director of the Chicago Collegiate Bureau of Occupations, on Vocational Opportunities for Women. This was financed in part by the Alumnae Association, and we are most grateful for your assistance.

But our thoughts have not been entirely engrossed with ourselves and our own development. The students, as usual, have responded valiantly to any call for service. Our largest contribution this year was for the Serbian Relief, a sum amounting to about $1,200. This was made up entirely from voluntary offerings, without any personal solicitation.

From this brief glimpse of our college life, I hope that you may realize that we have definite aims and ideals before us, toward which we are advancing each year that your interest may be aroused so that you shall wish to follow our progress still more closely the coming year.

FLORENCE K. ROOT.

REPORT OF THE ALUMNAE GENERAL JUBILEE COMMITTEE

The committee of three—Mrs. W. S. Miller, Mrs. John M. Phillips and the chairman held several meetings at the college during the Autumn and early winter with the Faculty Committee discussing plans and endeavoring to get the various sub-committees into working order.

The Third Decade Club, with Miss Florence Wilson as chairman, agreed to serve the luncheons on the College grounds June 9th and 10th; and the Ways and Means Committee cheerfully accepted the proposition that they and the General Committee should get together and undertake the sale of the Pageant seats. Mrs. John W. Lloyd was appointed chairman of the Banquet Committee; Mrs. John O'Neil, of the Historical Committee; and Miss Helen Blair, chairman of the Committee on Associate Membership, was asked to combine with that work the locating of former students.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Mrs. George Wilmer Martin and Miss Sara Carpenter were added to the General Committee—and Mrs. Edna McKee Houston was made chairman of the Ticket Distributing Committee.

Miss Marks, chairman of the Faculty Publicity Committee had prepared for us a detailed and complete list of women's clubs in and about Pittsburgh, and the work of arranging for presenting to them the Jubilee plans was cheerfully undertaken by Alumnæ, a few of whom joined the members of the Faculty, who formed the corps of speakers, who to date, May 8th, have visited more than fifty clubs.

The towns within reasonable distance of Pittsburgh were divided into about twenty groups with an alumna as chairman and she was furnished with a list of all former and present P. C. W. students to help her in the sale of tickets. Posters were sent to these chairmen for distribution in the towns within her section. This was all part of an organized publicity campaign inaugurated during the severest part of the winter which began with a charming tea given by Mrs. Miller in honor of the Faculty, followed by a series of class teas at the President's house at which Mrs. Acheson and Dean Root were hostesses. Mrs. Fanny Richardson Lupton was guest of honor at the first of these and she added to the enjoyment of those present by giving several recitations with all her old-time skill. She saw all the older and newer college buildings and returned to her Cleveland home "in love" with P. C. W.

Mrs. Phillips entertained all the Faculty and Alumnæ chairmen at a luncheon at the Twentieth Century Club. Three baskets of exquisite white roses and purple iris decorated the long table at which two dozen guests were gathered. On the white place cards with the little knot of purple ribbon were printed the following original verses:

Pennsylvania College has a party very soon,

Proudly we'll rejoice with her the second week in June.
Fifty years of service in the cause of womanhood,

Grounding for our nation ideals pure and good.

Wise men of the long ago had a vision clear,

As they sowed the tiny seed that first eventful year,
Of a mighty Christian College on the crest of Woodland hill, Teaching through the ages, till God says to all, "be still."

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Bounteous are the tributes our loving hands will bring,
Grateful hearts and glad some voices will thy praises sing—
'Tis the crowning day of glory, see in the dawning light,
There floats on high thy banners, the purple and the white.

A letter prepared by the Faculty Publicity Committee was sent broadcast throughout the city and nearby towns. Alumnae, Faculty and students worked on the lists and the folding, addressing, etc.

The latest undertaking which has served to awaken considerable interest was getting a list of patronesses without obligations from among former students who were not eligible to associate membership.

Every Monday during the past three months has found at least two members of this committee, and frequently all of them, at the college in three hour conferences with various Faculty Committees earnestly striving to plan wisely and for the best good of all concerned. Everything has been submitted to us for final decision, and on our shoulders must rest the responsibility for what has been done, even to deciding that the Jubilee celebration should go on and not be deferred or given up because of doubts, disappointments, discouragements, and delays which arose to challenge us. It might be well to add that all was to be done with "due regard to all possible economy," and that we have long since relegated that last word to the same place as the proverbial one "fail!"

It would take too long to more than mention the groups of Alumnae who gave freely of their time to work on Pageant costumes both at the college and at a half dozen all-day sewings at Shadyside Presbyterian Church; but "honorable mention" must be made of the help given by the women of that and of the Eighth Street Reformed Presbyterian Church, and by other friends including Mrs. Johnson, the mother of Mrs. McGinnity, and by Eleanor Bard Fulton and Marie Chalfant, two High School girls who devoted several of their vacation hours to this work.

Our committee desires to record the loyalty, unfailing interest, and helpfulness of the Faculty. Their attention to detail, foresight, and unselfish devotion were a constant source of inspiration. We also wish to record our sense of appreciation in having been selected as your committee for this wonderful occasion, and in the confidence reposed in us, and for your many helpful suggestions. Not a whisper of unkind criticism has reached our ears and in consequence we have felt that behind us stood the devoted Alumnae in a solid phalanx. Their interest and faithfulness are typified in the honored member of our first class, Mrs. Chislett who was always at her post at the sewing machine, and in the intervals at the telephone securing associate members and selling tickets. Their versality is exemplified in Mrs. Coyle who could with equal ease bake delicious cake for the delectation of the weary sewers, have more than five thousand tickets of eight different colors printed, and secure space at Joseph Horne Company's fine store for the selling of the same. "I will do my best" came to be a commonplace remark though frequently preceded by "I have never done it before;" and "Let me know if I can be of further service" brought cheer on many occasions. Only one fault have we found with our members, and that was that when we had expected to find them in their homes we made the unpleasant discovery that they were in some other place—usually teaching—when we had a special bit of service to ask of them; and many a time did we wish that "P. C. W. had not turned out so many talented and efficient girls!"

Respectfully submitted,

IN TOKEN OF FAITHFUL SERVICE

MARY W. BROWNSON. Miss Brownson began her work in Pennsylvania College for Women in the department of Mathematics, which position she filled for two years. In 1898 she reorganized and took charge of the Bible work in the college and the preparatory school. In 1903 she became Professor of History and Head of the Bible Department of the College. All who have had the privilege of having Miss Brownson open up to them the hidden treasures of historical knowledge will regret to know that Miss Brownson's work at the College will close with this school year. Miss Brownson is the author of a number of works, the last being the historical and poetical part of the Pageant, "Victory Through Conflict."

JANE B. CLARK. Miss Clark was the efficient head of the Department of Mathematics and Astronomy from 1889 to 1906. She was a student and friend of the late Dr. Brashear and her Astronomy classes profited much from this fact. Those who were contemporary with Miss Clark as students and instructors remember her as a leader in the social and academic life of the College. Since 1906, she has kept in touch with the College, especially as a member of the Alumnæ Association and of the Helen E. Pelletreau Scholarship Committee.

ISABEL BEVIER came to the Pennsylvania College for Women as head of the Chemistry Department in 1888, and remained until June, 1897. Miss Bevier made her influence felt for good in many ways in the college, taking a special interest in the work of the Young Women's Christian Association. Since leaving Pittsburgh she has been engaged in scientific work in Boston, New York, and Washington. She is now Professor of Household Science and Director of the Courses in Household Science in the University of Illinois.

ALICE T. SKILTON. As Professor of German from 1897 to 1912, Miss Skilton was indefatigable in instilling the German language and literature in the minds of her students. Her students will all recall the successful presentation of German plays under her direction. While in Pittsburgh Miss Skilton was an active worker in the Association of Collegiate Alumnæ and in the College Club, and since leaving the college she has taken an active part in war, club and church work in Boston. We are glad that she is to return to help us celebrate our Anniversary.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

GEORGE W. PUTNAM. Mr. Putnam was Professor of English language and Literature from 1906 to 1918. He did much for the Omega Society, which was organized in 1905 and which has become one of the most popular organizations in the college. Mr. Putnam left the college to enter the business world. Mr. Putnam keeps in close touch with his former students, and he and Mrs. Putnam always make their friends welcome at their home in the William Pitt Apartments, corner of Elmer and Negley Avenues.

MARY JANE PIKE was Professor of Latin and Greek in the College from 1880 to 1898. She was Professor Emeritus until her death in 1914. Everyone called her "der Miss Pike." She was loyal to the college, a good woman, a true teacher.

MARY D. LINDSAY taught in the English department of the college from 1910 to 1918. She left the college in the middle of the year to take an appointment in the Schenley High School, where she is now teaching.

WILLIAM H. MARTIN. Mr. Martin, who was head of the Mathematics Department from 1908 to 1913, is now the Hon. Wm. H. Martin, member of the State Legislature of Pennsylvania. His duties in this regard do not interfere with his teaching in the Schenley High School, where he has been since leaving the college.

MME. JOSEPHINE PARMELAND DE VALLAY taught French at the College from 1899 to 1912. It was with great sorrow that her former associates and students learned of her death in Oakland, California, July 7, 1919.

ALICE BUTTERFIELD. Miss Butterfield was professor of Chemistry from 1910 to 1918. Through her musical ability she added greatly to the social life of the college, and was for several years the indefatigable leader of the Mandolin Club. We understand she is now teaching in Miss Spence's school in New York City.

VIOLET LOUISE HOLCOMB. Miss Holcomb was connected with the college from 1912 to 1919 as the Head of the Physics Department. She endeared herself to her students through her never-failing interest in them. During the past year she has been engaged in welfare work in New Haven, Connecticut, and has been living at 568 Chapel Street.

DR. SAMUEL J. FISHER. Dr. Fisher's connection with the college has covered different periods. From 1878 to 1900 he was Professor of Political Science and Philosophy; in 1914-15

Professor of Biblical Literature, and during the year 1915-16 was Professor of Logic. Dr. Fisher still gives rare counsel to the college students at different Vesper services during the year. His residence is 5611 Kentucky Avenue, Pittsburgh.

MRS. ELIZABETH BOALE ARMSTRONG. Mrs. Armstrong was instructor in Medieval and English History from 1904 to 1910, and is making good use of her historical knowledge in the Woman's Club of Vandergrift, Pennsylvania, and in the Colloquim Club of Pittsburgh.

ELLEN G. MEANS. Miss Means, who is living in Hartford, Connecticut, will be remembered as Head of the English Department from 1896 to 1900. She has been for many years an honorary member of the P. C. W. Alumnae, and will be with us at the Anniversary exercises.

Three of our former teachers are professors at Mount Holyoke College, HELEN M. SEARLS, Ph.D., who taught Latin and Greek at the College in 1898-99; CAROLINE M. GALT, who taught these same subjects from 1899 to 1903; and DOROTHY HAHN, who was teacher of Chemistry from 1898 to 1906.

ADOLPH F. CHRISTIANA. Director of Music 1871 to 1873. In 1885 Mr. Christiana published "The Principles of Expression in Pianoforte Playing." This text book is used today in the music school of Pennsylvania College for Women and in many other of the best music schools.

JOSEPH H. GITTINGS. To all students between 1879 and 1907 Professor Gittings will be among their fondest college memories. Not only his pupils, but all in the college were indebted to him for what he himself gave and what he brought to them from the musical world. He passed away in May, mourned by hosts of loving friends.

T. CARL WHITMER. Mr. Whitmer was Director of Music at the college from 1909 to 1916, and his many friends will be interested to know that he and Mrs. Whitmer are conducting a private studio at 316 Spahr street. Mr. Whitmer has had two books published recently. They are "The Way of My Mind" and "The Way of My Heart and My Mind."

CHARLES E. MAYHEW. Mr. Mayhew, who was head of the vocal department from 1913 to 1918, left the college to become associated with the Pittsburgh Musical Institute, where he and Mrs. Mayhew are meeting with much success. Their home is at 2352 Pittock street, and they are always interested in seeing their P. C. W. friends.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

DR. W. J. HOLLAND. Dr. Holland was professor of Ancient Languages at Pennsylvania aCollege for Women from 1878 to 1880, and was a trustee of the college from 1875 to 1903. He is now Director of Carnegie Institute. His long association with the college makes it fitting that he should be one of the speakers during the Anniversary Week.

"VICTORY THROUGH CONFLICT"

BY

MARY W. BROWNSON AND VANDA E. KERST

"Victory Through Conflict" will be given upon the College Campus, June 8 and 9; 1920, during the celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the founding of Pennsylvania College for Women. The Pageant has been written and will be produced by the Heads of the Departments of History and Spoken English, the music has been either written or selected and arranged by the Head of the Music Department; the dances were planned and developed by the Head of the Department of Physical Training. Stage settings, properties and some of the costumes were designed and executed by Woodman Thompson, Instructor in Scenic Design at Carnegie Institute of Technology. The participants in the Pageant are the students of the College; a goodly number of the Alumnae; five soloists, musicians of the city; the Pittsburgh Male Chorus; the Tuesday Musical Club Choral; members of the Colloquium Club; children, and individual friends.

The theme of the Pageant is Victory Through Conflict. The presentation of the subject matter shows the struggles of the human race to catch a vision of the Divine Plan for its effort and achievement, and, in spite of repeated failure, to carry on the work to final and entire realization.

The story of this long continued and intense struggle falls naturally into four chapters or sections: The Ancient World; the Medieval World; the Early Modern or Renaissance World; the Present World. Each phase has its own geographic and racial background; its ideal; for the attainment of which the people of the age strive and suffer most heroically; its episodes and interludes through which the action is worked out; its symbolism in a dominant figure, appearing in every separate stage, and characteristic of each one. The link which binds together all these phases, the representative figure for the whole movement, is that of Conflict.

Each stage of the history save the last one ends in failure, because the ideal accepted and worked for is false. In the last section, the mighty efforts of men, now clearsighted and harmonious, sweep on toward a triumphant realization of their destined purpose. Conflict is deposed from her controlling place in human affairs, chained for a time, and, at last, banished from the world. Two new symbolic figures appear as leaders of the ransomed peoples, Victory and Love.

A Tribute

At this fiftieth anniversaary of the founding of our Alma Mater what better thought can we express than—a tribute. A tribute to those who held the vision of an institution for the higher training of young womanhood in our community, a tribute to those who by substantial support incorporated this dream, a tribute to those who guided us in the paths of learning and who gave us that intangible something infinitely higher than knowledge—a turn toward our life work, a foundation for active usefulness.

We have endeavored in this volume, our anniversary number, to express in part what we feel in full measure, to those who have served faithfully and well and all unconsciously, yet with a full sense of Christian stewardship, have inculcated high and noble ideals in those entrusted to their care. Henry Ward Beecher tells us:—"A blossom cannot tell us what becomes of its odor, and no man can tell what becomes of his example that roll away from him and go beyond his ken." How truly do we appreciate the loving thought, the silent sacrifice, the patient helpfulness of those splendid personalities so interwoven in the history and being of P. C. W.!

"Great Truths are portions of the soul of man;

Great souls are portions of Eternity."

CLASS LETTERS

CLASS OF 1873

Mrs. Lucy O'Hara Schoyer is living in New York City at present.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Mrs. Mary Renshaw Chislett has devoted much time to various college activities,—sewing for the pageant, looking up Associate members and selling tickets for the pageant. (Editor's note.)

Miss Bessie Black has been in indifferent health, but hopes to be able to visit college during Anniversary week.

CLASS OF 1874

Miss Rebecca Renshaw writes on April 29: "I have just returned from a six months' trip encircling the globe and trying to see everything possible in that short length of time for such a big undertaking, but we succeeded in getting around and saw many remarkable places and people. It makes one feel rather insignificant to find that there are so many different races and people living in this round world of ours, who seem to think they are just as important as we who live in the dear old U. S. A. It is good for one's conceit."

CLASS OF 1875

Miss Jennie Wallace writes:—I am afraid I am too late and even at that, I have not much news. I wrote to all the girls, though I am not sure that all received the letters. I addressed both Rachel McCulloch and Mrs. Green at 1021 Oak Ave., Evanston, Ill. Mrs. Green's letter was returned.

Ida Harden Aschman answered most promptly, but alas! had no contributions to the "Recorder" except that her address is unchanged. She would be delighted to attend the Alumnae Reunion but hardly expects to be there.

Mayrie Cleaver Hain, and her niece, who is an honorary alumna (I confess I don't know what that means), are looking forward to attending the Jubilee; so is Mary McIntosh Wells. Mary has a most energetic family; Beulah, her only daughter, is finishing her second year at Johns Hopkins, her youngest son is just finishing High School, and the other sons are doing various interesting things, but I can't remember what, for I am writing on the train going to a missionary convention and have left Mary's letter at home.

Nettie Jamieson Vincent is in the seat with me, having snatched a few days from the rush of preparations for her daughter Martha's wedding.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Lafie C. Reid writes:—"My sister and I have spent most of the time in San Diego. This means, of course, that we are San Diego 'boosters' now. In 1915, with the lovely exposition, extra church work, etc., I overworked, and have not been well since, but glad to say am at present quite well, if not equal to my past activities." Lafie greatly enjoyed Jane Wightman and Lidie Gracie Peek, the only two of the P. C. W. girls she has seen in San Diego; wishes more would come and volunteers to answer any inquiries about this "Garden Spot of the World." She sends her love to '75 and also '74 and '76, and deeply regrets her inability to take part in the Jubilee. She is hungry for news of "the girls." Her San Diego address is 522 Thorn St.

Lillian Willock and Jennie Wallace are leading busy but uneventful lives in Sewickley.

Frances E. Wallace, sister of Jennie B. Wallace, was called home on May 11, 1919, after years of suffering borne with wonderful patience.

Ella Hughes, without a moment's delay, sent such a nice, jolly letter that I wish you would print it wholesale, if you have the space:

My dear Jennie Wallace:—

Do I remember you? Well I should say I do—and so glad to hear from you.

Your letter came today and I am replying "instanter," as per your request. No time for any extra touches—as I can understand you do not want to delay the Jubilee Edition of the "Recorder" on my account.

Briefly then—I am the same old girl at the same old stand—205 Morgan St., Keokuk—and I am wishing most sincerely that I could jubilate with the rest of you the week of June seventh.

Hats off to the Penna. College for Women! How proud we are to be numbered among its Alumnae! We salute and congratulate the College on this interesting occasion, and send cordial greetings to Alumnae friends old and new.

Yours,

Eleanor E. Hughes.

CLASS OF 1876

Mrs. Claribel Merriman Robey, Mrs. Emma Norton

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Miller and Mrs. Lallah Walker Merriman recently spent a day in Pittsburgh calling on former friends and classmates, and in reviving old memories by driving through the college grounds. They "always read the Recorder with interest" and hope to be present for the Jubilee celebration.

Mrs. Susie Walker Wadsworth's death occurred on June 10, 191, at her home in Albany, N. Y. She was a daughter of Daniel and Margaret Walker and was born in Roxbury, N. Y. After her graduation from P. C. W., she was married to Paul Wadsworth of Albany. She and her husband took up their residence in Albany, where Mrs. Wadsworth took much interest in church, charitable and club work. About a year ago, Mrs. Wadsworth, on account of failing health, discontinued her club activities but kept up her interest in charitable work, working in behalf of the Red Cross up to the time of her last illness. Besides her husband, Mrs. Wadsworth is survived by three children, Paul Jr., and Mrs. William M. Goff, both of Albany, and Mrs. Charles Russell McSparren of New York; and by one sister, Mrs. A. Garrison Holmes of Pittsburgh.

Emma Norton Miller, Lallah Walker Merriman and Claribel Merriman Robey were in Pittsburgh a few days in April on their way home from a D. A. R. meeting in Washington, D. C. Unfortunately, none of the girls of '76 were in the city. It was a great disappointment not to see them.

Lydia Gracie Peek went to Seattle last October and visited there with her sister, Miss Gracie.

Kizzie Negley Senft is just home from a wonderful trip to Washington, D. C., Charlottesville, and spent a month with her sister in New York. Her new address is 6354 Aurelia St.

The only news from your secretary, A. Jane Wightman, is her new address—524 S. Lang Ave.

CLASS OF 1877

Pittsburgh girls are all working hard on Jubilee celebration plans, sewing on costumes for the Pageant and lending a hand at sale of boxes and seats for the same. We hope to have a full reunion of our class.

Sue Locke Mason will enter her daughter, Frances, in the Freshman class this Fall.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1880

Dear Recorder:—

The class of 1880 began the semester of 1879 with nine members, but varying fortunes of health and circumstances reduced that number to three for graduation.

Our Alma Mater's "harvest home" arrests our thoughts in the busy whirl with tender memories of our happy springtime, her springtime as well, when she sent us forth girded with her aspiration, "Filiae Nostrae Sicut Antarii Lapides." The swift flight of the mid-year has passed unnoted, so absorbing were the interests under cultivation. Called now to give an account of ourselves we are astounded to find that the summer has waned and our work is well on its way toward completion.

One of our number, Esther Davis Reynolds, having fulfilled her task early, wrapped her mantle about her and lay down to pleasant dreams. Her marriage to Mr. Edwin Alger took place October 4, 1888. Although prepared to practice law the path of duty led Mr. Alger to live upon a farm not far from Cleveland. Their home was a very happy one, and Esther's frequent illness was cheered by the devotion of her family. Four children added to her cares and blessings: Margaret Emma, who is private secretary to the president of a philanthropic society in New York, which is now particularly interested in the rehabilitation of French war sufferers; David Bruce, of Dallas, Texas, who is employed in a bank, is married, and the father of a sturdy son two years of age; Esther Reynolds, who is a student in the Training School for Nurses in a hospital in Cleveland. Like her sister, she was attracted to this work during the war. All were graduated in Oberlin. The fourth child died in infancy. Esther passed away in 1901.

Of myself I may say that several years after graduation were spent in the pleasure of seeing my own country, then I settled down to the life of a teacher in the Primary Department of the Wightman School, where I still renew my youth twice a year. As managing editor of the Bulletin of the Pittsburgh Teachers' Association I am interested in the broad aspects of our profession and enjoy the study of its problems.

I have asked Mrs. McKnight, the third member of the class, or I should say the first, since she was our valedictorian, to tell you about her experiences, which will be more entertaining from her pen than from that of the class secretary.

ANNABELLE McCONNELL, '80.

Mrs. McKnight writes that she had three sons in service in the war. Two of them served in France. One daughter is a trained nurse. (Editor's note.)

CLASS OF 1883

Another year with its lights and shadows has passed into history, and we have reached the long anticipated event—the Jubilee of our Alma Mater.

Fifty years of inestimable service has she rendered to humanity, and registered fifty years of progress toward the goal of her ambitions. As she grows her ambitions, too, expand, and never has this growth and expansion been more evident than it has been under the wise and devoted leadership of Dr. Acheson and his efficient co-workers.

His high, yet practical Christian ideals for the future equipment and service of dear old P. C. W. strikes a vibrant note in the heart of each member of '83, and the fact that, at this writing, we have the assurance that each classmate has expressed the desire and hope that she may be able to contribute her presence toward a full Class reunion, affords invincible proof that the affection of '83 for her Alma Mater endures as of old. I had the pleasure of surprising Jennie Jackson one afternoon last August, on the occasion of a motor trip through Mercer. We had a delightful half hour together, when I not only enjoyed seeing Jennie, but also had the privilege of viewing some of the rare historical treasures of her hospitable home.

Nellie Weyman Haines reports her family well. Her daughter, Helen, is taking an active part in Y. W. C. A. work, teaching a corps of girls, her mother being a member of the Board of Directors of the same Association, thus giving their support to a work much needed in Butler.

Nellie keeps up her music doing fine work along musical lines in the Episcopal Church. Her son, John, is developing a tenor voice.

Mr. Haines has been compelled to spend much of the past year in Dallas, Texas, where his business interests are largely centered, and if his continued presence there is imperative, the family will join him.

Anna McCullough Ogden has spent the winter in the South at Palm Beach, Armond and other resorts.

Since her return, she has addressed a number of clubs, presenting the interesting features of the Jubilee, and, not only expects to be present herself, but to bring a number of visitors to the pageant.

Mary Acheson Spencer is doing her full duty as trustee of the College, and working strenuously for the success of the celebration. She records the arrival of two granddaughters during the past year—Eleanor Howe Nimick and Adeline Curry Spencer, two more future alumnae of P. C. W., we hope.

Blanche Evans Rust has had a difficult winter, ending in a serious mastoid operation, from which, however, she has had a happy recovery, and will make a great effort to be present at the Class reunion.

Anna Lysle McClain has had a quiet winter, but is well and looking forward with pleasure to the attractions of Jubilee week and the reunion.

Rachel Aiken has been sojourning at Atlantic City with her mother and sisters at 116 S. Rhode Island avenue, where they occupy a very desirable apartment. During their absence, the Aiken homestead of happy memories was seriously injured by fire, so that Atlantic City may claim Rachel for some time. The fire compelled her to return to Pittsburgh at an inopportune time, but she is very desirous of returning for the festivities and reunion, and will do so, if at all possible. Your humble secretary has little to record except a very strenuous year in which she was enabled to complete the compilation of the history of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church, a labor of love. As we joyously anticipate the class reunion, we are not unmindful of the fact that a complete reunion of '83 can be held only in the Father's House Above. The sweet face of Althea Bilderback Harden, and the quiet humor of Nellie Sykes Mair are present with us in memory. They are gone, but not forgotten, and we shall greet them farther on.

With our congratulations, we would mingle earnest hopes and prayers for the continued prosperity of P. C. W. that her loyal faith, her beneficent influence, and her high standard of excellence in education may not only be maintained, but that the financial support necessary to a wide expansion of her work may soon be provided by an appreciative community.

GEORGINA C. NEGLEY,
Secretary.

CLASS OF 1886

Eleanor Stevenson Lloyd reports that she is a happy, busy grandmother.

Maude Aiken Wright's interest at present is centered in her daughter, Jane Wright, who is a Sophomore at Vassar College and has been chosen a member of the historic "Daisy Chain" at Commencement this coming June.

Mary Mathews Clark writes that her husband's ill health claims her attention at the present time.

Alice Wells writes that her uneventful life does not produce "an item of interest."

Cora Carr Jones has just returned from California. Her daughter has finished a five years' course at Bryn Mawr College. Her husband lived for a year and a half in Athens as treasurer of the Red Cross Commission during the war and was twice decorated by the King for distinguished service.

CLASS OF 1891

Katherine Louise Brown, daughter of Ella Scott Brown, is a member of the graduating class at Smith College this year.

Margaret Liggett, daughter of Margaret Easton Liggett, is a member of the graduating class at Ogontz this year.

CLASS OF 1892

After an illness lasting many months and involving much suffering, Mrs. Hays, mother of Nettie Hays Flack, entered into rest on the fourth of last March. We have many happy recollections of Mrs. Hays and her hospitality in the old school days and our hearts go out to Nettie in her bereavement.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Etta Easton Martin is still devoting most of her time to her work as registrar of the Home Service Section of the American Red Cross. Besides she is serving on the General Alumnae Committee for the Jubilee celebration at the College.

Sara Hamill Tremble's son, Maurice, is Princeton's star football player, and this year has won national fame by his wonderful skill.

CLASS OF 1893

David Barbour Barton, son of Jeannette Barbour Barton, '93, the delicate baby whose frailness drove his parents from the city to the wilds of Mercer, is completing his plebe year at West Point. By passing the difficult physical entrance examination at the Military Academy last August he lifted a load off his mother's heart that had been heavy for all of his 17 years. The fact that he won his appointment in a competitive examination the busy week of his graduation from the Mercer High School was of secondary importance. A visit to West Point by his mother last November led to a reunion of the class of '93, as she went on to Albany, N. Y., and spent several delightful days with Bessie Barnes Watson and her husband.

CLASS OF 1897

We have very little news to report for the past year. Carrie Eggers spent last summer as a missionary to the mountain whites in Southern Virginia. Her station was thirty miles from a railroad and conditions were as primitive as anyone could possibly imagine—in fact, she said none of the stories one reads of those people are overdrawn. Carrie was most enthusiastic about the work and even said she would like to take up the work permanently.

The secretary has had no other special notes, so we infer they are all well and happy.

MARY M. BOLAND,
Secretary.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1903

While the Class of '03 is famous for many things, we want to impress upon the world at large this anniversary year, when the pageant is of such paramount importance, one claim to glory in particular. We, the Class of '03, were the first class to give an elaborate out-of-doors performance. We really started things when we gave "As You Like It" for our Class Day. We set the pace and the high standard for the years to come, and never have we been equalled—nor surpassed. That is a big thing to say, but it is true, nevertheless, and those who witnessed the production will bear out our statement.

This year several of us will renew our youth and refresh our memories of past glories by being in the pageant. We will be so glad to have Sarah Pfeil Baker with us and in it. We are sorry that Hilda and Anna Hunter cannot be in it, too; but Hilda's spare time is taken up caring for her mother, who slipped on the ice and broke her hip, and Anne has more than her hands full teaching in Schenley High, mothering her brother's two little children, and making a home for them, her father, brother and self. The other girls and their families have prospered. We are proud to have Hattie on the general committee for the Anniversary celebration. Eleanor is busy developing her beautiful estate in Maryland, and in our Class news we usn't forget the happy summer Hilda and Jane spent last year at Harvard. They packed up their books, went to school again, and found it most delightful, especially in such historic and charming surroundings.

JENNIE McSHERRY SMITH.

CLASS OF 1904

Nancy Blair is spending her usual busy days at home.

Elizabeth Carpenter Dearborn spends some of her "leisure" moments in enjoying her membership in the newly formed College Club of Summit, N. J.

Rebekah Eggers has spent another year teaching, and we understand is to take part in the Jubilee.

Jessie Gray is teaching in New England.

Edna McKee Houston has taken her usual interest in

ALUMNAE RECORDER

College work and also mentions a most delightful trip to New Orleans in April.

Lida Young is still guiding the literary taste of Swissvale in her capacity as head of the Swissvale Public Library.

H. T. L., '04.

CLASS OF 1907

The 1907 girls have had a happy year.

Clara Niebaum has once more spent the winter in Aspinwall, teaching in the High School there. We are proud to have a member of our Class brilliant enough to teach Spanish.

Ellen McKee has recently given up her position, as Secretary in the First Presbyterian Church, Wilkinsburg, on account of her mother's illness, and has been remaining at home.

Grace Stevenson McKibben has had a very busy winter in Coraopolis, attending to her household and her social duties. Consult Grace for information on the latest electric appliances.

Mary McKee has had another winter in New England, Connecticut College, New London, Connecticut, being her address. Although Mary shivers when she tells you of the fierceness of the cold ocean winds, she seems, nevertheless, to approve of New England.

Bess Johnson McGinnity having nothing new or startling to report, and having had directions to make these news items "as concise as possible," will not delay with any recital of her quiet life.

B. J. McG., '07,
Secretary.

CLASS OF 1908

A great sorrow has come to us this year in the death of Virginia Marshall Dann on April 18th. She was taking care of her five-year-old boy, who had scarlet fever, when she contracted it herself, so that the circumstances were particularly sad. Virginia had an unusual personality, as rare as it was delightful. We have suffered an inexpressible loss, her husband and two children and all of us, who were happy to be her friends.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Lilla's address will be changed this spring to S. First St., White Plains, New York.

CLASS OF 1909

The most important event during the last year was the arrival of our Class baby, Esther Cardoza, daughter of Eva Cohen Jackson. She is a very adorable little girl, with brown eyes like her mother's.

Gladwin Coburn Challinor is busy as usual with social and club duties. She visited in Pittsburgh during January and those of us who were in town had several pleasant reunions.

Carla Jarecki was attending business college in Los Angeles when last heard of.

Irma Beard is teaching in a high school, but failed to send particulars.

Grace Tatnal teaches in Harrisburg High School, but has not got into a rut, as she reports having attended the University of Wisconsin summer school. She is much interested in Nature Study and during the summer of 1918 taught that subject in a Y. W. C. A. camp in Maine.

In February Emma and I were both called to Pittsburgh on account of the deaths of our fathers. I had visited at my home in Pittsburgh during January, but Emma had not been East for five years.

I believe Emma's marriage to Frederick Sargent, brother of Anna Sargent, who at one time was a member of our class, has never been reported in the Recorder. She is now leading a very happy, domestic life in Whittier, California.

During the past year we have built a bungalow in Tulsa-Oklahoma, and I am now keeping house in earnest.

LEILA ESTEP HEROLD.

CLASS OF 1910

1910 is proud and pleased to have the College and Alumnae celebrate her tenth birthday by means of a pageant. Her entrance upon her college career was also marked by events of importance. It was thought fitting to secure a new president and a new dean, as well as to add new members to the faculty. Consequently, President Lindsay and Dean Coolidge arrived at P. C. W. with 1910. During our Senior year a new dormitory was presented to us.

Mary Kramer and Elma McKibben McLean are busy with home duties in Pittsburgh and are fortunate enough to be able to take active parts in the Jubilee pageant. For two years, Ethel Tassey has been doing war-work and after-war-work in Washington.

CLASS OF 1911

1920, the Fiftieth Anniversary of our College, will bring as many of our alumnae as possibly can come, back for its festivities, but some are too far away to come.

The last we heard from Clarissa Blakeslee, she was with the Wellesley Unit of the American Society for Relief in the Near East at Constantinople. She was enjoying the work immensely and expected to leave for home the first of the year, but no one has seen or heard from her, but then we never to expect Clarissa until we see her.

Sara Carpenter is busy working on the Anniversary committees. As a final effort in the interests of our Class treasury Sara has resorted to some original poetry. It ought to bring results.

Mabel Crowe Baird is still teaching in the Pittsburgh High School. She was very ill the past winter with pneumonia. We all sympathize with Mabel in the loss of her father.

In addition to her other numerous talents, Irma Diescher has recently developed genius as a nurse, chauffeur and fruit grower. After caring for her sister during a critical illness, she removed her family to San Diego for the winter. In May she motored to North East, where she and her family will spend the summer. Irma has become our latest and most expert authority on the delights of summer farming and the near joys of housekeeping.

We have two new Class babies this year, which brings the number up to eight. Mary Jane Marshall arrived in November, and Homer White, Jr., in March. We hope to see them at our Tenth reunion next year.

Maggie May McCullough, Florence Wilson and Edna

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Reitz are still teaching. Maggie May has found time to take a course in Sunday School teaching at the University this year.

Elma Trussell, who has been with the Armenian Relief, expects to leave it this month to be married to Mr. Wm. J. Bannen of Oakmont.

Minerva Hamilton spent the winter at her home, and is now pursuing the liberal art of cultivating the potato.

Rosalie Supplee has been marching from one success to another. She resigned her position as social investigator for the Pittsburgh Maternity Dispensary in October, and spent the winter in New York. There she lived in Greenwich village and was employed by hospital authorities to make a survey of crippled children. In April she accepted a position as special field agent for the Child Welfare Commission of Connecticut, and is now living in Hartford.

With Rosalie right there in the Capitol Building, 1911 suffragists have greater hope for the Amendment.

Frances Gray Everhart reports nothing new, except that Jimmie has had chickenpox.

Rachel McQuiston Kaspar and children are spending a few weeks in Pittsburgh.

A wave of sorrow and regret has passed around our circle, as we learned the news, one by one, that Miss Bronson, our honorary member, is resigning from the College Faculty at the close of this college year. But she has not severed her relations with us, her Class of 1911, and we shall feel as close to her as ever before, or even closer, because we, too, have left the college.

ALICE DARRAH SHEPPARD.

CLASS OF 1912

Eight years have elapsed since our group of twenty-one girls left the rank of students to become alumnae of P. C. W. During that time, we have added eight husbands and an equal number of babies.

In the past year, sorrow came to two of our number and our hearts go out to them in sympathy. Callah Stahlman suffered the loss of her mother after a few days' illness with pneumonia, and Elvira Estep Coburn lost her father. Callah's father has been seriously ill since the death of her mother and her time is spent in caring for him, managing their home, and teaching in the Vandergrift High School.

Daisy Sharp, Martha Kim, Helen Grooms and Elvira E. Coburn are still leading young hopefuls along the flowery path of knowledge.

Hazel's item of interest was a change of address,—that means moving and all the thrills that go with it. She and Elvira are to reside in the same apartment house on Holden street.

Florence Bickel Swan has just recently experienced the joys of moving day, but that is not the most important announcement which I have to make concerning her. Our first Class baby, Dorothy Elizabeth Swan, has a brother, George, Jr., who was born last August. Florence finds happiness in the care of her home and children and the many interests they bring.

Eleanor must have had a dreadful winter. First she had a sick husband, then Eleanor herself suffered from a severe attack of tonsillitis which Nevin III contracted from her. Before he had fully recovered from that, he developed mumps. Marianne was sick, too, but we rejoice to hear that the entire family have now recovered from their various ailments.

May still lives in Detroit but finds time to visit Pittsburgh occasionally. Little Billy, who is walking now, must make things quite lively and interesting for her.

Martha Sands Kirtland writes that she is leading a "happy, uneventful life, singing a little, driving when the weather permits, and keeping house in between times." The social side of her life is certainly not being neglected for she finds plenty of time to attend parties, theatres, movies, etc.

Mary Keen has changed her occupation, having given up teaching for clerical work and she is delighted with the change. We rejoice to have her in Pittsburgh once more, for we can at least get a glimpse of her occasionally.

Beulah Pierce is also a business woman. She holds the position of chief statistician (whatever that may be) for the Proctor and Gamble Distributing Company.

Esther O'Neill is secretary to the manager of the Altoona Chamber of Commerce. Being Altoona "born and bred," Tess is naturally very much interested in the affairs of her own community.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Mary Gray is our only "stay-at-home." Last fall, she and her mother and father and sister had a wonderful trip to Peru, South America. I hoped that we might receive some account of her trip, but modest Mary, as usual, refrained from answering my urgent request.

Lillie Lindsay is still in New York. She completes the hospital course in May, after which she expects to devote three months to post-graduate work at Columbia.

Edith Chaddock Nichols leads a life of complete isolation. As none of the girls have seen her for over a year, I conclude she must have moved South, as she contemplated doing shortly after her marriage.

As for Cosette Spence, Maude Shutt Cochran, and Frances Cameron Doane, let us hope the old saying that "no news is good news" is still true, and that they are enjoying health and happiness.

Lillian McHenry has spent the past year in training for missionary work at the Kennedy School of Missions in Hartford, Connecticut. In the autumn, she expects to sail for Persia, where she expects to teach in the girls' school at Teheran. Lillian is thus realizing her dream of College days—to be a missionary in a foreign field.

CLASS OF 1913

After our silence of two years, we feel we should blaze forth with much of interest, yet from what I can gather, 1913 still continues in its usual, quiet way. We've not even a marriage to announce, though we do have our quota of infants—Donald Clark Ament, James Allen Frank and John Harvey Bryan.

1913, however, has not stayed at home. Louise Fletcher and Florence Keyes have been getting acquainted with their own country. Louise spent a large share of last winter in California, while Florence is there at present. We imagine Claire has been visited and wish we might hear somewhat of her. We have heard what a success she has made in her teaching. Both she and Jeanne Grey, who is now one of the supervisors of physical training in this state, are worthy exponents of our old days of "gym."

Cleveland has claimed Esther and Sylvia. Esther is keeping house, while Sylvia has been spending her time in numerous war activities. At present she is doing secretarial work.

Betty, Elsie and Margaret are imparting knowledge into the minds of various "hopefuls"—Betty in Sewickley, Elsie in Uniontown and Margaret in Allegheny.

As for our Helens, they have both been occupied with household cares. Helen Culley has varied her duties with musical interests. Our Piver has been using her abundance of cheer to brighten her mother, who is recovering from an operation on her eye. She still has time for numerous student activities.

Grace, after her thrilling experiences in France, has returned to secretarial work, in connection with the Employment Bureau of the Y. W. C. A. Florence Kingsbacher has moved into a new home on Aylesboro avenue.

As for Laila, from the report of her husband, who dropped in upon us in Brooklyn, we judge she is still "all perfection."

Martha Young is living in Hamilton, Ont. Martha, what are you doing? Let us hear.

The Atkinsons, Faye and Lucile, have been living in Brooklyn. Lucile is at present accompanying her husband on a trip to Japan.

Emma is still on the North Side, busy with her three children.

Mildred Weston has been critically ill. We wish she may speedily be her old-time, breezy self.

I do not want to close without mentioning our Lucy's little boy. He is growing into a sturdy, attractive lad. From his pictures, he looks very much like his little mother. I am hoping that this Jack and my little one will soon become acquainted.

C. C. B., '13.

CLASS OF 1915

Had anyone asked us in 1915, what were our ambitions, I think that we would all have frankly admitted some fame, travel and finally to be the mistress of a tiny cottage. Five years have found some of us far from reaching those lofty heights, while some of us have already begun to enjoy their benefits.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Jane Johnston started out most bravely to teach, and spend her summers in study, but Jane has had to learn that there is a limit to hard work and now we are glad to report that Jane "intends to take things more easy."

We had always intended that Mary Jeffery should be an attorney, but she rebelled and now keeps a little school on the "Happy Road to Learning," in which she is most successful, for unlike Jane, Mary does not believe in "All Work." Here's to you, Mary, and may all school marms follow your example.

Mary Estep, however, wanted to see the world, and first went to a little Mission School in Kentucky, returned home to render home relief in the charities and Red Cross of the city, and then set out again, this time with a big fat book under her arm, and had ventured as far as Cuba, when her father's death called her home. Just now she is pausing for breath, and for the present teaching in Oakmont.

Janet reports herself as housekeeper for the family, but says that she has managed to keep up her French and Music. We are sorry not to have her with us to celebrate, but we admit that sometimes brothers will graduate.

Betty, too, has tried school teaching, but deserted for the business world, and says there is no comparison between them. She is in charge of a small technical library on the railroad, and while she doesn't find much opportunity to travel herself, she says she sees lots of other people who can.

Since Olga left P. C. W., she has tried being a lady of leisure, indulged in a summer course at Cornell, and taught in Coraopolis, but now is a visitor for a steel company in Monessen. Olga's work brings her into the city frequently, and so we can vouch for the fact that she is most happy in it.

Our Grace, however, became such a devoted teacher that even after her marriage she could not get away from it, and last winter in addition to her housekeeping duties (and I hear that she is a most wonderful one, too), she taught in a night school and now has a class in French and Latin.

Virginia has taken all the honors of the class, for she was not only the Class bride, is the possessor of the Class baby, Miss Millicent Elizabeth Speer, but has another small daughter, Virginia Morris Speer, all ready to enroll in the Class of 1940.

The record of 1915 would not be complete if nothing were said of the work of Lorna Burleigh, who died last year. For after graduation, she taught in the Chemistry Department at P. C. W., going from there to Cresson, where, aside from her teaching, she wrote school plays, established a town library, and boosted the Liberty Loan Campaigns. She then returned to Pittsburgh and became a member of the "Leader" staff, to which work she intended to devote herself. Lorna had enrolled as a canteen worker for France, but was not called upon to go.

CLASS OF 1916

Dear sisters of the Alumnae Association, like the rest of you, the members of the Class of 1916 are thrilled at the thought of participating in the celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary of our Alma Mater.

The past year has brought its joys and sorrows to our girls, and as usual the members of this class have been busy and useful.

Ethel Bair was Girls' Work Secretary of the Y. W. C. A. at Washington, D. C., until she was called home in February by the death of her mother. Those of us who have had the privilege of being acquainted with Mrs. Bair can more fully realize what a loss this was.

The Class has acquired an addition in the person of the Class baby. It belongs in particular to Mrs. Lappe (Alberta Bannerot).

Gertrude Frame is stenographer for the Vanadium Alloys Steel Co. Alice Laidlaw is Girls' Work Secretary for the Erie Y. W. C. A. As she has a family of three hundred children we know Alice is a very busy young lady.

Fairy Gibbons has been made secretary to the head of the Chemical Department of the Firstone Tire and Rubber Co., at Akron, Ohio.

We used to have a classmate named Leora Lewis, who was a member of the staff of the Fine Arts Department of Carnegie Institute. Now she signs herself Mrs. Aaron Lambie. Leora took good care, however, that her position did not leave the Class, and Margaret Lee now occupies it.

A letter from Kathryn Robb says that she has been teaching in Frederick, Md., but is "contemplating matrimony in a couple of months."

Amelia Slater is very much interested in her laboratory work in the Jenkins Arcade, and she is still cultivating her voice under Mr. Mayhew's instruction.

Grace Woodrow does Social Service work in the Personal Service Division of the Employment Department of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., at East Pittsburgh.

Mary Stratton has been imparting knowledge to the High School students of Mount Pleasant township, as have Leila Hill at Jeannette, and Frances Boale at Mount Pleasant.

Lillian Weihe has proven herself very loyal to P. C. W. by taking Miss White's place in the History Department, while the latter has a year's leave of absence.

Helen Steele goes to Pitt to study art. She assists nobly in College affairs, and she has just returned from a little trip to New Orleans.

We can only presume that Seba South McCaw and Mildred Nichols Kohman are busy keepng house; that Melba Martin is still engaged in Social Service work; that Edna Gaw is with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and that Rebekah Crouse, Dorothy Errett and Rosemary Geary are still teaching school. As for Alice Greer and Helen Thompson, we cannot even guess what they are doing.

FRANCES ELEANOR BOALE,
Secretary.

CLASS OF 1917

Here we are approaching our third birthday and who of us has attained fame and fortune? Our class ambition at one time was to raise the average of married alumnae—the general average being 40 per cent. Counting our four married classmates and our three "honest-to-goodness" engaged ones we come very close to the 40 per cent mark. At any rate we have a baby for each year. Just to show we are still young and lively we will all be at the Jubilee this year.

We have gathered into our midst a former out-of-town resident and have sacrificed another to the perils of New York. Ruth Gokey, with her family are now living in Swissvale and Estelle has moved to New York. How they can desert their classmates for mere husbands we cannot understand, but we will believe them when they say they miss us. Even Miss White has deserted us. She has been taking all kinds of things at Clark University, Wooster, Mass. She expects to take her Ph.D., so it is as good as won now.

Two noted pedagogues are deserting their calling. Helen Pardee is taking unto herself a husband and is forsaking all to live in some unheard of town in the West. Her name will soon be Mrs. Otto Nichol and we probably wont see her for years and years. And Martie Crandall has gone and done it. His name is Charles Noyes and he is perfectly wonderful, of course. We will not need to worry about her health holding out until she is old enough to be pensioned. It was a glorious surprise, Martie, and we are always looking for this kind of surprise.

Edna Balsiger is still leading the youth of the country in paths of knowledge. She has been teaching English and Latin in Allegheny Township High School. Dr. Acheson spoke at their Commencement, so Edna is advertising the College well.

Leah has been hopping all over the country with the emphasis on New York. She reports some mysterious doings in New York (the trouble was we could not read her writing) and she is now being urged to take charge of some important work in the Girls' Vocational line. Leah certainly is getting the most out of life.

We now have a justice of the peace (or whatever you call those things that marry or divorce you without benefit of clergy). Dorothea Eggers says that she can perform either of these services, so kindly patronize home talent. In her spare time she manipulates a typewriter in a law office, so perhaps she knows just how to do it in Latin.

Jane Errett is an instructor in Physics at her Alma Mater. How could they have the heart to do it when they know her so well? She makes a graceful assistant at pink teas, etc., so I suppose she earns her board at any rate.

Katherine Keck says that she can report nothing new except that she will receive her permanent teachers' certificate this year—three years of hard work accomplished. Her ambition at one time was to live on a farm, but since she tried it for seven months last year her enthusiasm has waned.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Ruth Law did a little teaching but the little imps were too much for the poor "sub," so she gave it up as a bad job and indulged in several little sick spells. Kate MacKenzie is still on the teaching list. She has been dabbling in the catering and tea room business, but she was obliged to suspend operations owing to the scarcity of certain well known commodities.

Louise has also concluded her third year of teaching. She has threatened to trot off to Hawaii, but she really could not stay for three years, so we do not know what she is going to do. She really intends to give up teaching because she is becoming "bossy" and critical and everything. She is in the market now for a second-hand Ford, so watch her dust!

But Dot is the biggest surprise of all. Here she is engaged and everything to a man she has only known about eight years. Perhaps you have met him—Mr. George Markell, formerly of East Brady, now of Vandergrift, Pa. Well, it is all settled anyhow. We do not know the day exactly but some time soon, you know.

Aline is one of those teachers who is all wrapt up in her work. She says nothing of forsaking her calling for greener fields, but seems quite content with her lot. We hear that she is saving her money to go abroad with her big brother. We need a little foreign culture so save fast, Aline.

The writer has succeeded in increasing the census for the past year by one. His name is Earl McClelland, but we call him "Snookie." Dear me, he is eight months old already, and he will soon be competing with Roy Walters and Samuel Lester for the presidency of P. C. W. Since all our babies are boys, they must get into P. C. W. somehow. Roy and "Snookie" have made each other's acquaintance, but they are both anxious to meet their cousin Sam. Perhaps he will come to the Jubilee.

The Class extends its sympathy to Ada Spriggs in the death of her father, and also Ruth Gokey on the death of her father.

Martha Dunbar writes that Carrie Bailey calls her up on the telephone every now and then, but she reports nothing that Carrie says. See last year's Recorder for the latest news of Carrie.

We will miss Estelle at the Jubilee, but we do hope that every one else will be there, because there is going to be a great deal of gossip and it is always wise to be present at a party like that.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

E. Mc. C.

CLASS OF 1918

Two years since the names of the Class of 1918 were first recorded in the Alumnae Recorder! As each year must, this second year has brought its special happenings.

The greatest event for us since last June was the arrival of the Class baby, Frances Babbitt. The Class is now eagerly awaiting their first visit from her at the Class meeting in June. Those fortunate members who have seen her describe her as "perfectly charming and cunning." Lala reports that she is busy making her first short dresses.

Two weddings have occurred in the Class. Elinor Goldsmit became Mrs. Julian Hast early last summer, and Charlotte Hunker became Mrs. James Byers Hayes last fall. Charlotte is now "keeping house" in Cleveland.

Kamala writes that she is teaching high school science in Nellore, India, and doing Y. W. C. A. work outside of school hours. How we wish she might be with us for our anniversary celebration.

Kamala has been appointed Assistant University Examiner in Chemistry in India.—Editor's Note.

Janet is quite a business woman. She now controls the destinies of an insurance office down town. She has been "re-created," by the way, for the question now is, "How early was Janet?"

Emilie Kates has been for some time a supervisor in the Pittsburgh branch of the Red Cross. She has a private office in which she may entertain her friends gorgeously in the Chamber of Commerce Building, but she is the busiest bee in the hive. Just ask Emilie about her "clients."

Annetta seems to evade us all, remaining at home as quietly as ever. Annetta, we think, may surprise us all some of these days.

Winona Sterling has been dividing her time between Pittsburgh and Masontown this year. At present she is at home.

Mollie has left Pittsburgh for the more intellectual atmosphere of Boston. She is doing social service work, and incidentally having a "peach of a time." Trenton is much nearer Boston than Pittsburgh, by the way.

Elizabeth Eggers is improving her business ability by taking a secretarial course at Margaret Morrison. But the plaid will never surpass the purple and the white for her.

Kathryn Myers is a full-fledged business woman, but she has loads of time to dance.

Rachel and Martha are still giving their services to their own home town in the high school in Washington, Pa. They have for associates in the profession ten other members of the Class. Esther Evans has been teaching "about everything" in first year high school work in Ingram, Pa.

Eleanor Fuller has taught geography in Turtle Creek High this year. Ruth Kauffman remained in the Stronge-ville, Ohio, High School. Ruth Logan still charms the fourth grade in the Horner School in Wilkinsburg. Ruth Long has taught in Verona this year. Lorena Van Kirk is teaching at home in West Newton. Betty McKenzie continues to teach in Wellsburg. Jo Paul stayed in the Bellevue High School this year. Betty Sheppard has given her services to the Curry Business College, and a strenuous life she has led. Dorothy Minor divides her attention between Beaver Falls and the Latimer Junior High School where she is secretary to the principal. Olive Wolf has been teaching in the Short Course Business High School.

Nellore, South India, March 13, 1920.

Dear Friends:—

It gives me a great pleasure to write to you sending my heartiest congratulations for the 50th anniversary. I am so sorry that I am not lucky enough to be present at this grand occasion, but I am glad I can send at least a short message and good wishes from the far-distant land of India.

I sent a small picture and I hope it has arrived in time for the P. C. W. celebration. I wrote to Miss Root about it, so she will explain everything about the significance of that Hindu picture.

P. C. W. has been developing in many ways and may God bless the college abundantly. May she increase in number, in size and in the knowledge of God. Though so far away, yet I can be present in spirit, and I shall be wishing the very best things for your welfare.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

At this time I would like to express my gratitude for the education the college has given me. I shall always be true and loyal to my Alma Mater, no matter where I am.

Some of you may not know what I am doing here in India. During the first six months after I arrived from U. S. A., I was teaching temporarily in the Woman's Christian College in Madras, but afterwards I came to Nellore, 100 miles north, to an American Baptist Mission girls' high school, where I am teaching Chemistry, Biology and a little English. I am quite happy in this work. The girls whom I teach are very poor and belong to low classes, but I thank God for giving me the opportunity of teaching them. Many times I get chances to talk to them about the Christian life and I have chances to raise them to a higher standard in Christian life and character which I consider a more important task than teaching.

Whenever I get a chance I conduct meetings. I went to a Y. W. C. A. high school camp as a leader where I had to speak in an evening meeting and take Bible study classes. In various ways I am able to do Christian work. The all-round training at P. C. W. has helped me a great deal here. I am very thankful to all the members of the faculty.

All the high schools in South India are now having the government examinations for which I have been honored by having been appointed as an assistant examiner in Chemistry. I am quite happy to be so fortunate, as there are many thousands who apply.

It is only March but we are having our hottest days. The temperature is 102 in the shade. Next month our school will close for the summer and we shall go up to the hills.

I was sorry not to have seen Miss Renshaw when she was here in India. I hope some of you will visit me some day.

With best wishes and hearty congratulations, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

KAMALA CORNELIUS.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

CLASS OF 1919

The year 1920 finds the Class of 1919 doing various things as usual. Our twenty-nine members have taken up all kinds of activities.

Florence Farr is so devoted to P. C. W. that she took graduate work in Piano and Organ this winter.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Margaret Hamilton spent the first part of the winter at home, but in February went to Frenchburg, Ky., where she accepted a teaching position in a mountain school.

Virginia Hooff divided her time between taking graduate work in French at P. C. W. and in substituting in the Pittsburgh schools.

Valeska Jarecki as usual is traveling about the country, having spent the winter in California.

Helen Leitch spent the winter at home.

Henrietta Leopold is teaching in a private school in Sewickley.

Augusta Rogers is in her dear Kentucky. She assisted the mayor in his last campaign and at present is in a law office. Gus is our politician.

Dorthea Sander spent part of the winter substituting and at Tech. There are rumors that Dot has everything settled for her future, and her plans are not for herself, alone.

Jane Sheppard found office work at the Westinghouse Works so interesting that she left very early for work several mornings.

Elizabeth Stevenson found plenty of things to keep her busy at home helping her mother.

Laura Taber substituted in the Edgewood School and assisted at home.

Eva Weston is our social worker located at the West Point Hospital.

Mrs. M. M. Witherspoon taught in the Washington High School and now is with her husband in Manila. From there they sail to China.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

(June Meeting)

The regular annual meeting of the Alumnae Association of Pennsylvania College for Women was held at McCreery's on Friday, June 6, 1919. It was called to order by the president, Mrs. Pardee, who welcomed the Class of 1919 at the beginning of the meeting in a most excellent and fitting address.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The treasurer not being present, her report was called for later.

Miss Renshaw reported for the scholarship committee. Five students who received help in 1918-19 were reported as doing exceptionally fine work.

Miss Brownson reported for the Jubilee committee of the college. She gave some other interesting reports first. A gift of ten dollars from an alumna for the purchase of history books had proven most acceptable. Miss Brownson presented, too, the question of bachelor hoods and displayed a very handsome one made for the college. She submitted the following report of the Jubilee committee:

1st. The establishment of Anniversary headquarters in September for meetings of committees, etc.

2nd. Plan of celebration for four days:

Monday—Commencement, as usual, with omission of president's reception.

Tuesday—Alumnae Day, reunions, Alumna meeting and luncheon, pageant and Alumnae banquet in evening.

Wednesday—Historical exercises, repetition of pageant, concert at night, followed by students' carnival.

Thursday—Education Day. Reception to guests of other colleges, meeting addressed by a notable speaker, man or woman.

The Cost—It would naturally be large. The committee was planning to assist by charging for the 6,000 pageant seats.

Miss Brownson expressed warm gratitude to the Alumnae for work already done and urged continued assistance.

Mrs. Spencer reported for the Alumnae Jubilee committee. The immediate work was the raising of funds. She requested that an historical committee be appointed with a chairman and two sub-chairmen, one for the "Loan Exhibition" and one for "Items of Interest." A committee on "Addresses of former students," and one for banquet and luncheon, was also requested.

The treasurer's report was read by Miss Steele and accepted.

Mrs. McGinity reported concerning the giving of a play.

Upon discovery of the unconstitutionality of the meeting, because of the place of meeting, it was decided to take a census of opinion upon all questions, which would be ratified later in proper manner. The constitution specifies that the June meeting be held at the College.

Miss Renshaw moved that a committee be appointed to amend constitution regarding time and place of June meeting. Carried.

A most interesting and friendly letter from Miss Coolidge was read by the secretary.

A few items of unfinished business were settled.

The first was the question of membership in the Federation of Women's Clubs. Miss Kleister reported that upon investigation, she found that no other Alumnae Association belonged. As the dues are fifteen dollars per year, it was decided to drop our membership.

The committee on associate members had no report, as they had not understood it was a permanent committee. They agreed to resume work as a standing committee.

Mrs. McGinity, after a long discussion of the requirements for associate members, moved that "Associate members shall consist of persons who have completed satisfactorily one year of regular college work of fifteen hours, having previously filled the requirements of college entrance." Carried.

Miss Sadler reported for the lecture committee. About $85 had been received in subscriptions.

Mrs. Pardee, the president, delivered a splendid address to the association.

The report of the nominating committee of the Recorder Board appointments was read:

Mary Jeffery, '15, chairman; Elvira Estep Coburn, '12; Carrie Kim, '01; Josephine Paul, '18.

Miss Root, the dean, spoke briefly, giving some interesting phases of college life.

Mrs. McLean reported on the possible concert attractions, which would be feasible for making money.

An open discussion followed regarding methods of making money. A motion was carried to have a rummage sale.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The plan of the treasurer for distribution of pledge cards at dinner was explained.

Mrs. Warmcastle presented the name of Dean Root as an honorary member of the association. The motion was carried unanimously.

After the roll call, to which eighty-five members responded, the meeting was adjourned by the president.

MABEL C. BAIRD, Secretary.

On the evening of June 9, a meeting of the Alumnae Association was especially called by the president for the purpose of ratifying the action taken on June 6. Mrs. McGinity, vice president, presided in the absence of Mrs. Pardee, the president. A motion was carried legalizing the action of the previous meeting, which had been unconstitutional.

MABEL C. BAIRD, Secretary.

(Fall Meeting)

The regular fall meeting of the Alumnae Association of Pennsylvania College for Women was held at the college, November 1, 1919.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Pardee, and the minutes of the last meeting read and approved.

Miss Steele, the treasurer, gave her report, which was accepted.

The report of the committee for amending Article IV, Section I, of the constitution, was read by Mrs. Spencer, for the chairman, Miss Reñshaw. The report is as follows: "Article IV, Section I, as it now stands, reads: "Annual business meeting of the association shall take place at the college on Friday preceding the Commencement Day exercises, or at such time near said date as the faculty of the college shall appoint."

Your committee recommends that for the words "at the college" there be substituted the words "at the college or at such place as shall be best suited and convenient for the meeting, such place to be chosen by the president and officers of the association."

As the amendment had not been sent to each member two weeks before the meeting, the amendment could not be voted on till the June meeting.

Mrs. Smith announced that our college chapter members could be associate members in the A. C. A. and announced an open meeting on November 8 in the college club rooms.

Miss Brownson announced the appearance of anniversary stationery.

Due to Miss Shepherd's leaving the city, the president appointed Miss Kates, '18, to act as corresponding secretary until the June meeting.

Mrs. Spencer reported concerning the Jubilee.

Mrs. Phillips reported on the meeting with the faculty committee.

The report of the banquet committee was given by Mrs. Lloyd. The Schenley hotel had been engaged for June 8.

Miss Steele reported on the ways and means committee, her report showing most excellent achievements.

Mrs. Spencer moved that we have the Alumnae banquet on June 8 at the Schenley. Carried.

The president urged the members most earnestly to serve in whatever capacity they might be asked to.

Dean Root reported most enthusiastically on the present year of the college, there being a large enrollment, indicating a substantial growth.

The suggestion was made that an adjourned meeting be held in March or April.

The meeting adjourned on motion.

MABEL C. BAIRD, Secretary.

(Special Meeting)

The special meeting of the Alumnae Association was held at the college on March 17, 1920. It was called to order by the president, Mrs. Pardee.

Dr. Acheson, president of the college, explained that the meeting was called for the purpose of frankly discussing the establishment of an Alumna Fund. After giving various plans for the raising of money, he suggested to the Alumnae Association the formation of a "$1,000 Club" for raising an endowment fund.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The plan was described in detail. Mrs. Pardee then presented the matter to the association.

Motion was made by Mrs. Houston that the plan be adopted. Carried.

President Acheson suggested that the president of the Alumnae Association appoint a committee from the Alumnae to organize the work.

Four cards subscribing $1,000 to the endowment fund were signed immediately.

Miss Brownson spoke to the association concerning the pageant, mentioning particular ways for the alumnae to help.

A difficulty concerning associate members, confronting the committee, was presented by Miss Blair. Mrs. McGinity moved to add to the previous motion, "Certificate students," and if nay difficulty arose, the matter should be settled by the advisory board. Carried.

Mrs. Miller presented a request from the College Club for the co-operation of the college in improvement of College Club rooms or house, by the purchase of bonds. She made a motion that the Alumnae Association purchase from the permanent fund, four $100 College Club bonds, and one $50 bond, and that the treasurer be instructed to do thsi as soon as possible. Carried.

The meeting was adjourned by the president.

MABEL C. BAIRD, Secretary.

AUDITOR'S REPORT

I have examined the Treasurer's report from May 1, 1919 to May 1, 1920, the books of account of the Treasurer and receipted bills for disbursements, and find the same to be correct.

ANNE M. HOUSTON,
Auditor.

REPORT OF THE SCHOLARSHIP COMMITTEE

From the income of the invested scholarship fund your committee report having assisted five students during the past year. Four of these are juniors and one is a sophomore; therefore, none of these scholarships expire this year and none of our girls graduate, so we are helping the same students next year and are looking forward to having four graduates next year, and so adding the strength of four of our scholarship girls as new members to our alumnae association. Miss Root tells us that our students are all "making good," have done fine work from a scholastic point of view, and more than that they have been valuable in the College life. Four of these girls have been elected to hold important offices in the College student work; they are fine wholesome girls, whose influence is of the best, a credit to the College and to us, fulfilling the faith that we have placed in them, by giving them the aid they required to pursue their College Course. I am sure that you, our fellow Alumnae will heartily join with your committee in wishing them great success in their College work and life.

REBECCA F. RENSHAW,
Chairman of Committee.

REPORT OF THE ALUMNAE LECTURE FUND COMMITTEE

No appeal was made this past year for subscriptions to the Alumnae Lecture Fund; consequently the exchequer was very low, there being only $37.32 remaining from last year and the committee was unable to do anything very definite.

After conferring with the President of the Alumnae Association, a check for the entire balance was sent to Miss Root to be used in part payment of some lecture desired for the students.

With a clean slate and all the enthusiasm arising from our Jubilee Celebration and the personnel of an entirely new committee, let us hope for a greatly renewed interest in the work and wonderful results for the coming year.

HILDA R. SADLER, '03,
Treasurer.

THE STUDENT SELF-GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

The year 1919-20 has seen new developments in the work and scope of the Student Self-Government Association—developments which it is hoped will lead to bigger things in the future for the organization. During the latter part of last year, a student faculty council was organized consisting of Dr. Acheson, Dean Root, Miss Green, Miss Ely, Miss Gifford and the student board; this council, it was decided, should meet to discuss affairs of interest to both faculty and students. In the fall, this council had a meeting at which the student representatives asked that the Association might be entitled to further power. The matter was discussed fully by the students and after a careful consideration of the responsibility involved, it was decided that the Honor System in full should be adopted in every aspect of the college life. A committee was appointed, which drew up a new constitution, with the Honor System as the foundation, and the name of the organization was changed to the Student Self-Government Association. It has been felt that the new form of government places on each girl a new sense of responsibility and though the system is far from being perfect, yet it is felt that the organization will grow to be a real influence in the college life—an influence which will make for a better spirit of co-operation. Next year under the new president, Wilma Davis, the Association will undoubtedly have a successful year.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

THE POLITY CLUB

The Polity Club has changed its name to the International Relations Club. Aside from that its activities have been very much the same as last year. As usual, the American Council of International Conciliation has furnished us with suggestions for lines of study and supplementary literature. The books provided were especially interesting, among them being Gibbons' "New Map of Asia," Spargo's "The Psychology of Bolshevism," and Keynes' "Economic Consequences of Peace." Each was read and reported upon by some member of the club at a regular meeting.

At the first open meeting Prof. Arthur Newton, of the University of London, gave an interesting lecture on Empire problems. The general secretary of the national organization Miss Margaret C. Alexander, reported on the progress and work of the club in other colleges.

Some of the subjects for the meetings have been "The Shantung Question," "Russia" and "Mexico." The plan followed was a presentation of papers on all different sides and phases, followed by questions and general discussion.

A college debate on "Intervention in Mexico" was prepared and given in one of the open meetings. It is hoped this first attempt will lead to other like occasions and foster interest in argumentation.

The growth of the club would be very gratifying, for its work is much needed to give a broader view of certain phases of national and international problems of the day.

THE MANDOLIN CLUB

The Mandolin Club of P. C. W., under the supervision of Mr. Albert Liefeld, has had a most pleasing and enjoyable year. Although it was not fully organized until early December, the club has surely made up since for those first three months. The two main concerts were given here at P. C. W., with Carnegie Tech on March 18, and with Washington and Jefferson on April 16. Besides these, the club has given three outside concerts, at Hay's Junction, Homestead, and Sharpsburg. Refreshments composed a large part of the program at each of the outside concerts, thus making them doubly attractive. There is little concert work for the remainder of this year, except two engagements in Homestead during the month of May. Also, the club expects to aid in the entertainment of the Alliance Francaise on April 24, and the Sophomore reception at the college by the A. C. A., on May 8. Aside from the concerts, the members of the club have derived great enjoyment merely from practicing and working together.

THE SOROSIS

We had hoped, this year, to be able to restore the Sorosis to its pre-war basis, but high prices and existing conditions did not seem to make this feasible.

Certain changes have, however, been made, and these we hope may be carried on and developed in times of greater prosperity.

Reversing the policy of last year, we have, in response to the popular demand, devoted considerable space to the department descriptively known as News. Here we have sought to give full and interesting accounts of school activities other than Athletics, which have formed another extensive department. The general sentiment seems to be that for a school of our size, a "newsy" magazine best fills our needs, and the recommendation has been made that next year's journal be even more of the newspaper type.

The Literary Department has contained, together with the usual stories and verse, occasional contributions from alumnae and others, and these have been of particular interest and value. "A Retrospect," by Florence Kerr Wilson, '11, dealt with personal experiences which the author had as a "Red Cross girl" in France. "The Story of a Girls' Reformatory" by Elinor Newell, '20, was founded upon observations made by the author while she was engaged in one of the large institutions of the country. We wish especially to thank "a member of '75" for the bit of optimistic verse which she called "Get a Transfer."

A new and, we believe, a successful department, was that of the Open Forum. The feeling that under-graduate students were prone to be too limited in their interests and too narrow in their judgments, led the Board to open a department which would "afford an opportunity for the free discussion of vital questions." Subjects were unlimited in range, and expression might be given to the most abstract plan for world reform, or to the simplest, most concrete problem of our college life. The character of the material had caused us some misgivings as to its reception, but the interest and response were such as to gratify us beyond expectation, and we feel justified in believing that the department may grow into something immensely worth while. The Forum is as yet only in the experimental stage but we hope to see it develop into a valuable medium for promoting individual thinking and affording individual expression.

In the last issue we have undertaken something a little more pretentious than ordinary for the Anniversary Number. The dedication is to Miss Brownson, the "pageant maker," and in the book we have sought to gather together in compact form some of the history, ideals, and traditions of the school whose fiftieth birthday we are celebrating.

With the greater growth and prosperity which we desire for that school, we desire also greater growth and wider patronage and influence for the Sorosis.

DRAMATIC CLUB

The Dramatic Club, with its unusually large membership of sixty girls, has applied itself to a study of the contemporary drama. We have spent some time on the Drama of Great Britain—particularly reviewing the work of Barrie and Dunsany. As typical of present day Drama in France, we chose to study Brieux and Maeterlinck.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

At one of our meetings, Miss Kennan, a young actress, told us something about schools of the Drama in New York, and their requirements.

Because of preparation for the pageant, it has been impossible for us to present the customary plays, but we have had ample opportunity to observe student work of this type. The Carnegie Technical School has very kindly sent us tickets for all of their plays.

KATHARINE RUSSELL McFARLAND,
President.

THE SCIENCE CLUB

In October, 1919, the Chemistry Club was renamed the Science Club, and was reorganized so as to include all departments of science in the college.

The purpose of the club is to acquaint the advanced students in science with eminent scientists and their discoveries, and to keep the members posted on current topics. The principal subject studied this year was "Radium" and its practical applications during the war. All the meetings were attended with rare enthusiasm, and we hope in the future to make the club the foremost in the college.

PHI PI

This year the Phi Pi has studied subjects in connection with the home, each class taking charge of a meeting. The subjects discussed were rather varied—"Marriage and the Position of Women," the "Ideal Roman Matron," "Roman Styles of Dress," and the "Vestals and Other Divinities of the Home," in connection with which we reviewed the book of the "Unwilling Vestal." The climax came in our successful presentation of a Roman wedding, that of Julia Aurumulaieo and Manlius Torquitus, in which the whole club took part. Altogether, this has been a very successful year and one which we have all enjoyed hugely.

LE CERCLE FRANCAIS

Different aspects of the French drama were the topics of the meetings of the Cercle Francais this year. The members of the club also heartily enjoyed the French folk songs, games and anecdotes which gave a touch of humor to the programs. On April 24, L'Alliance Francaise of Pittsburgh was entertained at the college by the Cercle. The program consisted of two French plays, a piano duet by Miss Florence and Miss Lois Farr and selections by the Mandolin Club.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

Looking back over the Athletic Association for the year 1919-1920, it is evident that athletics are still a large part of college life. In the fall, hockey and tennis seemed to be the ideal methods of physical training for many girls.

Class games were scheduled in hockey, and several thrilling and spectcaular games were played.

With cold weather came the call for basketball volunteers and immediately about thirty-five girls responded to the call, anxious to try out for the Varsity and class teams. The Varsity had a rather successful season. The first game was with Waynesburg College at Waynesburg and although defeated, the girls returned to school undaunted in spirit and with an eager desire to practice harder than before. The next two games were with Pitt, and again we humbly bowed to the "pantheress's" powerful team. Then with fresh courage we met and defeated Geneva College on our floor, but they returned to Geneva and practiced hard and in return defeated us the next week. The next week we played Waynesburg again on our floor, and we are proud to say we closed our season by a decisive victory over them.

With the coming of spring, everybody is anxious to have outdoor sports, so class baseball games and a track meet have been arranged for, and for those girls whose interest is in water sports, a swimming meet has been scheduled at the Central Y. W. C. A. pool.

We believe that athletics should have a high place in the life of our college, because by its means, a spirit of loyalty and good fellowship is founded in the college, and the health of the students is greatly benefited.

THE GLEE CLUB

By a revision of the constitution this year, the Glee

Club has limited its membership to thirty. Due to this successful change and the excellent supervision of Mr. Wild, the interest of the club activities has been greatly increased.

In addition to the annual joint concert of our musical clubs with Carnegie Tech, an interesting program was presented with Washington and Jefferson, which created great enthusiasm among the club members.

During the year the club accepted invitations to sing at the evening services of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, the Presbyterian Church of Homestead, the Student Vespers of the First Baptist Church, the East Liberty Y. M. C. A. and various other organizations; also a group of songs was given at the Commencement Concert and the Commencement Service.

The club has had a pleasant as well as profitable year and though we regret that Mr. Wild will not return, we feel that his thorough training will aid us in accomplishing great things next year.

OMEGA

Omega has never been seriously effected by the great world war until this year. However strange this may seem, it is nevertheless quite true, for while the awful battles were raging overseas, Omega as a society knew only the pleasure that accompanies the delightfully fascinating study of the American humorists. But this apparent indifference was not a lack of patriotism. Omega has always been interested in the war from a literary point of view and during the past year the club has turned its entire attention to the study of the literature produced during the late war. The school year has been by no means adequate for an exhaustive study of the war writers, so a few of the representative authors, such as Service, Barbusse, Van Dyke, Ibanez and Mrs. Canfield-Fisher, were chosen. The works of these people were found more than interesting, and aside from getting merely an ugly view of the war, the books revealed many beautiful sentiments.

Like everything else at P. C. W., the membership of the club is crowded to its limit, but next year will bring many vacancies to be filled. This year nine new members had their names added to the honor roll, and the club takes great pleasure in announcing Miss Bebee as an honorary member.

GLADYS FOURNIER.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

The annual "get acquainted" party introduced the association to the new girls and began the college year. A membership of one hundred and fifty resulted with an attendance one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five at each meeting.

In December, the student group sent two girls, Miss Bell Wilson and Miss Margaret Hare, and a faculty member, Miss Winters, to the World's Student Volunteer Convention at Des Moines, Iowa.

Miss Katherine Richards and Miss Helen Adair, our field secretaries, have visited us a few times and helped immensely in arranging our program.

The committee for the Interchurch World Movement sent some of their very best speakers as guests of the association.

Five study classes were conducted by the advisor, Miss Winters. Portions of the Bible and its teaching were discussed.

The president of the association, Miss Elinor Newell, was sent to the Sixth National Y. W. C. A. Convention at Cleveland, April 13 to April 20, when the amendment for the alternate basis of student association membership was finally voted upon.

We have had comparatively large representation at the weekly student Vesper services in the First Baptist Church of the city. Also 20 girls were appointed to the Student Council, which has representatives from other neighboring schools.

We are now looking forward to Eagles Mere. One hundred dollars has been raised by a rummage sale and constitutes the Eagles Mere fund. Thirty-five dollars will be sent to Madras College, India.

The new officers of the association have been elected and by working together, the old cabinet and the new, we hope to insure the progress of the Association work next year.

THE PURPLE AND THE WHITE

Our Alma Mater sits enthroned above the hurrying town,
The changeful years have never dimmed the glory of her crown,
She keeps the white without a stain, the purple queenly still.
While countless hearts look up to her—The College on the hill.

A constant throng with backward gaze pass out the well known door;
The world lets some return again, but many nevermore.
Yet though the path winds far from her, their feet can never stray;
Their Alma Mater guides them still, a thousand miles away.

Each year new voices swell her praise, some well known face is gone;
Death calls us to him one by one, but still the song goes on;
As long as Pennsylvania keeps her watch-fire burning bright,
Shall Pennsylvania's daughters sing the Purple and the White.

The President's Address

It is my particular pleasure this afternoon to welcome you to this Alumnae Association. We, who are already its members, extend to you the hand of fellowship and friendship. For us your coming means that you will bring with you fresh enthusiasm and an exhilarating sense of untried effort. For you the day means that you are launching forth from the shelter and protection of the College walls into a world where success and accomplishment depend largely upon your own initiative and effort.

We have great faith in this initiative and effort of yours. We want it to bring great opportunity to your doors, and great satisfaction to your lives. And then, too, we are hoping for some good things for ourselves from your addition to our company.

An Alumnae Association is a peculiar organization. The only additions to its membership are those who each year step forth from the College doors to begin life. But we feel that these are splendid additions—for these new members are just emerging from four years of learning, and come forth with all the breadth and balance of well trained minds, and all the freshness of youth.

We are glad you are to be among us; we want your interest and your help, and we hope in return to be of some service to you. So may we all work together in a spirit of mutual helpfulness. We know we shall like you. We hope you will like us as well.

Fellow Members of the Alumnae Association:

I am going to quote to you a little poem of which I am very fond. You, too, may know it and love it. We owe it to the pen of Strickland Gilleland.

I LIVE HERE.

A garden, a perfect mosaic,—deep green 'gainst the darkest of loam

Spread out near a little log cabin,—obscure but immaculate home!
I paused to admire—who could help it?—the weedless expanse near the door

Where pleased with my pleased inspection, stood a "mammy" of years that are yore.

"A beautiful garden," I ventured. She cupped a brown hand to her ear.

"Fine garden," I shouted. "Oh, sholy! It ought to be fine—I live here."

I went on my way with a sermon, as great as I ever had heard.
The highest paid preacher existent, could never have added a word.

Were every human, who cumbers the tiniest spot of the earth,
To see that the place he inhabits,—the work brain or fingers give birth

Stood perfect as e'er he could make it—dear God, what a different sphere!

Let's borrow our motto from "mammy"—"It ought to be fine,
I live here".

Is that not a very true and beautiful feeling? "It ought to be fine, I live here." It said to the passer-by, "Would you for a moment think that I, who dwell in this place, would not expend my best and truest energy to make it a beautiful place? This is the one tiny spot of the earth that is mine. Its condition is the result of the work of my fingers. Could I let the one thing that depends upon me for its beauty be other than beautiful?"

So much depends upon possession. And what is possession?
Did "mammy" possess the garden or did the garden possess her?
If we reflect a moment we will perhaps decide that there is truth both ways. She did possess the garden—hence her pride in it.
But likewise the garden possessed her, inasmuch as her happiness, her point of view, her sense of beauty, and the joy of life itself, we may well say, depended on it. And did she really owe anything to her garden? Well, the garden had given her much pleasure,—had brightened her life,—perhaps made it worth living. For these unsurpassed gifts which her garden had given her, she owed it to the garden in return to make it as beautiful as her hands and humble efforts possibly could. And she did it, asking and expecting no credit.

Now, surely, if we may say that a College is in the possession of anyone, it is in the possession of its Alumnae. In very large measure, they are responsible for its beauty and usefulness. They may help to hold it up as an inspiration to themselves and others, or they may, by neglect, allow it to become quite commonplace. Then, too, our College certainly possesses us, its graduates, in far more ways than we perhaps realize. Our names are linked to it for all time. Long after we have departed from this life our names are listed among its people. Having graduated there we belong there, there is no gainsaying that.

But the question is, have we done our part to make it a beautiful spot, beautiful in material values and in spiritual values?

Our College is not so large as some, nor so pretentious. But it is of much more value to you and me than any other in the world. It is not a question of size or ostentation, but to us it is a question of how much the College has served us. Has it made the life you have lived any easier to live? Has it given a spiritual uplift in work or in drudgery? Has it made you any more appreciative of higher things, and of the things worth while? Has it brought a light and vision into your life which you believe you would not have had, had you never spent four years under its influence?

If it has—if there is a something in our lives—an intangible but very real something—that we date back to our College days—then we will concede that we owe the College something in return.

Many of us have forgotten the exact things we learned in College. And sometimes this seems to be a very discouraging feature of education, that we so soon forget what we learn. But when we consider it seriously, is it such a discouraging feature? Is it an education, after all, an accumulation of facts, usable upon occasion, or is it an absorption, development, and cultivation of an attitude and spirit within ourselves, and an atmosphere without ourselves, which will stay with us through life, whether our lot be cast among those who live in luxury or those who toil? And if our College life so trained us that it gave us this attitude and atmosphere, it has given us a gift difficult indeed to repay.

After we are out of College we live such busy lives. We are so rushed doing the things we must, that, too often, we lose our sense of true values. Most of us, I am sure, would admit that we spend more time on those matters, which in the final reckoning of things will count for little, than we do on the everlasting matters of soul and spirit. Life is such an ever changing process. There are always new things to learn, different conditions to meet, adjustments to be made, difficulties to be overcome. And we meet all these things and look them squarely in the face, with much more assurance and balance than we otherwise would, I believe, because of the poise that Pennsylvania College has given us.

..... And so I say, and I think you join me in saying it, "Long live Pennsylvania College for Women". It is sentiment perhaps that makes us love her, but it is also a sense of gratitude to her for her priceless gifts to us. And now once more, let us renew a pledge, made often before—that for the rich blessings Pennsylvania College has bestowed upon us, we will strive to bring to her rich blessings in return.

BESSIE JOHNSON MCGINNITY.

Dean Root's Message

As I look back over this year there seems to be little that stands out to make it distinctive from other years. Since no startling developments make it necessary for us to keep our thoughts strictly at home, perhaps I may venture to indicate briefly general tendencies that are noteworthy in the education of women today, especially as they were brought out in the annual Conference of Deans of Women, held at Atlantic City in February.

We were assembled from all parts of the United States, yet from the discussion it was evident that we all had been thinking along the same lines. First, that greater emphasis must be placed upon the physical education of the college students; second, that the college both through its curriculum and extra-curriculum activities should endeavor to equip the student better to meet the political, social and ethical problems of today; third, that much can be accomplished through the closer cooperation of college and university women throughout the world. Dr. Welsh, Head of the Department of Health at Goucher College, gave a most practical talk regarding the establishment of efficient health departments in every college and university. The fact of the broadening of our interests was most noticeable in our own program which departed widely from its somewhat stereotype discussion of what have commonly been known as the problems and duties of deans of women, and gave us the opportunity of hearing women of distinction who should inspire us to take back to our own colleges something of their breadth of vision. Prominent among these speakers was Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt who in a masterly fashion reviewed the political status of women in various countries. Mrs. Dorsey, Superintendent of the Schools of Los Angeles, opened our eyes to what can be done by women in the field of public education. President M. Carey Thomas of Bryn Mawr and Miss Ada Comstock, Dean of Smith College, brought us a report of the London Conference of the International Federation of University Women. The aim of this Federation is to promote international understanding through the exchange of students and professors. Personal friendship is after all the basis for this better understanding and the university women by having centres of international hospitality in Washington, New York, London, Paris and Athens hope to make possible this friendliness of spirit.

Although this report of the Conference may seem foreign to our college affairs, it is after all by such means as this that our students can be kept in touch with the bigger life and opportunities awaiting them.

I cannot close this brief greeting to the Alumnae without again voicing my pride in the Benefit so successfully carried through and expressing my own pleasure in the more frequent "get together" meetings which the Association has had this year.

FLORENCE K. ROOT.

Dr. McClintock's Address, Jubilee Banquet, June, 1920

Mr. President: Honored Guests: Members of the Faculty: Students of the College, and Ladies and Gentlemen representing our constituency:

The Board of Trustees, after many months of careful deliberation, have definitely and finally decided to take up the colossal task of expanding and reconstructing the Pennsylvania College for Women. It was a case of "Hobson's Choice", either to take up the task, or abandon the field. In view of the far reaching consequences in the future, of this decision, I have thought it fitting, both as a text for my remarks upon this occasion, and as an assuring prophecy for the future, to appropriate a phrase from Horace, the immortal lyrical poet of the Golden Age of Ancient Roman literature. The phrase is this: "Exegi monumentum aere perennius." (I have erected a monument more enduring than bronze.)—referring to his own life-work as a poet. The impression it made upon my mind during my school boy days, came rather from a funny incident connected with it, than from the striking thought expressed by it. The verb "exegi", to build, or erect, differs from "exedi", to eat, by only one letter. With that exception, the two words are identical and are very similar in sound. A classmate was called upon to translate the passage. He responded very glibly, saying, "I have eaten a monument harder than brass!" One could not tell whether his discomfiture, or surprise was the greater, in the burst of laughter which followed.

Dismissing the joke as an irrelevant incident, and returning to the simile of the phrase, it has seemed appropriate for expressing a prophecy of the completion of our task of a greater college, undertaken in behalf of Christian motherhood, and Christian leadership by women, in the various movements now developing in this era of reconstruction. It will be, in fact, an educational monument, more enduring than bronze, which will continue, through coming ages, its beneficent ministrations to a needy world.

First and foremost of the reasons, which challenge support for our undertaking is this—the purpose of this college is loyalty to the Christian religion and to Jesus Christ its founder. We believe that, in the education of young men and young women, from the cradle up, the Christian character and influence of the teacher is of greater importance to the pupil than text books. Moral character, service for others, and the habit of measuring duty and the demands of social and economic life, by the standard of Christ's example and teachings, are of greater importance, as a firm foundation, for the future life and usefulness of the student, than the knowledge of the sciences, art and literature, contained within the covers of books. I have forgotten the greater part of the book knowledge I received, but the impressions I received from the Christian characters and the lives of personal sacrifice and devoted service of my teachers, have been a perpetual inspiration and an unceasing influence in moulding my life.

I have seen the same thing constantly operating in the educational work of this College. The finest part of its education has been the personal influence and personal example of service and sacrifice of its presidents—Doctors Black, the two Martins, Lindsay and Pelletreau. During Miss Pelletreau's 23 years of service in the College, her students adored her with a supreme love and admiration. It was said of her, that, "to be with her only was a liberal education." The same is true of the beneficent influence of Miss Pike and of the former and present Deans, Miss Coolidge and Miss Root, and also of the long and faithful service of the Misses Brownson, Brownlee, Meloy, Ely, Kerst, Stuart and the devoted Mrs. Draiss, who was for so long the beloved matron of the College and a true mother to the students. Their combined personal influence have created an ideal college family life, and made of it an indispensable part of our college education.

Just here, I beg your indulgence for my reference to a single personal testimonial, which is but one of many, relating to this same question, that I received from a mother, whose two daughters were our College students. Her husband was foreign born, and yet a prosperous merchant and leading citizen of Pittsburgh. She said: "Mr. McClintock, we are most grateful for the education our daughters received at the Pennsylvania College for women. We love the democratic simplicity, cordiality and friendship, which prevail there. It is in striking contrast with the social test, which an aristocracy of wealth has set up in many of the so-called first girls' schools, and created in them an atmosphere of snobbishness, so repugnant to sensible people. My daughters found the homelike inner life of the College one of democratic simplicity and cordial friendship."

That spontaneous testimonial, unsought by me, was a most encouraging tribute, as to this phase of our College education. The incident seemed to me to be typical and representative, and to have an important bearing upon the relation which this College sustains to this community. It indicates, also, the direction, where we may find a practical means for allaying the class bitterness, which is at the bottom of the present antagonism between labor and capital, and suggests a practical method of dissipating the clouds of social discontent, which darken the sky of our national solidarity. Talk about your proposed schools for Americanization! Why—the Pennsylvania College for Women has always been a model school for Americanization. During its fifty years of existence, it has been an educational melting pot, converting the raw material into pure gold, then becoming current coin of the realm.

With the risk of offending the modesty and repugnance to flattery, which are characteristic of our President, Dr. John C. Acheson, and of stating a trite fact, which everybody knows, I make bold to assert, that we have in him one of the best all-around college presidents in the land. The combination in him of a high order of executive ability, with 20 years of experience in college administration, has made him a thoroughly trained college executive. As the natural result of his five years as president of the Pennsylvania College for Women, we now have the best college faculty we have ever had; the best, most earnest and largest enrollment of college students we have ever had, and an ideal college spirit and educational atmosphere in our class rooms. In the service of the public at large, he has been prodigal in devoting his talents, his energies and his whole soul upon the altar of a general demand for his public addresses and his counsel, in behalf of the religion of Jesus Christ and the work of the Y. M. C. A.; in behalf of our soldiers in France and in behalf of education. There have been no sectarian barriers, or closed doors against him. He has been welcomed everywhere and been useful everywhere. He has fully demonstrated the great things he is capable of doing. His general popularity has been a conspicuous and valuable asset of the College.

Two things are essential for a successful college—a competent executive head and an adequate equipment. Full success is not to be attained, if either factor is lacking. The Pennsylvania College for Women has the executive, but we lack the adequate equipment. Our past and present success has been attained in spite of this lack.

The proposed reconstruction and expansion of our College, is, therefore, not only something we must have, because of our need, but it is also something that is due to Dr. Acheson, in recognition of his past success as our President, and of his eminent capacity for greater achievements in the future.

We urge you, therefore, to respond to our appeal, because of Dr. Acheson's qualifications for leadership and his clear vision of what the future of this College ought to be; because we have a first class College; because its foundation is Christian; because its organization is Evangelical; because it has never received financial aid from Church or State, but has always been dependent upon the bounty of private individuals; because its spirit is democratic, and because its theory of education is not a one-sided utilitarianism, but rather one that emphasizes moral character and moral culture as of paramount value. As a token, or sign of that attitude, you will find, in our college catalog, the study of "The Old and New Testaments and Biblical Literature" placed at the head of its "Courses of Instruction".

I have been bold in saying these things, not in a vain spirit of boasting, for that would be unbecoming to this occasion, but rather as an earnest plea to our patriotic constituency to "put us over the top" in this great undertaking.

The reasons I have just given for a larger college, and adequate endowment and a better equipment, have been internal and relate to our social life, our Evangelical organization, our Democratic policy and our fitness for the educational mission in this city, to which we believe we are divinely called.

But, there are other all-engrossing and most urgent external reasons, arising from the changed social conditions, thrust upon us by the new era of reconstruction, and from our responsibility for the unequalled educational opportunity surrounding us, by reason of our geographical location at the center of a vast district and a teeming and prosperous population.

Consider the urgent need for every possible additional facility for furnishing education and training to the young women of our country. They need college preparation for leadership in the great movements of reconstruction that are rapidly developing, such as that for woman suffrage, and in the constantly widening fields of occupation and social influence that are opening up for women. The present outlook, by reason of the enlarged sphere of woman's usefulness, is promising for the future of our race and of our civilization. The beneficent results of their increased activities are already apparent, in many directions, for the betterment of our own social conditions and the welfare of suffering peoples abroad.

Consider also, the present vast need for educated recruits for the teaching profession. Last winter, 18,000 school buildings were closed for lack of teachers. Between 300,000 and 400,000 pupils were deprived of their schooling by this means. Moreover, 45,000 other schools were able to keep open, only by having makeshift teachers, mostly young girls, who possessed little or no qualifications. Philander P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, estimates that next fall 120,000 new teachers will be needed, slightly less than one-fifth of the total of teaching positions in the country. Of these, normal schools will supply 20,000; colleges and universities, 10,000, leaving 90,000 positions remaining unfilled, or to be filled by stenographers and high school graduates. In some communities the situation has become desperate. A single county in Pennsylvania reported, not long ago, that 53 of its rural schools were entirely without teachers. In the United States five millions of children of school age do not attend any school. This condition is not merely the extraordinary shortage of teachers by reason of the great World War, but it is the ordinary and constant condition. This is a startling array of educational need, but it comes from the highest and best authority, namely, Philander P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education. It is evident that education in our public schools is suffering from malnutrition, and isn't getting enough to eat. Do not these facts sound a clarion call for us to do our part toward supplying this need? Do they not emphasize the demand we urge for the expansion of this College in behalf of this need?

The second great reason is the vast extent of this field, at the center of which our College is located. Its great extent creates a correspondingly great opportunity and educational need, for which we are, in a measure, morally responsible. That field is the Pittsburgh District, which is embraced within a radius of 100 miles from Pittsburgh as a center. It is roughly bounded on the west by Wooster, Ohio, on the north by Erie, on the east by Altoona and on the south by Elkins, W. Va. That region has a population of about four and one-half millions, who are chiefly engaged in a vast network of manufacturing industry, whose tonnage and money value surpass any other manufacturing district of similar area in the world. Pittsburgh is distinguished as having the largest payroll of the cities of the world, aggregating two and one-half millions per day, or more than $750,000,000.00 a year. Its bank clearings in 1919 totaled $7,276,700,000—a sum greater than is credited to Buffalo, Columbus, Erie and Youngstown combined, and 38 per cent. greater than Detroit and Buffalo combined.

Pittsburgh has a banking surplus of $100,000,000, which is only exceeded by New York and Philadelphia.

There are in the Pittsburgh District not less than 100,000 high school students, one-half of whom are girls. The supply of those, who are eligible for the higher collegiate education, is therefore practically unlimited. Yet, the Pennsylvania College for Women, the only first class woman's college in the Pittsburgh District, with its comparatively small capacity and equipment, is utterly inadequate to meet this unequalled opportunity and to supply the great educational need that surrounds us.

The urgency of our own need is emphasized by the fact, that applicants for enrollment for the coming year are three times greater than at this time last year, and yet, during the past year, we were compelled to refuse applicants, because of our inability to house them.

On the other hand, the great opportunity for a large woman's college in the Pittsburgh District is further emphasized by the fact, that all of the eastern woman's colleges are so overrun with applicants that, in many cases, their waiting lists are three years behind. I do not need to point the moral of this disheartening situation, for he who runs can see it. It is perfectly evident that these things are signs that the fundamental conditions for the education of our daughters are not right, and that it is the part of wisdom that they be made right for the future welfare of our country.

We should arouse ourselves to the grave significance of the prevalence of social unrest and discontent, and of murder, banditry, rioting and insubordination, now sweeping over our country, and address ourselves earnestly to the task of finding a remedy. In the past, other republics, more venerable than ours, have vanished, because of internal dissensions. The manifest lesson of their downfall lies in the common experience of all of them, that domestic strife, insidious in its beginning, and failing of finding a remedy in its early development, becomes at last irresistible and overwhelming in its work of final destruction.

Although we stand aghast, when we consider the iconoclastic program of socialism, and the suicidal propaganda of Bolshevism, demanding the overthrow of all government, abolishing all religion, annulling the rights of property, reducing society to a dead level of negation, and obliterating every vestige of modern civilization, let us be assured that we do not need a new religion, nor a new philosophy as a panacea for radicalism. The life of Jesus Christ, his supreme sacrifice for mankind, his teaching in the Sermon on the Mount, the Golden Rule and the principles of the Decalogue have not become obsolete, for creating a spirit of brotherhood and mutual service among all classes of men, and for building and cementing a strong and enduring national government.

What we do need, in this juncture, is not a new Gospel, but a greater earnestness and efficiency in pressing upon the consciences of men, the claims and the sufficiency of the old gospel for the needs of humanity. We need to stand for simplicity of living, for a spirit of brotherhood and mutual service and for the building of character, as of greater importance to the welfare of the people than the mere development of industry, or the sordid and idle additions to material wealth. We need that the political and social responsibilities and duties of the Christian and the citizen shall be inculcated in the family and taught in the schools and colleges. President Hadley, of Yale, has well said: "What shall it profit us if we gain the whole world and lose our souls; if we develop the intellectual and material side of our education, but lose the traditional spirit of democracy and loyalty to Christianity?"

Have we not a complete warrant for asking the representatives of our big business interests this question: "Is it not a matter of business foresight to put out this anchor to the windward side, during the present stress of political weather? Ought we not to safeguard in advance our great business interests by erecting this educational bulwark as one line of defense against radicalism and social anarchy, which are looming portentously on the distant horizon?" Surely as a matter of provident safe-guarding of their material interests, not to speak of the more important moral interests and welfare of the people at large, there can be but one answer from them, and that in the affirmative: "We will put it over!"

The irresistible conclusion from the considerations I have presented is, that the undertaking of an enlarged and reconstructed Pennsylvania College for Women must be carried through. The sum of three millions of dollars has been fixed as the goal to be reached. Considering all the circumstances, it seems a feasible task for our constituency of the Pittsburgh District. A strong pull—a long pull and a pull all together will accomplish it. The Jubilee Year of the College is the appropriate time for securing it as a Jubilee Offering to the cause of education.

When the cluster of new college buildings, which we now picture in imagination and see by the eye of faith, has been achieved in reality, then a bronze tablet, for a perpetual remembrance, will be appropriate for the entrance gateway, having an inscription somewhat like this:

"This Pennsylvania College for Women is the fruition of the far vision, faith and sacrifices of its founders in 1870, and of the hopes, prayers and labors of the present board of trustees. It is the gift of the Alumnae and the people of the Evangelical Churches of the Pittsburgh District in behalf of the Christian education of young women."

Do you seek their monument? Look around!

Extracts from Mrs. McKnight's Address, Jubilee Banquet, June, 1920

I take it for granted that everybody here believes in a college education for women. It is hardly a question for argument nowadays, except with a few antediluvian creatures. One of these mental megatheriums the other day announced that if he had six daughters he would never send one of them to college.

"But why not?" asked the gentleman next to him. "You must admit that a college girl is capable and clear-headed. She has learned to think."

"Yes," the mental megatherium interrupted vehemently. "That is just the trouble. She has learned to think, but she doesn't think my thoughts!"

No, thank goodness, the college girl thinks her own thoughts—makes her own decisions,—lives her own life—"spins her own free hours." She is no longer a shadow, an echo of some one else. In college she becomes conscious of her own latent capabilities,—more keenly alive—more sensitive to every impression. She may know only the traditional "little Latin and less Greek" (which after all was quite sufficient for Shakespeare)—she may make light of mathematics as a "study which prepares us for a state of certainties that nowhere exists"—she may not be very proficient in the natural sciences, nor know exactly whether macrography is a foreign country or a state of mind. But her windows are open in many different directions. You remember how Daniel kept his windows open toward Jerusalem. And just so the college graduate, even if she is not particularly clever, rejoices in this quality of open-mindedness. She is interested in so many, many things,—in art, in music, in literature, in politics, in sociology. The world to her is "full of a number of things," and life never ceases to be an unanswered question, a fascinating problem, a great adventure. An active mind is a cure for many ills, and as long as you have vivid interests you can't grow old. You may die,—all men are mortal,—but you don't "sleep when you wake and creep into a dotage by being peevish". It is by being peevish—that is by brooding over the same old thoughts, by shutting yourself up into the prison-house of your own narrow interests,—that you become stupid and old and tiresome. A broader vision,—a love for the brother whom you have seen, and an intense and intelligent curiosity about the brother you have not seen,—keep you young and fresh in mind even if your body may here and there show signs of wear.

Time would fail me to tell of all our teachers—of Miss Pike, whose patience was practically inexhaustible; of Miss Hazlitt, who gave to a mathematical problem all the charm and all the excitement of romance; of Miss Richardson, who taught us how to stand and how to speak, but who taught me nothing because I was stubborn and stupid and refused to learn (let me assure her now of my lifelong repentance and regret for my lost opportunities!) of Dr. Beatty, tall and round-shouldered, the pastor of the Shadyside church (the father of Louise Homer too), who taught us on week-days and preached to us on Sunday, which really did seem to be giving him an unfair advantage; of Dr. Fisher, kind and good, not willing that any of us should “flunk out” if he could prevent it; of Dr. Holland, who gave his services as a teacher of Latin to the College, and who, I am sure, regretted his generosity at least twenty times a day. It must have been a cruel discipline for him to teach a lot of “wretched undeaeed girls.” I think he had never suspected that there was as much stupidity in the whole wide world as he found concentrated right there in his own class-room. The recitation frequently ended with some of the class dissolved in tears and the teacher in a rage striding up and down the room, exclaiming something like this, for example: “You don’t know the meaning of detergo, detergere, detersi, detesum? Have you never heard of detersive soap?” Or turning his back on the class, as though to forget that such a thing could be, and trying to soothe his ruffled temper by drawing on the blackboard the long graceful lines of the back of the Venus de Milo. He seemed to feel just then that he would rather gaze upon the retreating back of any woman than on her face, no matter how beautiful. There was one girl who never knew her lesson and who used to apologize day after day by saying that she had “such a poor memory for remembering”. (We used to wonder idly what she kept her memory for.) And one who never failed to translate “cineres” quite frankly and freely as “cinders,” which had a disastrous effect on some of the most touching passages of Virgil’s Aeneid. Dr. Holland (he was Mr. Holland in those days) avenged himself for all his sufferings by making us cry. And we avenged ourselves by making copious and overwhelming quantities of sulphurated hydrogen (hydrogen sulphide they call it now) in the laboratory which adjoined his recitation room.

Shall we call it quits then? No, indeed. We owe Dr. Holland a lasting debt of gratitude. He was equally at home in art, in science, in literature. He went far afield sometimes for illustrations, and he made us feel that the world was very big, and very interesting, and that Latin was something more than words on a page—datives or subjunctives or ablatives absolute,—that it was something beautiful, and interesting, and very much alive.

No one who went to the College in those days could ever forget Mr. Gittings, the head of the Music Department, which consisted of himself and (for a while) one other teacher. There was something so kind, so honest, so straightforward about Mr. Gittings! He had such a keen eye for the slightest symptom of musical talent, such an inspiring faith in his pupil's latent possibilities! He was a good teacher, very clear, very decided, very patient. He did not put on any air of super-sensitiveness, but I shall never forget the hurt look in his eyes and the tone of anguish in his voice one day when I struck C instead of E, and he exclaimed in horror: "But 'Eevenings, Kitty, that's the wrong note!" He brought many famous musicians to Pittsburgh; he studied all their methods, and he practiced most of them. He "took suggestions as a cat laps milk". One week we were taught to raise our fingers as high as possible. The next, we were instructed to press the keys down with a soft and clinging touch. By our constant changes of method our fingers had attained an unparalleled flexibility, and we could play Weber's Perpetual Movement at a terrific speed. So much for mere manual dexterity,—the mechanical proficiency which must precede all real art. But more than that—we had learned to love good music and to enjoy our practicing. Among my most cherished possessions is the Scholtz edition of Chopin's Etudes given to me by Mr. Gittings. I often play the Etudes (though nowadays my music is "only fit for my own ears") and never without a feeling of affection and gratitude for the teacher whose work was so faithful, whose criticism was so kindly, whose approbation was so sure.

It fell to Dr. Fisher's lot to teach us Alexander's Evidences of Christianity and Butler's Analogy. The Evidences of Christianity, as I remember it, was a small green book,—a yellowish green as though "sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought",—and miracles loomed large on every page. The Evidences, though far from enlivening, were mere child's play compared to Butler's masterpiece. Even in the days of my crude and cruel youth I felt vaguely sorry for Dr. Fisher confronted by a class of frivolous "females" and charged with the difficult task of getting a few theological ideas into their heads. I must confess there were no hooks to hold them there.—Walter Bagehot says that the Analogy has always been a favorite with teachers because it is written in such an abstruse style that they thoroughly enjoy analyzing it and bringing it down to the level of the ordinary intelligence. Let us hope that Dr. Fisher tasted this dearly bought and esoteric joy.

It pleases me now to announce that I am one of the few, the very few people extant who have studied Butler's Analogy. But at the time it gave me no pleasure. The subject of the work, The Analogy of Religion, Natural and Revealed, to the Constitution and Course of Nature was not one that appealed very much to an ordinary school-girl. It was a very difficult book to study. Have any of you ever looked at it? From beginning to end—and it runs over more than three hundred pages of very fine print—it is all one dreary waste of argument. There are no names, no stories, no illustrations, no quotations—in solution or otherwise—to diversify the text. There are no exclamation points—no interrogations—hardly even a semi-colon,— nothing but commas and periods, sparse and reluctant periods. Each sentence "like to a wounded snake, drags its slow length along." There are no landmarks, no elevated or inspired passages, no "purple patches",—just one dead level of ceaseless, passionless, pointless argument. As a girl, I thought of the author of the Analogy (if indeed I thought of him at all) as a sort of malignant ogre, busily engaged in devising torments for innocent and unsuspecting school-girls. Now I know that he was only a pious and ineffectual clergyman, never very fully persuaded in his own mind, and that the famous Analogy was only a sort of prolonged whistling in the dark to keep his courage up.

I did not love to study the Analogy, but it was the very first recitation on Monday morning, and there were certain Sundays when the temptation to study it was very strong. But I was never allowed to look at it on Sunday because that would be doing unnecessary work. I remember my father asking me if I wanted to read it because I loved it. I could not tell a lie. Nobody could love Butler's Analogy. If I did not love it and long to read it, then it was only a task and must be postponed to a week-day. That seemed to me to cap the climax of strict Sabbatarianism.

I seem to be preaching a sermon rather than giving a toast. But like Robert Louis Stevenson,—I come of a long line of covenanting ancestors, and—like Stevenson—I would rise from my grave to preach. I speak in a way for my father too, and I beg you not to forget that the great aim of the founders of this college was a Christian education for women. It is high time for us to take to heart the message of the angel to the church at Sardis; "Strengthen the things that remain." There is very little religious atmosphere now in any of the larger colleges. It has made me very sad sometimes to see a congregation of nearly a thousand girls,—young, fresh, impressionable, ready to be swayed this way or that by a word, a look, a gesture,—and to know that they are being fed on husks, the foolish sophistries and baseless aspirations, and empty imaginations of Ethical Culture, or some hybrid form of Transcendental Philosophy. Our college girls need to be guarded not only against open infidelity, but against all the more insidious forms of error,—Christian Science, Ethical Culture, New Thought, etc.

And since "to be ignorant of the Bible is to be ignorant of God," let us study the Bible in our colleges, not merely as literature, but as the law, the gospel, the revelation of God's will, the words of eternal life. On this point I speak with the greater boldness because I know Miss Brownson, and I am sure that to her and to her scholars the Bible must always be the very word of God. It is the fashion just now to speak kindly of the Bible, and people very frequently commend it from a literary point of view. Take for example an article in a recent magazine entitled: "I Discover the Old Testament," in which the author declares that the story of the Shunamite Woman "is a tale as perfect of its type as any one of the World's Best Short Stories," but who in the same breath dismisses the idea of the inspiration of the Bible with a sort of laughing incredulity. It may be very narrow-minded of me, but as I read such disquisitions I can't help saying to myself: "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh, the Lord shall have them in derision."

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The world has grown very wise—as well as very wicked—in these latter days. Things that our fathers believed implicitly, we question now. Ceremonies and observances that they considered essential, we have left far behind. Restrictions and inhibitions that seemed to them as inevitable, and on the whole as salutary, as the law of gravitation we have broken as easily as Samson broke the seven green withes that were never dried. But let us not be too quick to depart from the traditions of our fathers. Let us build on the same foundations. Let us add to their faith and patience and earnest purpose the greater wisdom, the larger imagination, the broader outlook of the present day. Let us remember that our ultimate concern is not with transitory things,—not with note-books or examination papers, not with buildings or campus, not even with sciences or languages (these are all only means to an end), but with bodies that are temple of the Holy Ghost, with minds that are capable of an infinite development, with souls that cannot rest except in God. And so with the most earnest purpose, with the greatest diligence, with the highest possible conception of the work of a Christian College.

“Let us choose for us that which is right,
Let us know among ourselves what is good.”

Report of Social Committee

At the fall meeting it was decided to have some meetings during the winter to keep us in closer touch with each other. A committee was appointed. In December we had an informal evening party at the College Club. We were delighted with the response. In February we had a luncheon at the Chatham.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Nearly one hundred responded to that call. In May we assisted the Class of 1919 in entertaining the Senior Class.

Every one seemed to enjoy the parties and I would recommend that a Social Committee be appointed each year to carry on the work.

I wish to express my appreciation of the help given by my committee and of the interest of the whole Association.

On April 6, we lost in death one of our most devoted workers—Lucile Shurmer English. She was always willing and ready to serve us at any time.

Respectfully submitted,
ELMA McK. McLEAN, Chairman.

Death of Dr. Samuel A. Martin

The announcement of the death, in April, 1921, of Rev. Samuel A. Martin, D.D., professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy in Lafayette College, will bring sorrow and a sense of loss to many, especially to the alumnae and faculty of the Pennsylvania College for Women from 1903 to 1906. These were the years in which Dr. Martin served so faithfully as President of the College. It was during this period that an endowment was raised and the College freed from debt—and these were arduous years.

When Dr. Martin resigned the presidency of the Pennsylvania College for Women to take up again professorial duties, he did not lose interest in our College. He has visited us several times, and we were much pleased to have him with us for the last day of our Anniversary exercises of 1920.

Dr. Martin was a scholarly man, and although an able minister did most of his work in educational institutions. He was a professor in Lincoln University, President of Wilson College, President of Pennsylvania College for Women, and professor at Lafayette College.

He and his family were beloved by the members of the College. The sincere sympathy of his faculty and of the alumnae of his time will go to Mrs. Martin and his children.

To most people this is primarily a period of Reconstruction, but the greatest task that lies before the present generation is not rebuilding. Many structures, partially or completely destroyed, will deservedly remain in ruins, but other sites must be found, and other plans conceived, for greater and more adequate structures to meet the new demands and needs of the future. This work will require spirituality and mentality of the highest quality. We, with our special training and opportunities, should stand in the front ranks of those who will carry on this great task of CONSTRUCTION.

In this work our individual ideals and beliefs will send us along many different roads of endeavor, and we will not always agree on the new sites, or the new plans, nor will we agree as to which structures should take precedence in our construction for the future, but we shall always have one common meeting ground—our Alma Mater. No matter how harried we may be concerning the importance of our own self-appointed tasks we can always be certain that the cornerstone laid over fifty years ago supports a structure that is meeting an ever-increasing need—the higher education of women, and that we can give ourselves, heart and soul, to the task of adding to it, stone by stone. May we build so tirelessly that when we lay down our tools for the last time we may see its towers and spires reaching to the clouds themselves.

CLASS LETTERS

Lillian Willock spent the winter in Colorado and Arizona.

Jennie Wallace, 349 Henry avenue, Sewickley, was elected a member of the Woman's Board of Missions of the United Presbyterian church, and later made secretary of the board. She reports herself busy keeping house, doing church work and keeping minutes of this Mission Board, and of a Presbyterial Missionary Society of which she is also the secretary. She had a breakdown in February and has been in Germantown, Pa., for several weeks for treatment, but is reported much better and is expected home soon.

Mary McIntosh Wells, 2153 Adelbert Road, Cleveland, Ohio, says she has not done much the past year but enjoy life as nearly as possible according to Henry Van Dyke's plan.

For myself I can say, my present address is 3635 California avenue, N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa. Nothing unusual to record of my life. Keeping house and doing church work. My last child was married June 22. Martha Vincent and Louis Gerber.

N. J. V.

Mary Cleaver Hain writes as follows:

Dear Secretary of Class '75:

"I am not so sure as to whom I am thus addressing, but I trust this will not be too late to be of some interest. The most prominent date in the past year to me stands out so very beautifully every way, is the visit I made to the College during the Jubilee week last June. It was a delight from the moment I was met at the station by those dear Wightman girls, Jane and Belle, (Mrs. Camp), till they saw me the last evening I spent in Pittsburgh ere I left there. The entire time was so filled with delights and joys of the past, the present, and plans for the future. It was a wonderful celebration. I am so sorry there were not more of the older members of Alumnae present to add to and share in the pleasures. I truly am so glad I could be there. The dear old College changes much and yet enough remains with these changes to bring back vividly old days and times and associations. All the improvements and growth we were so glad to see and our dearest wishes were for continued improvements and advances. May our Alma Mater ever progress and broaden in her glorious work under such efficient leadership and helpers as care for her in all branches. I send hearty greetings to the Recorder and the many members of Alumnae Association and the College at large.

Yours with great interest,

MRS. C. H. HAIN,

(Mary Cleaver Hain), Class '75.

Class of 1877

The class secretary has heard from several of "'77" girls, all too busy doing things to enumerate their activities, all "making hay" however.

"'77" can boast of a charming granddaughter in this year's Banner Freshman class, which is a full half a hundred strong, she is Frances Mason, daughter of Sue Locke Mason, of Ashland, Ohio, who was the baby of our class, graduating at sweet sixteen, and she has been loyal to her Alma Mater and a leader in her town ever since, and a real home-maker for Mr. Mason, the two big boys, and Frances.

Two of us attended the mid year Alumnae Luncheon.

We helped with the "Abraham Lincoln" Benefit and with the Rummage Sale.

Susan Locke Mason writes: "I have been keeping house as usual and also working outside, joined the League of Women Voters, the D. A. R. local chapter, and a Civics or Americanization Club. Presided over our Missionary Society and in a general way am trying to wear out rather than rust!

It would seem a most important duty for every one of our Alumnae to acquaint herself with the purpose and methods of the League of Women Voters—a strictly non-partisan organization whose object is to wield an influence in legislation through intelligent, conscientious cooperation, organization being our sole weapon.

Class of 1880

Annabelle McConnell reported that she has been teaching as usual.

Class of 1881

Sara Fredericks Marks writes that she has no permanent address at present as they, Dr. and Mrs. Marks, are leaving Tidioute, Pa., where they have lived for thirty-four years.

Since January Sara has been visiting friends in Pittsburgh, Saltsburg, Pa., and Washington, D. C. Sara records a new granddaughter, Mary Linn Marks.

'81 is proud of the numerous things accomplished for the pageant by Emma Kearns Coyle, and of her work for the "Abraham Lincoln" play.

J. B. C., '81, Secretary.

Class of 1882

Fanny Morgan Porter reports that she has been home-keeping this past year.

Class of 1883

The happy occasion of our Jubilee Alumnae Meeting, when we were the guests of East Liberty Presbyterian Church, marked an epoch in Class reunions. Our hopes for a full reunion of '83 were not realized; however, we were glad to stand up five strong in answer to roll call.

Blanche Evans Rust came all the way from Cleveland, Jennie Jackson from Mercer and Anna McCullough Ogden from Greensburg to be present. It goes without saying that Mary Acheson Spencer and I were on hand as only a Providential hindrance could have deterred us.

How we did miss Rachel Aiken, but we knew that Rachel was prevented from coming only by the call of duty, which kept her in Atlantic City with her dear mother.

We have never heard why Anna Lysle McLain and Nellie Neyman Haines had to miss all the very delightful festivities of that memorable week, but we can assure them as well as Rachel Aiken that their absence was much regretted.

I had visions of being inspired by a lofty feeling of exultation marching in the Academic procession clad in those imposing robes, but alas! when later the hot June sun beamed upon us as we listened to the historic addresses, I realized that even as "all is not gold that glitters," so Academic robes may be imposing in more ways than one.

Judging from the meager accounts received, the closing year seems to have been rather an uneventful one to '83 with the exception of Jennie Jackson's tragic experience during Jubilee week, of which she writes thus: "Returning from the Jubilee Pageant on Thursday afternoon, a message from Mercer informed me that our house had been badly damaged by fire. I hurriedly left Pittsburgh and came home to find that our house had indeed been badly burned, but that everything in it had been saved. We moved into my aunt's, Mrs. Magoffin's, house next door, which they have furnished so that at any time they can come out to Mercer for a vacation.

"By the time I reached Mercer my sister had all our household goods in their house and we spent all summer and fall watching the workmen doing our house all over. In November it was ready and we moved in. I cannot tell you how happy Aunt Jennie was to find it all restored and she was not the only one. The antiques are just where they have been for the last hundred years. In the refitting of the house, we kept everything along the old lines as much as possible. Rachel and I can certainly sympathize with each other. With best wishes to all the girls."

Anna McCullough Ogden has centered her activities during the last year largely along political lines. She has done efficient work as a member of the Woman's Republican State Committee and Chairman of the Woman's Republican County Committee. She spent the latter part of the winter very delightfully at Palm Beach and other Southern resorts. Rachel Aiken is still living at Atlantic City with her mother and sisters. A recent photo of Rachel and her mother in a roller chair shows them both looking well and happy.

No report has been received from Nellie Neyman Haines, so we infer that "no news is good news," and wonder if she may not have gone to Dallas, Texas, to live, the possibility of which she mentioned last year.

Mary Acheson Spencer reports "enjoying a Sabbatical year" with two entertaining little grandchildren, who have helped to make my family of twelve".

Anna Lysle McLain writes in reply to the Questionnaire: "I am just living my life as best I can, and I am hoping to have the pleasure in June of a trip to Colorado. I am the delegate to our Woman's General Missionary Society from Chartiers Presbytery."

We are glad to know of the marked improvement in health which is reported of Blanche Evans Rust. She certainly looked remarkably well when we enjoyed Jubilee Week together.

Your secretary's year has been, as usual, a quietly busy one, with a few weeks of relaxation at Lakewood, New Jersey, last fall when the brilliant-hued Autumn foliage presented a glorious view of Nature en fete.

We close the record for the year with grateful hearts and the prayer that we may each have grace given us to measure up to life's great opportunity as we meet it in the coming days.

GEORGINA G. NEGLEY,

Secretary.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1884

Mrs. Gertrude Walker Holmes writes that she has been helping in the Civic Club, Consumer's League, College Club, Drama League and Twentieth Century Club. She hopes that since the social afternoons of the Alumnae have proved so enjoyable they may be continued.

Mrs. Jennie MacCracken Elliott is the Librarian at Monmouth College in Illinois.

Class of 1886

Of 1886 we hear that Mrs. Maud Aiken Wright has been visiting her daughter Jane, a Junior in Vassar College, while Mrs. Mary Matthews Clark's daughter, Miriam, was among last year's graduates at Mt. Holyoke.

Mrs. Eleanor Stevenson Lloyd spent three months in the sunny south and motored across Florida.

Class of 1887

The following letter was received from Sallie Wallace Mather: "Lafayette, Indiana, May 2, 1921. To the President of the Pennsylvania College for Women: Dear Madam: I am desirous of getting in touch with some of my old class-mates and school friends who were attending college at the time I graduated in '87. I would be very glad to hear from any of them.

"I have been confined in this Hospital for a long time, and letters are very much appreciated. Very sincerely, Sallie Wallace Mather. P. S. A friend is kindly writing this letter."

Class of 1889

Elizabeth C. Riggs says she is doing the same old thing in a little different way, teaching in the High School.

Class of 1890

Mrs. Lillian Hill O'Neil sends greetings to the readers of the Recorder with the news of a very busy year. Her especial field is politics and she is chairman of Washington County for the Woman's Republican Committee. In March she enjoyed an interesting visit to Harrisburg and more recently has been in Washington, D. C., attending the D. A. R. Convention.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

She speaks of the death of Anna Belle O'Neil Williams, a student at the college in the seventies, which occurred in January in Evanston, Ill.

Class of 1892

Maurice Trimble, Jr., who graduated from Princeton last June has taken up the study of architecture and his father and mother are both pleased over his decision. William, the second son, expects to enter Princeton next fall while John will be a Sophomore at the Ben Avon High School.

For about a month, just at Christmas time, Etta Easton Martin devoted her whole time to the office work in connection with the Alumnae Benefit Performance of Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln." She certainly deserves a great deal of credit for the success of the undertaking.

All winter, Nettie Hays Flack has been caring for an old lady, an invalid friend of her mother's. She has taken her into her own home and been so busy with her labor of love that she hasn't had time to write anything for the Recorder.

We record with sorrow the death of Sarah Milholland's mother at her home at Norfolk, Va., on May 6, 1921. Her body was brought to Pittsburgh for interment, the services being held at the Mt. Lebanon United Presbyterian Church. Sarah has always been a most devoted daughter and we sympathize with her in her bereavement.

Class of 1893

Jeannette Barbour Barton writes that she was Vice-Chairman of the Republican Women's Committee of Mercer County preceding the election, and also County Secretary of the Women Voter's League.

We wish to extend the sympathy of the Alumnae Association to Mrs. Barton in her recent bereavement. Her only daughter, Anjanet Hurlbut Barton, died April 19, 1921, in her sixteenth year, and Mrs. Barton's brother, George Hurlbut Barbour, of Pittsburgh, died three days later, April 22, 1921, at his home on Stanton avenue. He was well known to P. C. W. girls during Mrs. Barton's student days.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1894

Our Class of '94 has lost one of its members this year, Lulu McConnell, who died February twelfth at her home on the North Side after a very short illness. She had really been in poor health for several years, but had faithfully continued her work as teacher most of that time. The Class mourns the loss of a valued member, and extends its sympathy to her mother, left alone in her declining years.

Helen Kirk, daughter of Elizabeth Raney, '94, was married March 19th, 1921, to James Harrington McAfee.

SARAH BRYANT STEVENSON.

Class of 1897

Harriet McCarty resigned her position in Sewickley during the past year to accept another library position in Charleston, S. C.

Grace Hood Hannah reports that she has been doing "just the same as usual," while Carrie Eggers gives her occupation as a Supervisor in Community Service at the Bible Teachers' Training School in New York City.

Mary Boland had a visit in Florida for her health and reported in April that they were having perfect summer weather with always a delicious breeze.

Class of 1898

Alice Davidson and Elizabeth McCague both report "at home" this year.

Class of 1899

Jane Devore Porter sends best wishes to the Recorder. She is Principal of the Shortcreek Township High and Grade Schools, Shortcreek, Ohio.

Class of 1900

Three of the members of the class responded to the appeal for news and from their replies we gleaned the following information.

Alice Thomas Caples is at present in Fort Logan, Colorado, but next year her address will be Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. She has been seeking health in the West and feels she has just about accomplished a cure.

Emma S. Jones' life sounds like a busy one for she is President of the Bridgeville W. C. T. U., Corresponding Secretary of the Missionary Society, a teacher in the Sabbath School, an active member of the Woman's Club and Ladies' Aid Society, and incidentally she has a home and family to care for.

Mina Taylor finds her time fully occupied with the care of her three big boys and housekeeping problems in these "almost servantless days."

Class of 1901

Carrie Kim is teaching in the Westinghouse High School, and Rosetta Houston is busy with her family.

Class of 1902

The responsible citizens into which the class of 1902 has grown are too seriously engaged in the important occupations of life to furnish good copy. Bringing up children,, teaching aspiring youth, directing public welfare agencies, hustling the tired business man, properly refreshed and clothed and fed, off to his daily labors—all are woman-size jobs, but do not sound particularly entertaining in the reading.

Grief has come to two members of the class in the death of the Rev. William P. Shrom, father of Mary Shrom Gay, and of Mrs. Van Wagener, mother of Elizabeth Van Wagener Landis.

Edith Stanton is still with the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., but is temporarily absent from New York, having been appointed acting executive for the South Atlantic States, with headquarters at Richmond.

Margaret McKinney is now District Agent of the State Board of children's Guardians, to which responsibilities she has added home duties because of the serious illness of her mother.

Elsie Braun Searing now lives on a young estate on Lexington avenue, where she continues to attempt and accomplish the impossible.

Those middle-aged dames getting married! Yes, two of them. In June, 1920, Elizabeth Van Wagener was married to Mr. William A. Landis. In July, Ann Houston was married to Mr. Paul M. Dysart.

Helen B. Dickey gave up her work at the University of Chicago this winter because of ill health and departed for San Diego, whereupon she began to get well and is now teaching sewing in the San Diego High School. Having observed the respective palaces which the sandwich queen and the popcorn king of San Diego have acquired, Helen wishes she had appeared earlier on the scene as the hash and pie princess of the West. We trust it is not too late.

Helen Sherrard Fuller writes that she spends her time golfing, traveling to and from California and preparing for P. C. W. her daughter, who is now in kindergarten.

Other members of the class failed to report.

Class of 1903

Another year has come and gone and again it is time for Recorder news. It has been a good year for most of us and full of happiness. The most serious thing was the illness of dear Anna Hunter's father, but he is getting along better now and is very happy over the fact that his book—a Commentary on the Book of Revelations, and on which he has worked for twenty years—is soon to be published.

Mary Willson Coleman has had a stirring year. She not only has had a new baby but also a new residence. Her husband is now holding down the chair of English Bible at Geneva College, Beaver Falls. As he has also been acting as Debate Coach and been so busy, Mary has helped him out in his Bible courses. Of course, she isn't busy keeping house, taking care of a fat, pink baby with reddish-gold hair and a happy disposition, to say nothing of her other three children! Anna Myra and Hattie are happy with their families. Hattie says she is busy as usual teaching four of her children. Anna Jane, the oldest, went to Winchester this year. Hattie's afternoons are taken up with house-keeping and a very little Community work.

Eleanor Fitzgibbon is still developing her lovely place and stock farm at Laurel, Md. She writes:—"Dear Jane: My news would be of more interest to the readers of the 'Jersey Bulletin' or the 'Maryland Farmer' than to the readers of the 'Alumnae Recorder.'

"It is briefly—We have bought a quarter interest in Sybil's Gambage, the world's highest priced and greatest Jersey sire. By so doing, we have—at one fell stroke—put our herd among the important Jersey breeding establishments of the country.

Second, in importance, is, of course, our new dairy barn—148x40 feet—with all modern conveniences for the most fastidious and high-bred cow—to say nothing of Sybil's Gambage. It must be seen to be appreciated and I, like O'Grady's goat, 'done that.'

One of the achievements of the year is a twenty-five acre field of alfalfa—which I richly earned last August pacing the field in the broiling sun behind a dumb and lazy boy who was ploughing and harrowing it with a tractor. I even "inaugurated" the seed (to quote black Charley) with the proper bacteria. Do you wonder I revel in its green beauty?

"At present we are engaged in cutting four thousand cords of pulp-wood and incidentally clearing the land for farming.

"I am no longer a Drama Leaguer, but I am—don't laugh—the Director for Maryland on the Board of the Eastern Berkshire (Hog) Congress! Also a member of the American Berkshire Association, the Percheron Society of America, the American Jersey Cattle Club,—and—most flattering of all—the first and only woman member of the "Vansville Farmer's Club," the oldest farmer's club in the State of Maryland!"

Eleanor's letter speaks for itself. She has had two of the girls call on her, Sarah Pfeil Baker last fall and Hilda Sadler this Spring.

Hilda and her mother spent Holy Week in Washington and Philadelphia. Sarah spent the winter in Southern Pines playing golf and helping her husband recover from a serious attack of pneumonia. No word has come from Ruth Johnstin, so we hope all is well with her.

As for Jane, she does a little bit of everything. One of the most interesting things she did was to have charge of the tea which the Association of Collegiate Alumnae gave in February for the foreign students studying and working in Pittsburgh and vicinity. One evening she was heard to remark that she had been with so many foreigners lately she didn't know what she was herself. Anyway, it's lots of fun, and most enlightening and broadening.

JENNIE McSHERRY SMITH.

Class of 1904

The members of the class of '04 have very cheerfully and almost unanimously delegated the task of reporting their doings for the past year to the imagination of the secretary. The afore-said imagination not being equal to the task, we assume that the girls are pursuing their usual lives of duty and pleasure and would be only too glad to furnish some thrilling bits of news, "if they could".

HELEN T. LARIMER.

Class of 1905

During 1920 Helen Moore did some library work in Asheville, but this winter she has been in Florida.

Harriet Kerr continues her work as a private secretary.

Class of 1906

Edith Gray is teaching Latin in Southfield Point Hall, Stamford, Conn., the school of which her sister, Jessie, '04, is Principal. She says that P. C. W. is well represented in their faculty for Ethel Perry and Willard Crane, '20, are also teaching there.

Verna Madtes Rifenberick is still teaching in Monessen and Willa McNitt so far as known is still in the City Health Department in Douglas, Arizona.

Class of 1907

1907 reports no very exciting nor thrilling news. However, we feel that we have one claim to distinction this year in numbering among our midst the President of the Alumnae Association. Little did we dream that our Bess would attain such a dignified position when she responded to the Welcome to the Class at the Alumnae Dinner some years past! In considering the accomplishments of the year, the Benefit, the Luncheon, the Rummage Sale and the other social meetings, together with the unusual activity of many of the alumnae, we are sure you will agree with us that we have a right to be proud of our President.

Ellen McKee has a new plaything, an Overland Sedan, which proved to be very useful during the Rummage Sale. Incidentally her classmates are enjoying it with her. We hope she will be able to carry out her plan of driving to Akron, Ohio, to visit her sister.

Grace Stevenson McKibben is still keeping house in Corapolis, but expects to spend most of the summer in the East. Her latest activity is a Westminster Guild.

Mary McKee cannot resist the call of New England and has spent the year teaching in Connecticut College. She had an interesting walking trip through Cape Cod during the Easter holiday.

Clara Niebaum has been teaching this winter after an interesting summer in Wisconsin, six weeks of which were spent at the University in Madison.

CLARA L. NIEBAUM.

Class of 1908

Although we have no startling items of news this year, it seems to have been rather a strenuous one for us all. With three families of growing children, life is not exactly monotonous for the mothers.

Myrtle says the most important thing she has done is to change her house into apartments. Her children are all well, and she writes of a splendid visit from Miss Coolidge and her mother. Also of a P. C. W. reunion at the home of Miss Drais in Los Angeles, attended by twelve. The Coolidges, Mrs. Lindsay and Lillie, Miss Drais and her mother, Anna Sargent Smith, Emma Coulter Sargent, Claire Colestock, Ethel Tassey, Miss Mary Wilson and herself. I think the California girls have been fortunate this year in seeing their old friends.

Lilla has been having quite a siege this year. Beginning with bronchitis herself, both boys have had whooping cough since, and now she is slowly recovering from the grippe. She has the sympathy of any one who has nursed two small boys through such a time. You are quite ready to come down with something by the time they are better. We all enjoyed Lilla's visit here last year so much.

Virginia's children, Patricia and Marshall Dann, are both well.

Last fall we moved our Lares and Penates to the country (so called). Although a bungalow on the Verona Road about half way to Oakmont is not farm life still it is decidedly rural; enough so, I hope, so that all our friends will come to see us this summer. The boys are very good advertisements for country life.

MARY MELLON McJUNKIN.

Class of 1909

Eva Cohen Jackson is the only one of the class of 1909 of whom we have any news and her news consists of the statement that during the last year her chief occupation has been advertising for maids and doing their work when they failed to materialize.

Class of 1910

There is nothing much to report for our class. We seem to lead a vry hum-drum existence.

Mary Kramer is still giving her undivided attention to her mother. Not many mothers receive such devotion, so surely with the splendid care she will soon regain her health.

Ethel Tassey has joined our colony in California. She lives in Alhambra and teaches school in Pasadena.

Elma McKibben McLean is busy with Jane's education. Jane is six years old now, is in first grade at school, takes dancing, and is studying the Virgil system of music

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1911

1911 has no reason for not having every one of the seventeen back to celebrate her tenth anniversary, though some of the members have journeyed afar, they are at present in this country and the babies are all old enough to be left at home.

There are two new sons added to the roll: Clyde Anderson Everhart arrived to celebrate the Fourth and Gertrude Wayne Horwitz' first son came in October.

Edna, Florence and May have been teaching in Wilkesburg High School. Florence has decided upon a new career and will be married in June to Mr. Herbert Canerdy. We all wish her unmeasured happiness.

Sara says she has done nothing unique, but reports a delightful visit with Rosalie in Hartford, Conn.

Elma is enjoying housekeeping in Oakmont.

Mabel is thoroughly enjoying her work in Fifth Avenue High School. Jean is almost a young lady.

We sympathize with Clarissa in the loss of her Father. The circumstances were unusually sad as Clarissa was abroad. She is at present visiting Alice Sheppard and we hope to see her at Commencement.

Minerva was at last report in Miss Priscilla Guthrie's book shop.

Edith Medley much prefers office work for the Pittsburgh Board of Education to teaching.

Many students and teachers will be sorry to hear of the death of Anne Keller, Corinne Bray's only child. The baby died in California, after a brief illness.

We have not heard recently of Miss Brownson, whom we hope to see in June.

Class of 1912

The Secretary is most happy to report that Edith Chaddock Nichols is no longer among those "missing." She and her husband and charming little daughter, Betty, are living right here in Pittsburgh; in fact, have been all the time but as they had moved several times, none of her classmates seemed able to locate her. I enjoyed the pleasure of a little chat with Edith and her daughter in Horne's one day last winter and found her the same Edith we knew in College days.

In reply to the question, "What have you been doing this year?" Eleanor Davis Woodside wrote, "Raising a young hopeful, Nevin Woodside, III." We sympathize with Eleanor in the death of her little daughter, Marianne, on November 2, 1920, after a short illness from pneumonia.

Sorrow also came to Florence Bickel Swan in the death of her father, Mr. Charles Bickel.

Martha Kim has had an anxious winter because of the serious illness of her mother, but the last report of the condition of her health was somewhat more encouraging.

Martha and Daisy are still teaching at the Westinghouse High School and Elvira Estep Coburn, at Riverside High. Mary Gray continues in library work and at the last report, Hazel Hickson was living a life of leisure.

Lillian McHenry's sister wrote that Lillian was at present somewhere between Bombay, India and Teheran, Persia. She has been en route to Persia since December 2, 1920, where she expects to teach in the American Girls' School of Teheran.

Calla Stahlmann reports she has been teaching, breaking in five housekeepers, visiting a sick sister, and entertaining her father.

As I received no replies from the other members of the class, I conclude that they have changed neither their addresses nor interests, so will have to refer those interested to the 1920 Edition of the Recorder for "news" of them. Just a word to these "delinquents,"—if you could only realize how much more interesting it would be for your classmates and how much easier for the secretary, I feel certain that you would devote a few moments to writing a reply to the annual request for "items of interest." I sincerely hope that this time next year you will do your duty because it is such an easy way to keep up communication with each other.

The Secretary has nothing of interest to report except a new address, not because I have moved, but due to the fact that the district in which I live has been annexed to Pittsburgh, hence my new city address.

FRANCES DAVIES KERR.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1913

It seems to be the most difficult task in the world to learn the whereabouts of some of our members. I have telephoned, written and then phoned again, and, still, I haven't gleaned much information concerning them.

Helen Blair reports that she is doing just the same as usual, only more of it. We all know, of course, what that means.

Betty McCague responded with a very interesting letter. She is still at Miss Dickinson's School and expects to teach there again this coming year. It is through her that we learn news of Claire, who is living in Los Angeles and supervising in Pasadena, commuting every day. She wrote Betty about the delightful P. C. W. reunion they held out there this winter with Miss Coolidge and her mother, the Lindsays, Mrs. Drais and her daughter, Ethel Tassey and several others present.

Christine and John Harvey, Jr., spent several weeks in Pittsburgh last fall. They are still residing in Brooklyn.

Helen Craig Culley has the most exciting news of all to relate, namely, the arrival of a daughter, Mary Katherine, born on March tenth. Another prospective P. C. W. student!

Emma Geiselhart Osterloh has three lovely children, Betty, Charles Jr., and Bob. She says that looking after the wants of these three and attending to the doctor's clerical work leaves her very few minutes for loafing.

Jeanne is very much engrossed in her work at Harrisburg as State Supervisor of Physical Training. She came home last fall intending to rest for a year, but duty called and she returned to the capital in January.

Florence Frank, according to her own statement, spends most of her time trying to keep two small boys out of mischief. This task, together with her many outside duties, makes her a very busy person.

Esther and Sylvia are both living in Cleveland. Esther has two boys in her family now. Sylvia has been substituting and doing social work.

Florence Keys, Margaret, Elsie and "Titzell" have been teaching. Forence in Morgantown, Margaret in Allegheny, and Marguerite at Miss Simonson's school in East Liberty.

Martha writes that she has spent the past year concerning herself with different phases of dramatic art, mostly teaching, and having a glorious time in her Canadian home. She adds that she knows some interesting information that she refuses to impart and that she leaves us all wrought up. She has recently enjoyed a visit from Sarah Stuckslager.

Grace is at the Y. W. C. A. Employment Bureau hunting jobs for jobless and vice versa.

I considered myself a very industrious person, indeed, wondering where I was going to find time to gather even the meager information that this letter contains, but, after looking at Emma's report and again at Florence Frank's, I feel as if looking after one lively small son is not such an enormous task as it seems.

L. C. A. '13

The class of 1914 seems to be doing nothing tremendously exciting or out of the way.

Janet Brownlee perhaps has had the most unfortunate experience of a long illness lasting almost two years. She spent some time in the south this winter and is now gradually recovering.

Ethel Williams Keister has moved to Moundsville, West Virginia, and says her chief occupations consist in keeping house and raising an infant. (And I'll say her hands are full).

Guilietta Plympton has been teaching French and English in the Arnold High School, Arnold, Pa. She says that this spring, with the aid of the students she catalogued the school library of a thousand volumes, and later coached the Senior play, "At the end of the Rainbow."

Anne Rutherford has been teaching in the Washington High School.

Juanita Husband is still living in Mt. Pleasant and gives her occupation as "housekeeper."

Margery Stewart has been teaching in the High School at Kenilworth, Ill. This summer she expects to return to Columbia (where she was last summer) to assist in biology.

Pauline Burt says: "I have shaken the dust of Vassar from my feet and have taken up my sojourn at Smith. The experience is pleasant, so much so that I'm not going to give it up next year. However, a little studying on the side will, I hope, serve to keep my interests alive until I go to Yale, where I shall study for my Doctor's degree."

Marguerite McBurney is still teaching in the science department of P. C. W.

Hazel Rider has been teaching first grade in her home school. She said she paid her annual visit to Josette this last year and took a trip through western Canada and our own country.

Margaret Brown is living in New Concord, Ohio. Her husband is connected with Muskingum College, where his official title is "Dean of the College and Professor of Economics." Margaret has a year and a half old son, Robert Scott Cleland, who has been a phenomenal infant in many ways, such as cutting his first tooth before his fifth month and walking at a year and four days.

Gertrude Goeddel spent the past winter in California—her present whereabouts unknown.

The other members of the class remain unheard from. Nevertheless, greetings, and better luck next year.

MARJORY BOGGS TAYLOR, 1914.

Class of 1915

The class of 1915 has not been doing anything very exciting this year. Olga Losa is still socializing Woodlawn, and seems to enjoy her work thoroughly.

Betty Cameron is one of the few the Pennsylvania railroad condescended to keep on the pay roll. We can understand that of course. We have luncheon for two every week or so and kind of talk things over.

Mary Jeffery continues to train the minds of Glenshaw, and enjoys her work as much as ever.

Virginia Speer is very busy with her home and family, so we do not see her very often. She has two very active little daughters.

Louise Crawford motors to Pittsburgh occasionally. She is a real farmerette and looks healthy and happy. And Frances, the little Crawford, is surely benefiting from the country air.

Janet Campbell, although not very far from Pittsburgh, isn't very sociable. We hear indirectly that she and her mother are planning a trip abroad. We would like to hear more about it.

I haven't heard from Jane Johnston, so do not know what she is doing. We want her to know of our sympathy in the death of her brother, Dr. Johnston. The writer is very busy in the Personnel Department of Kaufmann's, The Big Store, doing educational work with the juniors of the store.

Sorrow has deeply touched our class this year. It is very hard to express just how much sorrow we feel in the death of our dearly beloved classmate, Grace Davies Hamilton. We always felt her influence and deep friendship so closely. She was always interested, always helpful, a faithful worker, and the kind of loyal friend one values and needs. Her death taking her away from her happy home and the community which loved her, is very hard to bear. The class of 1915 has suffered deeply in the loss of Grace and Lorna.

MARY HALL ESTEP.

The Class of 1916 is becoming reticent about its individual activities, very much so, but we managed to glean a few facts about some of the members. Francese Boale writes that she has been teaching this year in the high school at Franklin, Penna. Ethel Bair is still at home, and is to be seen from time to time at Decade. Alberta Bannerot Lappe is busy at home with her housekeeping, and the Class Baby, Jane. Little Jane was quite sick this winter, but is well now, and just "beginning to get around and into everything", according to Alberta. Alberta has not been so well, either, but hopes to be at our Fifth Anniversary. Rebekah Crouse is still teaching in Sharpsburg; Dorothy Errett taught this year in the Latrobe High School. Gertrude Frame is home from Latrobe, where she went in August, and is resting before taking a new secretarial position in June. Alice Greer Donaldson has a young son, we have learned, but details as to name and date of birth are lacking, we are sorry to say. Leila Hill has been teaching this winter at Miss Shearer's School. Margaret Lee is still with the Department of Fine Arts, Carnegie Institute, and Alice Laidlaw in Erie. Leora Lewis Lambie writes that she is housekeeping and doing considerable club work. Mildred Nicholls Kohman has been spending the year keeping house and traveling. She is sorry that she won't be able to come to the Banquet, but sends greetings to all the class. June 23, 1920, was the date of Kathryn Robb's marriage to the Reverend David Dunn. They are living in Turtle Creek, and Kathryn is busy housekeeping and taking care of her son, Lewis Robb Dunn, who was born May 8, 1921. Amelia Slater is busy with her laboratory work in the Jenkins Arcade. Helen Steele has become Mrs. Todd Gehr Truxal, and is making her home in Greensburg, although we are fortunate enough to see her in Pittsburgh quite frequently. Mary Stratton is teaching in the Mt. Pleasant Township High School, and Grace Woodrow is now connected with the Social Service Department of the West Penn Hospital. We are sorry that we have not heard from the others either directly or indirectly.

G. L. F.

Class of 1917

The secretary was startled several weeks ago by a sudden rush of mail from the members of her class. "Mercy, what is the trouble?" thought she. Her mind was soon set at rest—they merely wished to get into print. The Round Robin also descended upon her so, having no lack of material, she took her little pen and gallantly waded in.

Carrie Bailey remains in complete oblivion. We will presume that she is still conducting herself in the same exemplary manner as last year and the year before. At least she has done nothing criminal as we have read nothing of it in the papers.

And now for our brides! Edna Balsiger is now Mrs. Kroh and as she finds housekeeping a mere pastime, she teaches with her husband in the Duquesne High School.

Helen Pardee also plunged into the troublous sea on September 10, 1920. She is most enthusiastic about the result and would see others join her. One would think that we were a class of desperate husband hunters to hear us rave about that forty per cent. Do not misjudge us. Although our ways are subtle we really make very charming wives! Helen is obliged to move so kindly note her new address.

And then Dot stepped off the dock and we were all there to see the splash. She made a lovely bride and we did our best to help her have a good time at her own wedding. Her husband lives in Vandergrift and Dot runs up every now and then to get him a meal or something. The rest of the time she spends on the "Limited" between Pittsburgh and Vandergrift.

And now Martie is going to do it in June. No one can persuade her otherwise. We can't wait until next June to tell about it, so will give you all the details now. It is to be June 14th and Ruth and Louise are to be bridesmaids and we are all going and everything. Martha has spent a whole year taking a preparatory course in matrimony. Her light literature has been cook books and household efficiency. She informs us that one should dust the dining room while one is waiting for one's husband to descend to breakfast. Her dusters and tea towels are all handsomely embroidered (we know, because we did them ourselves) and her cakes are now guaranteed to be at least level rather than concave in appearance. We are printing her new name and address in the Recorder, so if anything happens, don't blame us. Since she is going to live in Butler just run over any week end and prove the truth of the above statements.

Leah has spent a leisurely year at home. She does the marketing. Now what do you think of that? She created a sensation by attending a decade meeting when her class entertained and she reports the sight of a "red-headed baby" as the most thrilling episode in the past year. Now what is the matter with Leah?

Dorothea Eggers is still with her law firm. She does not aspire to be a regular lawyer. She just types their lofty thoughts. Ruth Law is our lady of leisure. She toils not, neither does she spin—that is, for filthy lucre—but we guarantee she keeps busy somehow.

We have only seven school teachers left. Jane is at the College but she is considering a library course in New York this summer and then she will be one of those technical librarians, don't you know. Jane and Miss White have lived in the same faculty house for a year. We witnessed their housekeeping secrets when they gave a charming party for Martie when she was here at Easter time. It is nice to have Miss White within reach, and she does have awfully nice parties.

Kay Keck is still teaching in Greensburg and has just served a term as secretary of the College Club there. She visited Estelle in New York and had a glimpse of the Class Baby.

Kate is still teaching in Aspinwall. She reports a wonderful experience last summer when she stayed at a permanent camp in Yellowstone Park. Her stories are rather wild but as we have never been there we cannot tell how fierce the bears really were.

Ada Spriggs has just been "loafing at home" since February first, but she just wears herself out trying to put in the time. This is a terrible state of affairs. Why doesn't she run down to Pittsburgh and pay a few visits?

Louise and Aline complete our list of teachers, but they are so frivolous that we despair of their ever becoming settled in the profession. Last summer they dashed out to California for a little visit and now Louise has bought an automobile and is going to tour the Berkshires with several other adventurous souls. We are of the opinion that Louise needs a guardian, some one strong and domineering, don't you know.

And now we come to the babies—their mothers cease to count. We have seen pictures of Martha's Sammy and he certainly looks jolly. Martha has the responsibilities of a parish on her shoulders so she keeps rather busy. Our first boy, Roy, Jr., is now two and one-half years old and performs beautifully in public.

Ruth has been elected Decade president and we are sure she will fill the office nobly. Earl Crawford is now a year and a half and exhibits signs of intelligence except in the matter of oral diction. His hair still remains red and he is as chubby as he can possibly be without bursting his skin.

And then the real Class Baby! Louise and Kay have seen her and report that she is quite up to all the expectations of the Class. Marian Telle will make her Pittsburgh debut some time in May, so we will be able to judge for ourselves. At any rate, Estelle has saved the day and we have a real class baby at last.

ELIZABETH McC. CRAWFORD.

Class of 1918

Charlotte Hunker Hays sends us word of the birth of her little daughter, Betty, December 1, 1920, and says she is busy keeping house. Indirectly, we have learned of the birth of Elinor Goldsmit Hast's son, David, September 12, 1920. Esther Evans is teaching in the Latimer Junior High School. From Kamala Cornelius comes the following very interesting letter:

ALUMNAE RECORDER

A. B. M. Girls' High School,
Nellore, South India.
3rd April, 1921.

To the Members of the Alumnae Association of Pennsylvania College for Women.

Dear friends: ,

How quickly the years roll away. I cannot imagine that I have been out of college three years. When I left college, I felt dreadful to enter the world to undertake new responsibilities. I felt quite helpless like a fish out of water; but let me tell you that, I do not feel that way now. I think that this life is so interesting as here we have a chance to make use of the things we studied in college. We are able to put into practice what we got in college. I am trying to use every bit of my experience here in India.

I congratulate the girls, (my classmates), who entered married life and are happy but I congratulate myself many times that I have been allowed to live single for sometime yet, as I really feel that I can do more as a "Teacher", than as a "Mrs." The married folks may not agree with me, but I am sure I could not have done much for these poor girls if I had been married.

Well, I must tell you in what ways I am trying to use my college course here in India. I am teaching in an American Baptist Mission Girls' High School, in Nellore. I teach just the high school classes in English, Zoology, Botany, Chemistry, Physiology, and First Aid. I have been teaching here for two years and I have enjoyed working among these poorer classes of people more than in rich schools.

Most of the girls come from villages and very poor homes; and therefore, outside my class work, I do some Social Service work among these girls. I tell them that they must bring changes in their own homes when they return to their villages. I show them how to be tidy and clean; how to take care of children, homes, their villages and how to lead a clean life, physically, and morally.

In order to help these girls in the above things, I have started in this school, a Girl Guide Movement, which is the same as the Girl Scouts in U. S. A. I am the first person to start this sort of work in this town, and I began in our school. Of course, it was very hard for me to start a company without funds. But when we try to work for God, He certainly sends His help immediately. May His name be praised.

I started the company with 27 Recruits, who became Guides after taking their test in September. I also passed my test and became a Captain. Along our drill, guide lessons and other things, we made money by making sweets, curries and selling vegetables from our Guide vegetable garden. With this money we got our equipment; besides this, we were also getting ready for a play called the "Land of the Blue Flower". We needed a great deal of money as all of us had to go to Madras for a big Guide Rally, which the Governor of Madras was going to inspect.

We gave the play in November, 1920 and it was a great success. People crowded in large numbers, and there was not even places for people to stand; we had to order girls not to sell any more tickets, as we did not have room for them. Everyone enjoyed it very much and told us that it was the best play that they had ever seen in Nellore. We made a large sum of money which was more than twice the amount we needed to take us to Madras. We realized Rs. 125, which is quite a large sum of money in India.

I wished very much that Miss Kerst had been here at that time to enjoy the play. I made use of her training here in India. This was the first play I ever tried in teaching and as it was successful, I felt very happy but I thanked God as it was He who helped me in this great effort.

When all the different companies went to Madras, each company had to demonstrate something and my Guides did "Toy making" which the Governor saw and was very much pleased with our demonstration.

The Guide Movement has brought a great many changes in the school life. Honour system has been established in school and they are cleaner and always ready to help one another. It is a splendid thing for every school to have a Guide movement in India, and I hope that this sort of work will be taken in many schools.

My mother and sister have left Nellore, and are about 130 miles away from me in Ellore. I am living in the school now, but as I do not find it convenient to live here alone, I have resigned. I am so sorry to leave this new Guide work, but I am very happy as I am handing the work to a very able American lady, Miss Jones, and therefore, I do not worry about it.

I think that I have given you a long account of my work. Now, let me wish you all every success in whatever you are doing for the Lord. God has blessed me in many ways this year in my work and may all glory and honour be to His name.

With sincere greetings, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

KAMALA CORNELIUS, '18.

Class of 1919

Martha Brownlee's marriage to Mr. John Bovard was an event of last October and since then Martha has been busy keeping house in Farrell, Pa.

Marjorie Errett and Mary Crawford are busy in the business world. Marjorie as secretary to Mr. J. D. Lyon, and Mary in one of the offices of the P. and L. E. railroad. Augusta Rogers furnishes a business address but does not enlighten us as to the nature of her occupation.

Secretary's Report

The Annual June meeting of the Alumnae Association of Pennsylvania College for Women was held in the parlors of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church on June 7, 1920.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved.

The Treasurer's report was accepted as rendered.

Owing to the length and interest of the program a motion was made and carried that all reports which were published in the Recorder, be omitted.

Mrs. Spencer reported for the Jubilee Committee. A few details were given in addition to the published report and most entertaining comments were made on the preparation for Anniversary week.

Miss Steele, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, reported a total fund raised of $2280.64. The work of this committee had been most comprehensive.

The report of the Committee on Associate Members was given by Miss Blair. The committee had secured addresses of 250 students ineligible as associate members but interested in college affairs. Thirty-seven new associate members had been received, making a total of seventy-five.

Mrs. Lloyd reported for the Banquet Committee. Mrs. O'Neil, of the Historical Committee, reported that the results of their work were on exhibition at the College.

Miss Reinicke reported for Miss Wilson on the luncheon committee.

The amendment to the constitution, Article 4, Section 1, previously read to the Association, was voted upon and carried.

A renewal of pledge cards was asked for by the Treasurer, who also announced a sale of tickets for the dance after the banquet.

A motion made by Mrs. John Irvin to the effect that the Jubilee committee convey to all outside friends who assisted in the Anniversary celebration, the cordial thanks of the Alumnae Association, was carried.

Miss Jeffrey gave the report of the Recorder Board, presenting difficulties of the board and urging greater precision in sending in material.

Report on Pageant tickets was read by Mrs. McGinnity for Mrs. Houston.

The President of the Association, Mrs. Pardee, welcomed the Class of 1920 in a cordial address.

Dean Root addressed the Association, conveying a greeting from the College. She reported on the work of the College; most of the time had been devoted to the establishment of Student Government. The honor system had been adopted, being on trial for one semester. So far it had been eminently successful. The lectures had been varied and interesting. The lecture fund from the Alumnae Association, though not large, had provided much that was excellent.

Mrs. Pardee then delivered the address to the Association.

Miss Dorothy Minor, '18, welcomed the Class of 1920, her sister class, with fitting remarks.

Miss Willard Crane, president of the 1920 class, responded.

Miss Jennie Wallace, '75, spoke in a most charming and interesting manner on the "Beginnings of the College."

Mrs. Armstrong, '88, spoke on "Women Presidents." Miss Pelletreau and Miss De Vore.

Drs. Martin and Lindsay were paid fitting tributes by Mrs. Walter McLean, 1910.

A former teacher, Miss Alice Skilton, gave a talk expressing her interest in the past, present, and future of the College.

Another former teacher, Miss Means, recalled many interesting memories of the College.

Miss Martha Crandall, '17, spoke on "The Present."

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Dr. Acheson, President of the College, addressed the Association on "the future of the College, its enlargement, and a possible uniting with Beaver College". This combined institution would be incorporated as an evangelical Christian college, its scope would be unlimited as no other institution of its kind existed in this section.

After Dr. Acheson's remarks, the report of the nominating committee was given by Miss Bair and accepted on motion. The secretary was instructed to cast the ballot for the following officers:

President.....	Mrs. J. H. McGinnity, '07
Vice President.....	Mrs. John M. Phillips, '03

Miss McCague moved that the Alumnae endorse the action of Dr. Acheson on the contemplated merger with Beaver College.

The meeting adjourned on motion.

A most enjoyable social time followed, the number of members present being the largest ever recorded.

MABEL C. BAIRD, Secretary.

The regular fall meeting of the Alumnae Association was held at the College November 6th, 1920.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Miss Renshaw, of the Scholarship Committee, reported nothing new since June. A few juniors and one sophomore were receiving benefit from the scholarship fund.

Mrs. Truxal, the treasurer, gave her report, which was accepted.

Mrs. Spencer gave the following final report of the Jubilee Committee:

The committee met as usual the Monday following the celebration, (June 14th) to hear the reports of the various subcommittees; and on July 7th in conjunction with the Executive Committee of the Alumnae Association to arrange for meeting the deficit, for in spite of all efforts put forth in behalf of the sale of the Pageant seats, the income from this was only a little over half of what it might have been.

The Ways and Means Committee—Miss Helen Steele, chairman, had no report.

Committee on address Former Students reported no expenses and a list of perhaps two hundred names still unlocated.

Historical Committee—Mrs. John O'Neil, chairman, reported no deficit and about 200 loaned articles the most interesting of which were probably the photographs.

Banquet Committee—Mrs. John W. Lloyd, chairman, reported no deficit, and over three hundred in attendance at the banquet.

Luncheon Committee—Miss Florence Wilson and Mrs. Leora Lewis Lambie, chairmen of the Decade club, served luncheon one day only, Wednesday, June 9th. They had the unique pleasure of reporting a profit of $13.25.

Mrs. Edna McKee Houston, chairman sale of tickets for Pageant, reported total receipts as $8990.22.

We also wish to report that in accordance with the instructions of the Alumnae Association, notes of thanks and appreciation were sent to 39 different firms, newspapers, and individuals.

MARY A. SPENCER,

A letter from Miss Brownson was read telling of the film of the pageant, presented by her and Miss Kerst. This film was made by the Crusader Film Corporation. Suggestions were offered as to its use.

A motion was made and carried that a letter be written to Miss Brownson, expressing the appreciation of the Alumnae for such interest.

The President announced the appointment of Mrs. Coyle as Press Agent.

Miss Carpenter presented the subject of forming P. C. W. Clubs in different towns and localities. A motion was carried that the president appoint a committee to take up the question.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The President suggested that the Alumnae have some other meetings during the year in addition to the two regular business meetings.

After discussion, a motion was made that a committee be appointed to arrange such meetings and to notify the members of the Association. Carried.

The committee on associate members was commended highly for their industry in looking up new associate members.

Miss Sadler reported for the lecture committee and also offered resignation as chairman of committee.

The report was accepted on motion; also the resignation with great regret.

A motion was carried that a new Lecture Committee be appointed.

Dean Root gave some interesting items about the College. She spoke of the large enrollment, the activities, etc., and asked that a committee be appointed from the Alumnae to arrange for a greater participation of the Alumnae in Commencement.

Dr. Acheson addressed the meeting. He spoke of the negotiations with Beaver College. After explaining fully and clearly the method of procedure, he announced that the Board of Trustees after mature consideration had decided ~~to~~ drop the matter entirely.

The President of the Alumnae Association expressed the opinion that the Alumnae of P. C. W. would stand back of Dr. Acheson and the trustees in whatever they did.

On suggestion, a motion was carried that a committee be appointed by the President to form a resolution to express formally the willingness of the association to back Dr. Acheson and the Board of Trustees in their action, this resolution to be presented to Dr. Acheson.

An open discussion of the site and an expression of the wishes of the Alumnae followed.

A standing vote was taken to indicate that the Alumnae would stand behind the President and Trustees in whatever action they took as to the location of the college.

During the social hour which followed, the meeting was again called to order to consider the advisability of having a theatre benefit to raise money for the deficit in the Jubilee report.

It was moved and seconded that a committee be appointed to investigate, and if considered advisable, to plan for such a benefit. Carried.

Meeting adjourned.

MABEL C. BAIRD, Secretary.

The first social meeting under the auspices of the Social Committee appointed after the November meeting, was held at the College Club, Monday evening, December sixth, 1920.

Interesting features had been prepared by the committee and very delicious refreshments were served.

It was moved that the Alumnae Association hold a benefit performance of Abraham Lincoln, at the Nixon Theatre, Monday evening, January 17th, 1921. Carried.

After further discussion of ways and means for securing money the meeting adjourned.

MABEL BAIRD, Secretary.

The second social meeting was a luncheon at the Chatham Hotel February twenty-sixth.

About one hundred Alumnae were present. After an excellent luncheon, a short business meeting was held.

Dr. Acheson spoke of the new developments regarding the Beaver merger.

The Benefit Committee reported the net sum of almost $2400 from the performance.

The work of this committee was lauded highly.

A motion was carried to have a rummage sale sometime in March.

Another motion was made that the Alumnae Association send a resolution to the President and Trustees, recommending that they go forward with all speed possible towards new work of the College.

At a meeting of the Advisory Board of the Alumnae Association, held at Joseph Horne's store, April 13th, 1921, a motion was carried empowering the treasurer, Mrs. Truxal, to return all money lent to the College by the various members of the Association, for defraying expenses of the pageant.

MABEL C. BAIRD, Secretary.

AUDITOR'S REPORT

May 7, 1921.

Have audited receipts and disbursements of the Treasurer, Helen Steele Truxal and found the same to be correct.

EDNA McK. HOUSTON.

Helen E. Pelletreau Scholarship Committee

A postcard received a few days ago from one of the editors of the Recorder reminded me that it was again time to send in a report for the Alumnae Recorder from the Scholarship Committee. I feel that I have a report well worth giving this year. We are graduating four of our five students and the fifth is a junior expecting to graduate in 1922. Three of these students have taken the four year course at the P. C. W. and two of them have been students in the College for two years, so you see these girls are all products, so to speak, of our own College and all going forth into the world inculcated with the high standards taught and upheld by the Penna. College for Women, and well equipped with a College education fitting them to take their places in the world in any capacity in which they may be called, either in making their own living, or as home makers. We are proud of these young women, for they have all done excellent work, both in their classes and in the student activity life of the College. They stand high in their class marks, and are spoken well of by the College faculty, and are a credit to the College in every way, surely we can feel that our Scholarship Fund is doing a fine thing by helping a little in the education of such worthy students. We will take great pleasure in meeting "our girls" in June and give them a hearty welcome into our Alumnae Association. Next year we will be able to help some new scholarship girls, but we will be linked with the past by "our Senior" student, who expects to continue her college course, graduating in June 1922. To her we extend our congratulations for good college work done in the past two years, and our best wishes for her success during the coming year.

REBECCA F. RENSHAW,
Chairman of the Scholarship Committee.

Kohman, '16. Then the committee will be able to give Miss Root the money the first thing in the fall. This will make it much easier for Miss Root.

Student Government

This year the aim of the Student Government Board has been to strengthen the "Honor System" as much as possible. The board has held session every other Thursday, at which time the work of the two weeks before was checked up, and the order of business for the Friday meeting of the student body planned.

The "Color Day" celebration was an impressive occasion as usual. Also the Hallowe'en party was managed with much success by a very competent committee. However, everyone will testify that the Mid-Year dance was the crowning social event of the year.

The Association was represented at the annual Conference of Women's Intercollegiate Association for Student Government. There will also be a delegate sent to Eaglesmere this summer.

Under the chairmanship of Miss Janet Brownlee successful campaigns have been made for the relief of poor European students, for the Chinese Relief and the Armenian Relief.

At present the spring elections are being held and the returns, so far, promise success for next year.

International Relations

The International Relations Club was reorganized this year on a new basis. The membership was limited to twenty, and we feel that this plan has proved more successful. As 1920 was presidential election year, the club aroused much enthusiasm in a Political Rally at the first open meeting in the fall. The Club has studied such subjects as the Russian situation and the Mexican question. The International Relations Institute, which furnishes us with our material, has provided us with two very entertaining and instructive lecturers, Baron Korf and Prof. Kimball of Smith College.

We tried to include a few good times in our schedule for the year. Last fall we tramped several miles beyond Aspinwall and cooked our supper out in the open. And just now we are planning another.

EDITH PEW.

Sorosis

A more newsy magazine, and one that would appear oftener was our goal this year. The first was as easy as the second was difficult, for the cost of printing continued to soar. Accordingly we were forced to limit the number to our usual four issues.

Nevertheless, our Literary Department was well supported. Among the contributions of interest and merit are those of Mary Brown, '23. "The Gift" a short story, appearing in the first issue, and "The Lost Youth," a one act play in the third issue are her work. The Freshmen, too, have been special supporters. In the second issue under "Freshmen Genius" appear examples of their ability.

Not in the usual order of things, a Rummage Sale was held for the benefit of the Sorosis which proved quite a success. Since the Year Book has been given up this year another task has fallen our lot. Now we are hoping to make this last issue a Senior number that shall worthily replace it as far as possible.

The Open Forum established last year has aroused much interest, but has not been taken advantage of nearly so much as we had hoped.

Nothing is so strong as the faith in the future that is born of enthusiasm. Next year the newly instituted departments will be a little older and we hope a little stronger.

Dramatic Club

Dramatic Club has been quite lively and enjoyable this year, including, among other good times, several trips behind the scenes of the larger theaters, gay theater-parties, and up-to-the-minute programs at all our meetings. We have studied several one act plays and presented these same plays, coached, costumed, and cast by the girls themselves, in which our rising young Thespians demonstrated their skill in more ways than one, likewise gaining much practical benefit. At Christmas time, through the management of the children's play, "Alice in Wonderland," the Seniors made a little money to be used to defray the expenses of their play in June. Altogether our year has been one of mutual pleasure and benefit and we feel that all we need now is an opportunity to make use of all we have learned.

FRANCES A. FREDERICK, '21.

Science Club

Membership in the Science Club is limited to girls taking advanced courses in the department.

Roll call is answered by a current event. After this, there is a formal program. Some of the interesting subjects that were discussed are "The Making of Perfume in the Land and Laboratory," "The Heliostat," "The Practical Use of War Chemistry," "The Manufacture of the Precious Gems," and "Printers' Ink."

The next question to be taken up will be the dye industry.

One thing more, we must not forget the "good eats" that greet us at the conclusion of our meetings.

S. E. E., '21.

Athletic Activities

College athletics continue to be of increasing interest to the P. C. W. girls. The participants in the tennis tournament were very evenly matched and played before enthusiastic audiences. The Hockey season ended with the Senior-Junior game. After a closely contested game on a muddy field the Juniors were hailed as champions of the season.

Varsity Basketball games were done away with this year and consequently, the class spirit and enthusiasm which we have long desired to create, was successfully aroused. Large crowds attended every game, class songs of every variety were sung, decorations added to the beauty of the "field of battle," and original stunts kept up the interest between halves. The Juniors again were victors, defeating the Freshmen in the championship game. "To the victor belong the spoils." The Junior team received the "spoils" in the form of a banquet given at the Schenley Hotel.

Spring has come and everybody is looking forward to the baseball games, the tennis tournament, and most of all, the field meet. If the weather permits, we expect to have the enthusiasm and interest in the spring activities equal to that manifested during the year.

Glee Club

The Glee Club has been most active and successful this year under the excellent supervision of Mrs. Rockwell as director and Miss Williams as accompanist.

In addition to the numerous times the Club is called upon at school, outside invitations were accepted to sing at the Student Vespers of the First Baptist Church, evening services of the Sixth, Shadyside and Shady Avenue Presbyterian Churches.

An interesting program was given at the annual joint concert of our musical clubs with Carnegie Tech. A delightful and charming performance of the "Frolic of the Toys" was given March 23, which proved most successful. The proceeds, amounting to almost one hundred dollars, were sent to the Chinese Famine Relief Fund.

The Club has had a pleasant and happy, as well as profitable year, and we feel that with the same cooperation of director and students, we can look forward to great achievements in the future.

Mandolin Club

The Mandolin Club, although not fully organized until after Thanksgiving, has had a very pleasant season under the direction of Mr. E. N. Bilbie. It consisted this year of twelve members. Regular rehearsals were held every Monday morning. The chief event of the year was the concert with Carnegie Tech Musical Clubs. The total expenses of the club are taken care of by the sale of chocolate, which has been especially successful this year. The club closed the season with a luncheon, the second week in May.

The Young Women's Christian Association

The Y. W. C. A. had a membership of 105 this past college year. The year opened with a "Get Acquainted Party" the first week of school, and that same morning each Freshman and new student received a flower from the Association. The first week of the second semester a party was held in Woodland Hall for the Freshmen and new students.

Meetings were held regularly every Wednesday morning with an average attendance of 70, led by various girls, several faculty members, and outside speakers, among whom were Miss Richards and Miss Adair from East Central Field and Miss Ley, a student volunteer. Perhaps the most interesting were the class meetings.

Bible study classes were conducted during the year in both Berry Hall and Woodland Hall. In December $24.00 was raised by voluntary contributions, and a basket ball and baseball were purchased and sent to Lillian McHenry, who sailed this year as a missionary to Persia. She was a former P. C. W. girl. At Christmas time a large box of books, toys and handkerchiefs was packed and sent to Iron River Mission, Michigan. Thirty-five dollars was also contributed to Madras College, India.

P. C. W. was represented at the Conference of Undergraduate Representatives, which met at Philadelphia in November. Expenses during the year were met by the proceeds from sandwich sales and candy sales held every Thursday morning during the first semester. Funds were raised for our Eaglesmere delegation through the sale of crackers during the second semester, and in April a circus was held in the Gymnasium for the same benefit.

Prize Song—Jubilee Contest, 1921

P. C. W. Weaving Song.

We are the thread spun in thy mill,
O, Alma Mater, cherished, dear,
And through life's warp, for good or ill
The shuttles bear us year by year.
From formless flax thou drew each strand
And duty, honor, love entwined
Into the thread with which thou planned
To weave true service to mankind.

CHORUS

Spin on, spin on, spin firm and true;
Nor knot nor blemish mar the thread.
The patterns woven by the new
Must worthy be of those ahead.
What colors rich, what texture fine
Our big or little lives achieve,
The glory's thine, O College Mine,
Whose fair design we weave,
We weave,
We weave.

We are the thread drawn from thy doors
In fifty (many) year's unbroken line;
One end has reached the starry shores,
The other, forming, still is thine.
Hold hands, O sisters, far and near,
Hold hands and thrill to feel the bond
Stretching through time from year to year
And reaching e'en to those beyond.

CHORUS

ALUMNAE RECORDER

June, 1922

Members of the Class of 1922:—

I have the honor this afternoon of being the one to welcome you into the Alumnae Association of the Pennsylvania College for Women. The last few weeks have been very busy ones for you,—so full of work, and happiness, and pleasant excitement that you have probably had little time and less inclination to wonder what would happen after the graduation day was over. I can imagine one of the things you are looking forward to is a week of uninterrupted rest and sleep. Often have we all felt so after a strenuous round of pleasure and work. And doubtless there are many other things that you are planning as well. But we want to impress upon you the fact that we are one of the things that happen to you after graduation.

You are now a part of our organization, and hereafter you will identify yourselves with Pennsylvania College through its Alumnae Association. We have already made up our minds to receive you with very open pleasure and joy, and we hope that you have the same feeling toward us. We have all spent our four years at P. C. W., and we are now banded together to be of some service to her in the future. May you join us in this!

Fellow Members of the Alumnae Association:—

It is, of course, known to you all that it is the custom of this assembled body, for the President of the Alumnae Association to make a speech. It is one of the traditions of the institution, and as such we all feel that it must be adhered to, no matter how much we may be bored or how late the hour. From the point of view of the audience, this custom is quite bad enough, but from the point of view of the President it is worse. For there is this accompanying tradition—that the said speech shall be printed in the Alumnae Recorder.

Now to make a speech is woe enough for any mortal, but it is certainly worse when the speech to be delivered in the middle of June, must be written in the middle of March. Can you imagine any human being knowing in March what she wants to say in June? But the editor of the Recorder is insistent and persistent, and she tells you upon every occasion and ends each telephone with the warning that you must have your article ready for the Recorder by such a time.

You reach out frantically here and there for an inspiration, but your mind seems absolutely devoid of ideas. You ask all your P. C. W. friends for a suggestion, but they pass the matter off lightly,—apparently only glad that it is your turn and not theirs.

Someone more sympathetic than the others says, "Talk about our College in the past". But our history has been reviewed often by those who know more about it than I do. Some one else says, "Try evolution, you're certain to be up to date". The subject would no doubt, be sufficiently up to date, but would it be safe? And another says "Endowment".

There, have we hit upon the magic stone at last? Endowment! The more I consider it, the more I fancy the subject, for the word has become a familiar one in the last few months.

There is not a College in the land but needs a larger endowment than it formerly had, no matter how large that endowment may have been. We need hardly be told how expenses have increased in all walks of life. Most of us know this by sad experience. And the Colleges have not escaped this high tide. But, almost without exception, they are squaring their shoulders to the storm and bravely pushing forward.

As with others, so with us. We are steadily growing; and a larger number of students means increased responsibility; and increased responsibility means greater expense in all fields. If we want the work to increase, and grow, and expand, as of course we all do, it is not then a question of "we should increase our endowment", but it is rather a simple statement of the fact that "we must immediately make our endowment more adequate."

Pennsylvania College for Women is an old Pittsburgh

institution and as such we feel that it deserves the support of Pittsburghers. Most of the old families of Pittsburgh have sent a daughter to P. C. W., and have enjoyed the learning and culture and refinement that she gained there. Pennsylvania College is today turning out from her halls some of Pittsburgh's most useful women in the home, in professional life, in charitable circles, in business, and in industry. And so we feel that it is not only her traditions and usefulness in the past that entitle her to support, but also the fact that today, when the problems of the world seem more complex than ever before, and when there is such great need of trained minds and trained hearts, she is sending out each year a small but picked band of young women, who will look these difficulties squarely in the face, and help to settle them.

We are counting on Pittsburgh to do its part, and we believe it will. But after all it is the Alumnae body of Pennsylvania College that can and must do most for her. It is the P. C. W. graduates who represent the College to the city, and who must present her cause by their own keen and enthusiastic interest. It is quite natural that those outside our own circle should gauge their interest somewhat by the interest of the Alumnae body itself. We may not have the great means to endow P. C. W., but we certainly have an inside knowledge of her value that many others do not have. It is distinctly "up to us" to show this value to those who have the means to make us assured that the College shall go on with her useful work.

To some of us who have been thinking much of endowment lately, it is a mystery why some of our girls take so little interest in such a campaign. We have all received our education at P. C. W. We are indebted to her for our all round view of life and its opportunities. Many of her graduates have been enabled to make a living for themselves and others through the training received there. We are all indebted to her for a training in general culture and refinement. And we are surely all intelligent enough to know that what was paid for our tuition while in College did not by any means pay the expense incurred in the training given us. The small tuition paid in any College does not pay for the teaching and equipment at the service of the students.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

We certainly all realize this. I believe every College student of any College owes that College something either in money or definite service after her graduation. This is the only way that she can feel that she has repaid the College for her opportunity. Sometimes I think that we do not say enough about this. When we are through College we go out into the busy world and take our places, and too soon forget how it came about that we were enabled to fill those positions in the world.

We make no exception here, but say unreservedly that every girl who has enjoyed the privilege of a college education owes a gift of service or money to that institution in the future.

The gifts of service count for much, for I hold that in any walk of life, be it church, school, or any other, the gift of willing and wholehearted service should be counted quite as much a contribution as any other gift. And we need these gifts of interest and service. But there are probably very few of our number, who cannot also make a contribution of money,—some larger than others, of course.

We have known for two or three years that this endowment must come, and that it was quite necessary to our existence. How many of us, I wonder, have been thinking of it? How many of us have been saving for it? How many of us have been making definite plans to have our share in it? The only excuse any girl can have for not planning ahead for it, is surely the fact that she has such means that she doesn't need to plan in order to make her gift. It would be hard to believe that there is a P. C. W. girl who does not want a share in this, or who is not interested. We feel sure that if the cause and need are fully understood, there will be a general rallying to the purple and white flag. You may not be able to give a thousand dollars yourself, but a group of you may be able to give a thousand. My plea is not for any specific amount, but it is only that every P. C. W. girl should plan definitely for her endowment gift. We call it a gift but in reality it is something we owe. If we have not planned before, let us begin now to plan for our share. There is no reason why the endowment should take any of us by surprise.

Let us remember that our P. C. W. training is the ladder by which we started to climb, and let us not, when we have once attained the upmost round, turn our backs, look in the clouds, and scorn the modest means by which we began our ascent.

Dean Root's Message

September and June! Two months which are much nearer together than the calendar indicates. At least the time is so short that we can never bring to completion by June the plans of September. Many times this is discouraging and yet as we look back over these nine months we cannot fail to realize that there has been real progress, although in some cases the results may be intangible.

On the side of the strictly academic, the most important changes have come from the inauguration of the new group system which is more fully explained elsewhere in this issue. This seems to be working exceedingly well. We are now enabled to place special emphasis on the needs of the individual student and by the organization of the faculty into the Board of Admission, the Advisory Board and the Group Advisers, we can be of so much greater assistance to the students in their choice of courses.

The outstanding feature of our lecture course was the Alumnae Lecture in December, when Miss Helen Fraser of London spoke on "Some Personalities in British Politics." In April, Miss Helen Bennett, the director of the Collegiate Bureau of Occupations in Chicago, conducted a Vocational Conference. Everything that the Alumnae can contribute to the lecture fund is sincerely appreciated and meets a real need. I hope that sometime we may be able to have an alumnae lecture each semester.

Perhaps the most gratifying progress has been made along the lines of student government and student organization. The greater the responsibility laid upon them the more eagerly do they accept it. There has been a steady and consistent development which argues well for the future.

Everywhere I go I am impressed by the work being done by our students and alumnae. Those who are successful teachers are doing a splendid piece of work for the college in sending to us the right type of girl. That is a service which is invaluable and of which we are reaping the benefit daily.

Dr. Acheson's Message

Alumnae Association, Pennsylvania College for Women:

It seems hardly possible that it is time again for the President's annual letter. That such is the case, however, I am reminded by your editor who is justifiably insistent that I do not hold up "copy."

It is a great pleasure for me to report that the college with respect to its enrollment and academic advancement is in a most happy and prosperous condition. The outlook for next year in regard to students is most encouraging. After the annual drawing for rooms is held, I doubt if there will be many vacancies for the ensuing year; and inquiries and applications already in hand will practically take care of these vacancies. If we had a new dormitory immediately available, I believe that it could be filled for the Fall term. The new curriculum with its group system has proved very satisfactory during this first year of operation. Changes were necessary in certain details, but in the main the scheme as originally devised has proved entirely feasible. We are planning for the ensuing year a department of Religious Education that will be outstanding in its attractiveness and utility. The demand for trained church leadership has never been more insistent than it is today. The college, in my judgment, can make no finer contribution to the community than to operate a department of this character based on a sound, scholarly foundation and with an evangelical spirit. With the return of normal business conditions our thoughts are directed to the question of the proposed campaign for the enlargement and endowment of the college. The Board at an early meeting will take action setting a date for the inauguration of these plans. Due announcement will, of course, be made to the Alumnae Association touching this matter and urging cordial cooperation therewith. Of the eagerness and willingness of the Alumnae to advance the college in every way, I entertain no doubts, as there has been abundant evidence shown on numberless occasion of such a spirit. The college has passed through a very critical period, but the outlook for the future was never brighter and I am firm in my conviction that the plans for the development of a larger and a better P. C. W. can be and will be consummated at no very distant date.

With cordial best wishes to the Association and with keen appreciation of its support and cooperation with the present administration, I am,

Sincerely yours,

John C. Acheson

A Glimpse of the Orient

"S. S. Wenatchee",

In the Harbor of Hongkong, China,

January 25, 1922.

My dear Recorder Editor:—

When your October letter reached me in Shanghai in early December, it seemed easy to say "yes" to your request for something for "The Recorder", because there seemed to be such oceans of time before you needed it. But it was a rash promise and I'm not certain of enough strength of character to have kept my word if something had not happened here.

The "something" is a seamen's strike and here we sit—or rather float—in what is said to be the most beautiful harbor in the world. We are not alone in our enjoyment of Hongkong and its harbor; no indeed; about 120 ships with Chinese crews have sailed comfortably in after the long journey from England or India, or the shorter journey from Japan or the Philippines, or even the river trips to China's interior, divulged their passengers or freight, and then found themselves deserted by the crew. Happy the ship which sailed with an American, a Japanese, or a Lascar crew! Some of us are quite reconciled to the delay and inconvenience if the seamen can gain their ends, for their wage scale is one to make us blush. That they have been able to hold out this long is unusual, for Chinese laborers have had little experience in concerted action and the struggle for daily existence is so terrific that many are inhibited by actual fear of starvation. Probably such a strike could not hold together in any other part of China except right here at the doors of Canton, where more independence and better conditions are found. Some even hint at a political background,—that the Cantonese government is backing the strikers, and, therefore, putting itself in a position to enforce recognition from certain shipping interests and the Hongkong authorities (English). But now we are in too deep water for ordinary mortals if we try to reason out the whys and wherefores of things political in China. Nevertheless you cannot be here long and escape a burning interest in just these things.

If I were a real writer, I should start at the beginning instead of the end of this trip! So, on the 15th day of last September we sailed out of Vancouver on the good ship "Empress of Russia", with the sun shining, the band playing, and a hydroplane now rising beautifully in the air and now swooping gracefully down on the water near the ship. Smugglers beware! That night we touched at Victoria and then began the real journey across the Pacific which ended for me when I disembarked at Yokohama September 26th. Rather contrary to custom, we landed late in the evening and I shall always remember my first glimpse of Japan—the stars shining brightly overhead after a stormy day at sea, the lights of Yokohama furnishing a welcome thru' the clear night air, and on the dock a crowd of people, some in Japanese kimono, some in foreign clothes, and here and there a kuramaya or 'ricksha man with his fairy-like lantern. But we were soon brought to earth by the tedium of pass-ports, health certificates, and customs.

Then followed about six weeks in Japan, using Tokyo as the center for the northern and eastern section and Kyoto for the southern and central section. From Tokyo it is easy to go north four or five hours to Nikko to see the Ieyasu Shrines and Iemitsu Temple, indubitably the finest of their kind and still kept in beautiful repair, in spite of the fact that they had their beginning four years before our Pilgrim

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Fathers landed in America. Ieyasu was an old Shogun or ruler of the Tokugana dynasty who had no wish to be forgotten by posterity and so ordered his son to build him a mausoleum befitting his dignity. His grandson Ihimitsu added to this and also built a magnificent and extravagantly costly mausoleum to himself, urged on by the knowledge that the competitive efforts of his daimyos, or lords, to contribute to this wonderful masterpiece would keep them impoverished and hence unable to bring about rebellion! One passes on and on from one building to another—beautifully located on the hillsides under the spreading cryptomeria trees—and one wonders at the colors, the carvings, the painted panels, and the apparently unlimited use of gold.

Also from Tokyo one can practically commute to Yokohama and there the shops fill you with desires not at all commensurate with your purse—beautiful silks, kimonas, lacquer ware, ivory, and tortoise shell. Within only an hour or so's ride from Yokohama is Kamakuro—the home of the Diabuku, or great Bronze Buddha, so often pictured in magazines, cast in 1252 and nearly fifty feet high. About forty miles on beyond Yokohama one finds some of the most beautiful of Japanese scenery—called by some the “Japanese Alps”. A very comfortable hotel there makes it a great mecca for both foreigners and Japanese, and even travellers from China, who love the trails and out-of-door life there.

A night's journey from Tokyo brings us to Kyoto, but it is such an uncomfortable night's journey! The Japanese cars have the seats running lengthwise, not across like ours are. So at night the beds are no wider than are the seats in the daytime; nor are they very long either. For the small Japanese they are probably all right; but for the by-no-means diminutive foreigner such as I, they leave much to be desired in length and width—and also in softness. Fresh air is looked upon askance and the tiny, bare dressing-room for men and women alike makes one sigh for the luxuries of a Pullman. Never mind! There are compensations; for your train-boy may happen to be a most engaging lad who desires to sit on the edge of your berth at midnight and find out whether you belong to a Russian Opera Company which got on at your station and where you are going, and may he come to see you when you are in Kobe ten days hence? I told him yes and then almost forgot about him because my friends said he was merely trying to practice his English on me. But sure enough, he turned up on the dot with his friend. Both were acting as train-boys to earn money for their education. We figured out that their visit was partly because they were lonely, partly because they wanted to know more about Christianity, and partly because the friend needed some advice about his young sister.

Once in Kyoto, it is interesting to compare it with Tokyo. Long years ago Kyoto had held the honor of being Japan's capital and is beautifully located in a valley in sight of the hills and mountains. Its population is hardly a fourth of that of Tokyo and it has a charm and leisure and a lack of commercialism which add much to its attractiveness. The royal palaces, the many temples, the making of brocades, of damascene ware, of cloisonne—all make interesting sight-seeing. From Kyoto it is only an hour's run to Osaka, the Pittsburgh of Japan; and another hour's journey beyond Osaka brings us to Kobe, a city with a very large foreign population doing a tremendous shipping business, almost as much as Yokohama—although Kobe is barely fifty years old.

Also near Kyoto is located the town of Nara, the most ancient capital of Japan—way back in 710. One cannot help but love the little town, surrounded by shadowy mountains and hills at a distance, with its temples, its Great Bell and its beautiful parks with innumerable tame deer—tame because no one has ever been allowed to harm them as they were until recently considered sacred.

While in Nara my trail crossed that of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr.,—no one more or less! I had known Mrs. Rockefeller only slightly at home but she is a member of the National Board of Y. W. C. A.—and a hard working one too. She spied my name on the register and sent me a note, asking me to help celebrate her birthday by taking dinner with them and going to see the lanterns lighted afterward. This is a very unusual thing which you are not likely to see—unless there is a big religious festival or unless you happen to be able to meet the bills for there are 1500 or more of these stone lanterns, grey with age and green with moss, about six or seven feet high, which have been placed there down through the ages by people who were grateful to the gods for some blessing. They had lighted at least two-thirds of them on both sides of the long, wide avenue leading to the temples and over them were the great spreading cryptomeria trees and still higher the stars shining brightly. It was like a hushed fairy-land, for we six were the only people within sight or sound, having left our kinama at the entrance.

I must tell you of an attempted walking trip four of us embarked upon, going a few hours by train from Yokahama and then intending to tramp the rest of that day and all the next down the coast to Atami. The weather was against us and it was raining, but nevertheless we left our suit-case and respectable clothing at a small hotel and donned tramping clothes, carrying in a furoshiki (a square cloth used for carrying any kind of bundle) the few things we needed. It was a good chance to see village life and evidently the villagers thought it a good chance to see foreigners, for they came out in the road to look us over and we usually had a few children following close behind while passing thru. However, just draw out your kodak and point it at them and they would scamper to the four winds! Some of us wore high shoes and knickers, which caused considerable comment as to whether we were men or women. Well, we tramped six or seven hours but only covered thirteen miles because of the rain and mire. But here we found a good Japanese Inn where we could spend the night. Sometime before we had shed our furoshiki by giving them into the care of the engineer of a funny, toy-like little narrow-gauge train and without check, change or question he had turned them over to the Inn and notified them of our coming. So the host and his wife came down the road with their paper umbrellas to meet us. It was an inn planned for Japanese—not foreigners—and so we followed the Japanese customs,—shoes off before entering, a bath in true Japanese style, supper of Japanese food as we sat on the floor around the little tables, and finally welcomed sleep on a mat on the floor—all of this in our little house set apart by the Inn for us, with a Japanese maid always at hand. Next morning our host told us the roads were impassable and we had to return by train and give up the rest of our tramp.

And now it is time to leave Japan and begin the long journey thro Korea to China. From Kobe a long and beautiful day's travel brings you to Shimoneseki where you take a boat to Fusan, the Korean port, an all night's journey. Seoul, the capital, is the goal of the next day's travel and rather a depressing day it is as you see the villages of mud huts clustered around a hillside and the fearfully hard labor of women and children in the fields. And beyond Seoul, still another day and night must be given to travel before Korea is left behind and Manchuria is reached. When you get out on the station platform at Mukden at 6 A. M. in the bitterest cold you have ever experienced (and this is only early November) you are glad you have only allowed one day for that city. When I took the train that night for Tientsin, I discovered I was in good company, for Lord Northcliffe and his party were aboard and at important stops newspapermen came on for interviews with the famous journalist. My companion in the compartment was a young and attractive Russian woman who had "refugeed" herself out of Russia into America and then to Manchuria and now to Tientsin. There are many, many Russian refugees in all the port cities of China. We reached Tientsin late the next afternoon and after a day or two there I went on to Peking—that Mecca of all tourists—for nearly three weeks. This travel in North China brought me my first glimpse of something I had always read of—the graves of China. In one sense, all China is a cemetery, for everywhere you find these round mounds, some only a few feet high, some fifteen or twenty feet high; some isolated, some in small groups; some by the hundreds as far as you can see—wherever the priests have decided the ground is propitious.

You can learn far more from books about Peking that I can ever tell you; and it makes interesting reading. Here was the Boxer trouble in the days of the old Empress Dowager and many of us are old enough to recall the newspaper accounts of that. Read Bland & Backhouse "Empress Dowager" and then go outside the city and spend a day in the deserted Summer Palace with a couple of friends, your kodak, and your little lunch-basket. And then within the city, pass thro' walls within walls; and put in a morning at the Forbidden City, appreciating all the while that it is only within very recent years that foreigners were even permitted therein.

And then, some afternoon take rickshas out to the Temple and Altar of Heaven. True, these places are not kept up; the grass grows between the flagstones; the color grows dimmer; decay sets in; but all this only lends atmosphere and you find yourself eagerly trying to feel for the thoughts of those who have conceived all this.

If you are a shopper or a bargain-hunter, you will meet your Waterloo in Peking. Mr. Tai (only pronounce it Dye) will bow you into his little shop and bow you out just as cordially, even if you buy only a few of his pendants or neck-pieces—long or short, white or green jade, turquoise matrix, amber, glass or what-not. I lived with friends in a real Chinese house while there, and time and again we would come out after lunch to find one or more Chinese men with their bundles of wares—some with brass, or linen, or embroideries; others with Mandarin coats or tapestries. They would spread them out on the floor in the house or on the stone flags of the court, and squat beside them; we would begin by standing rather indifferently to one side but we always ended by sitting right down on the floor or the stone flags, lost to the world and buried in these treasures. Most of the prices are fairly well fixed, but if you really want the fun of bargaining, go to one of the out-door fairs and walk indifferently around. If you covet something, be sure not to show enthusiasm about it but ask the price of something else, and then come back to your treasure. He may tell you it is worth five dollars—and cheap at that. You look right at him and laugh and his good humor always rises to the fore and he laughs with you, and offers it to you for three or four dollars. But you are indifferent and suggest that you might give him seventy or eighty cents,—and then you both laugh again. Finally you start to walk off, telling him you will give him ninety cents, “last price”. As you walk on you feel a tug at your sleeve; he has followed you. “One dollar half” says he but you firmly refuse. You go a little further, another tug at your elbow and he is again with you; this time “All right, all right; can do; your price”. You pay your ninety cents, pocket your “treasure”, and both part with smiles and thank-yous and perfect satisfaction. It is quite possible that that was twenty cents more than he really expected, but he loves the game as much as you do.

But no more about Peking; and anyway it is not all happy and rosy. There are Peking beggars—professional and otherwise—who will follow you for blocks. There is Peking dust which will give you fearful colds. There is the neglected old Lama Temple with its dreadful looking priests, which fills you with gloom and despair. And finally, there is always the corrupt government with its officials so much keener for bribes and “squeeze” than for the people’s needs. Those things are all there and must be reckoned with.

From Peking one must travel south two days and a night to reach Shanghai—that city in China which belongs more to foreigners than to the Chinese because of so many concessions. I lived in a house which might fittingly have been set down in Paris or London, and walked in a park from which Chinese are excluded. The hotels and stores too might have fitted in almost any other city—in fact, it is an international city set down in China. True, there is the native city, with its narrow passages, its beggars, its Chinese shops for food, hot water, clothes, and odds and ends to catch the eye of the foreign tourist. Here again, as in the Peking fair, your only means of purchase is the bargaining method. One meets many interesting people from all countries in Shanghai and it is the center of many national movements which truly have China’s interests at heart.

It is possible to take a boat for Hongkong and Canton which travels via the Philippines and this we did, thus including four days in Manilla while the ship is loading up. We found it most interesting and longed for more time in spite of the awful January heat! And here we are back again in Hongkong Harbor—near Canton. Hongkong itself is just a British settlement on the island, land given to Great Britain by China. Canton is typically Chinese and foreigners have practically no place there. It is true that vast numbers of the Cantonese have worked, traveled and studied in America and they are the most modern “up and coming” Chinese in China. Good roads are being built, the old narrow alleys are giving way to broad streets, good buildings are going up, and one sees many modern things on all sides. And yet, truthfully speaking, these are the “rebels” of China under Dr. Sun Yat Sun and how matters will ever be adjusted between the northern and southern governments of China—and incidentally the people of China—is still in the pages of future history not yet turned over.

And now it looks as though we could sail tomorrow—six days late—because we have an American crew. Meanwhile I have changed my passage to make sure of sailing tomorrow and shall land in Seattle February 14th, instead of San Francisco, and thereby miss Annie Montgomery Young, '02, in Honolulu, which is a real disappointment.

A word to the wise!—If any of you feel the need of a mental somersault, or need courage to face your next birthday, or your twentieth re-union, or can't stand it another minute to do just what you have been doing for years, just ask your husband or your babies or your Board for a short leave of absence and run over to the Orient—even if you have to sell some Liberty bonds or draw on your savings account. It will do the trick and you won't be sorry!

I wonder if I can make Pittsburgh for the 1922 Commencement! I wish I could for I have only been able to get back for one Commencement in all those twenty years.

Until June, then, let us hope,

Very sincerely yours,

Edith N. Stanton, '02.

Greetings from India

Nellore, S. India, April 3, 1922.

To the Members of the Alumnae Association:

Dear friends;—

Every year I send you greetings and a short report of what I do in school, but this year, I really do not know how to write as from July, 1921, to the present day my whole year's work has been broken up by sickness in the family and other things. Anyway I'll give you a full account of everything.

Last year, I resigned my work and did not expect to go to Nellore but the missionaries could not get anyone in my place and were greatly troubled so they forced me to return to the same work. As they were in such great need I felt that I should help them so I went for a short time, and after that I had to leave my work in order to go to Lucknow to keep house for my brother, whose wife was seriously ill.

In Lucknow I had a very enjoyable time. The married brother is a professor in the Lucknow University and another brother is a professor in the Medical College. I had to look after two little nieces also who were so dear and a joy to all of us.

Well, when things got settled a little, I felt rather dull doing nothing and just at this time, I was asked by a Hindu to come and work as the principal in a Hindu Girls' School. As I had never worked in a non-Christian School, I was most glad to accept this work temporarily and I had a delightful time. Though I would have liked to have taken it permanently, yet I could not do it on account of my mother who is old and very weak. Lucknow is four days' journey from my mother's place so she did not want me to settle down in Lucknow for good. Now my term is over so I have come South again and hope to take up Nellore work as those missionaries are anxious for me to return to their school.

There is a vast difference between the south and the north. When I went to Lucknow I felt that I was in a new country, though I was in the same country, India. The people dress differently. The women wear skirts and blouses and over that they wear a kind of scarf which is about two yards long whereas in South India we wear saris. After seeing the South Indians' graceful costumes such as saris, the northerners are slowly taking to them. Their food is so different from ours. We use rice and they live on wheat. Their language is Hindustani and we speak other dialects. Their customs, ways and manners are entirely different from ours so I felt like a stranger. There is nothing in common and it seemed very strange to me to see that we were all Indians, yet how different we are from one another in everything. Most of the women in North India observe purdah system, that is, they are not allowed to see men and they have no freedom; whereas, in South India our non-Christian women do not observe purdah except Mohammedans. In so many things we South Indians are ahead of the northerners but we are glad to see that they are gradually grasping the ideas of woman education and have started many schools for girls. Twenty or thirty years ago we would never see or hear of woman education but now in large cities they have schools for non-Christians and Mohammedan girls. You may be interested to know about my school in which I worked for a short time and gained a wide experience.

There were about two hundred girls in the school who are strict Hindus and observe purdah system. They are from ages six to sixteen or seventeen years. I had six non-Christian women teachers and three or four Christian women teachers. The girls and teachers come to school in carts which are covered up by screens and are pulled by two men. (Just imagine yourself seated in a covered cart so that no man can see you. I am sure no American girl would stand such arrangement even for two or three minutes. But I think it will be a good idea for the Pennsylvania College for women to adopt as it is a gosha college). These carts are called Thelas. There are ten or twelve thelas which start at seven o'clock in the morning and they go about from one house to another collecting girls and teachers. Twenty can get in one thela and they all arrive at school at 10:30 in the morning. (This will not do for Americans as time means money to them; but for us Indians, time hangs heavily on our hands.)

As soon as they arrive at 10:30 we have prayers in Hindustani which they sing to their God. After prayers they march in lines to their various classes and do their regular work just as we do in schools. They do all their work in Hindu as English is taught only in English period. They are very earnest in their heathen religion. They begin with prayers and end with prayers.

On Saturdays they have an organization something like the Y. W. C. A. called Kumari Sabha. The whole meeting is conducted by the girls. They have their own president, vice president and secretary. They plan their own meeting. A few girls are chosen to take part in singing, reading and addressing the meeting. Everything is in Hindu according to Hindu doctrines. After the Sabha is over they have first aid and home nursing classes for an hour which are taken by a lady doctor. The girls go up for examination also in these subjects. It is so encouraging to see these girls study. About twenty years ago they would never have sent a girl to study and now to see two hundred girls studying in school is certainly wonderful. India is undergoing great changes. It has become a new country with new thoughts in politics and religion. A great number of Hindus are today Christians in heart though they are not baptized as Christians. Education is doing a great deal and the work of the missionaries is not in vain. I used to talk with many of these Hindu girls and teachers and I know they admire Christ and try to follow His principles but they are afraid to step out boldly and say that they are followers of Christ. But I know as days go by more courage will be given them to come out boldly from Hinduism and become followers of Christ. It is our duty to pray for our sisters who live in this darkness and sin. I thank God for giving me this great opportunity of knowing these Hindu sisters for a short time. I have done the little that I could among them and it is His will to bring a blessing to them.

I read the Alumnae Recorder every year with great interest and I am so glad that everyone is getting on so well.

Let me close this with my best wishes to all and hearty congratulations to all the girls who are graduating this year. P. C. W. has done so much for me and I hope it has for you. P. C. W. has trained me to do any kind of work anywhere in a happy mood. Now I am striving and shall strive always to do my best in my work wherever I may be and try hard to be able to say the words quoted by our president last year in her address, "It ought to be fine,—I live here." I know if all of us try to live up to that motto, this world will be a paradise soon. Let us all try.

With best wishes,

From your far-off friend,

KAMALA CORNELIUS '18.

The New Group System

With the opening of college last year a new and progressive policy became operative which at once gives to the college a notable and favorable position in the college world and decidedly enlarges its opportunities of service to all students. The new program has three references:

First: New entrance requirements.

Second: New requirements for the baccalaureate degree.

Third: A new curriculum with more clearly defined groups of courses and subjects.

The new entrance requirements make it possible for graduates of approved preparatory schools to enter the Freshman year without condition, provided they shall have maintained a high standard of scholarship, certified to by school principals, and approve themselves to the college entrance committee as to specific preparation, ability and intelligence, personal qualifications and life purposes. The working out of this provision will have a tendency to increase the number of students, improve scholastic standards, and place the emphasis at entrance and in the prosecution of college work on personal aptitude and quality rather than on a fixed and mechanized scheme.

The second provision of the new policy marks the departure from the traditional degree requirements and brings the college abreast with modern thought and method in higher education. It seeks in a broad way to serve a three-fold aim: to enlarge the opportunities for self-knowledge and increased personal power; to enable a more thorough understanding of world conditions and problems and the meaning of this new age; to equip for service in a thoroughly effective manner. Emphasis is therefore to be placed on the humanities and social sciences. The specific requirements must include work in English, Physiology, Contemporary Civilization, Sociology, Government and Political Economy. More comprehensively stated, the college is now seeking as never before:

- (a) To furnish the broadest and best training for young women who are to live the life of women in ordinary pursuits.
- (b) To furnish the best foundation in general culture for those who look forward to professional or technical courses.
- (c) To select and train those who are by ability and character qualified for leadership.

In a word the college aims to minister to women in the most vital ways as they are to meet the demands of a new age in diverse activities.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The new group system of courses and studies arranges and defines the more general aims, making possible balance and liberality in the choice of a career. Ten groups offer general courses in the great disciplines and specific courses in the predominant subjects. While the election of a group by the student seems to define very closely the direction of her work, yet the plan is so flexible as to permit desirable latitude of option in the selection of subjects and necessary changes in groups. The whole arrangement makes for a broad and cultural, rather than a technical or specific, preparation of life work.

The student body is responding to the new plan with enthusiasm, for it simplifies and organizes individual aims, affording directness in work and the accomplishment of a definite result in the shortest possible time. Leaders in the educational field are endorsing the plan as in fine harmony with the best thought and procedure in this new age.

—GEORGE B. LAWSON.

The Department of Social Service

How to tell "just what is being done in the Department of Social Service", as the editor of the Recorder has requested, and all in the space of a page, is a difficult problem. One solution would be to write in large letters on my page three words. Just three!

PREPARATION FOR SERVICE

From the first in 1908, to June 1922, this principle has guided us. We have believed in the possibility of providing collegiate courses in Social Service; we have believed that these courses should furnish information as to social movements past and present, and teach modern methods of social work; and that, above and through all, they should transmit the spirit of service. In planning our courses we have had in mind three classes of students: (1) those who marry, that they may extend the influence of the home wisely for the benefit of the community; (2) those who teach, or enter other professions or business, that no matter by what name their work may be called, it may be in reality "social service"; (3) those who become professional social workers, that they may have the best possible collegiate education in social science before beginning their professional work. Whatever the aim of the student, we have insisted that the method of study in these courses should be as thorough and scientific as in other branches of study.

Today the new group system provides—by required courses—for the socialized education of those who will marry, or teach, or become leaders in any profession, or anywhere else;—that is to say, all of our college graduates. Physiology and Contemporary Civilization are required of Freshmen, Sociology of Sophomores, Economics or Political Science of Juniors. Following these required courses, electives which contribute to social science are found in all departments.

For those who have decided to enter professional social work, two courses in Social Service supplement the basic courses which are required of all. Other courses which are necessary or helpful for social workers are prescribed by the head of the Department of Sociology. Those who were familiar with our work in former days should be informed that all material formerly given in shorter, specialized courses is distributed throughout the studies of the Social Science group. Students in the Social Service courses are taking "trips", doing field work with cooperating agencies, and writing theses, as they may be seen by the Faculty to be essential for the training of social workers, or to contribute to the needs of the college curriculum.

If I had another page, I would write thereon in large letters

YOUR COLLEGE HAS BEEN A PIONEER IN SOCIAL SERVICE

Many of you remember that this was true in 1908, and later. We had no patterns to copy or adopt of social service courses as they were given in other colleges; no textbooks, for they had not been written. We had to be inventors of ways to teach social service in college. What I would tell you is that in 1922, no less than in 1908, we are doing a new thing. In the old days, our department existed as a mere fringe upon the edge of traditional college practice. The new thing is that today the best of what we have learned about social service circulates through the heart of the college curriculum. Here again, we have been inventors. We have not copied from any other college either our principles or our methods.

To discuss the value of our work would require more pages. The surest test of value may be found in the record of those who have gone out from us.

LUELLA P. MELOY.

The World's Work

What Some of Our Alumnae Are Doing in It

After reading the Recorder for several years and being in close touch with the Alumnae, the fact that many of our girls are doing unusual and splendid work in many fields of the world's endeavor has been brought home to us very forcibly. We want to carry this knowledge of what our girls are doing to all of you, and we can think of no better way than by compiling a list of the girls and their achievements and presenting it to you. While we have tried to make the list as complete as possible, yet we know it is more or less faulty, as all such things are bound to be, and we have had to set limitations. So many of our Alumnae are interested and actively engaged in church, club, and political work, and so many are devoted to teaching and library work that we cannot hope to mention them individually in this list, much as we would like to and much as they deserve it.

We are now trying to present to you some of the Alumnae who are doing, or have done, things out of the ordinary and beaten tracks of women's work. They are blazing the trail in new lines and opening up new fields of opportunity. The times make new demands of women and they must meet those demands fearlessly and competently. They must train themselves and be trained to meet the requirements of each new day, to grasp every opportunity that may come their way; and while much of this training must come from themselves and existing conditions, yet there are special courses of training now being offered in our schools and colleges which tend to open the minds of women students to the conditions existing in the present social and business world.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

They aim to teach them how to cope with such conditions, how to make the world a little better place in which to live. The eyes of people are turned toward the future and they are beginning to build for posterity. The best practical training we can get to help us in this building is in the Social Service courses offered in our schools, and especially right here in P. C. W. Not all of our Alumnae have had the advantages of such special training as they departed from their Alma Mater before such was offered. More power to them! But many have had and more will have such training in the future. As the Social Service Department widens its scope, and as greater demands are made upon women and for women in special work, the importance and influence of both the course and its graduates will be more far reaching and widespread.

But hush! We must tell you what we are doing—Here is the list:—

The Cora Helen Coolidge Club

The Cora Helen Coolidge Club, composed of graduates of the Social Service Department, has held monthly luncheon meetings during the year. This has enabled the alumnae to keep in touch with each other and with the Department at the College. A "Get-acquainted" meeting with the graduating class provided an opportunity for students and alumnae to know each other better. The Club has recently become an organization member of the American Association of Social Workers.

Editorial

The feudal ages built cathedrals, and went on pilgrimages to holy graves; America went on pioneering pilgrimages and built public schools. Wherever a prairie schooner stopped, there the pilgrims built a school-house; not that they cared overmuch for books and pedagogues, but since they could not raise up shrines to the saints and Virgin as the old Crusaders did, they built school-houses, simply because they had to build something as votive-offerings to their God of Democracy and their invincible faith that all things in nature must yield to the force and strength of the ideal. It has been given to America to bring the socially regenerative character of schools into clear consciousness and to develop the public school system into a new civil polity. While democratic education has grown and expanded more abundantly in the freer atmosphere of America than in Europe, it has so far fallen short of its highest possibilities because of its hide-bound adherence to tradition and the impractical social orders of the past. The old social orders of "classes," "caste," etc., are gone—or are going—and we face a new era of Industrialism, where only what a man can do will determine his position and influence. Much of the trouble in the past has been that the thinkers could not work and the workers could not think, and now the great problem of this age is how to make men think and work at the same time in the most efficient and noblest way for the highest development of civilization. This involves the great questions of our educational, social and political problems. The real question facing the world today is how to make the human spirit more at home in this material world; how to bring man's intellect into harmony with his emotions; how to drive the ideal and practical sides of his nature in double harness; "how to think passionately and feel with discretion." It can be done. That is the work of our schools. The process is started in our great cosmopolitan public schools but the place where it reaches its finest, fullest, and freest development is in our colleges and universities—not as most of them exist to-day but as they are capable of being developed.

A university exists to get at the truth—the truth of human nature and the truth of the nature of things. It must not despise the unsophisticated human instincts and the common experience of men at work in the real world. This involves the study of the arts and sciences—those expressions of ideals and facts—and their correlation into a working relationship with each other; in other words, the development of the artistic-scientific spirit. The Old World had three visions. The Roman Empire dreamed of the reign of Law—of pure intellect. It failed because the bruised and broken hearts of men rebelled against such tyranny and cried out for a great, ministering Love. In response came that wonderful Church of the Middle Ages; but it failed too, because the Church's contempt for the intellect was no more valid than the Empire's contempt for the heart. The third vision grew out of the body of the church—those universities of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, Oxford, Paris, Bologna, Salerno. They were free cities, or civic associations for the nurture of art and science—that well-balanced combination of the hearts and minds of men. They strove to set up a new social order, a new kind of government—not of kings and crowds as had been, but of the Masters of Materials, or the Masters of Arts. The old attempt did not realize its full civic conception of the University and its free city, but that is what lies before us. It will probably be impossible to organize again the great masses of people on this planet for anything except work and we now face the great industrial age. The rise of great national university towns may offer the best solution of the new problems which develop day by day and hasten the great upheaval.

"The genius of America is industry—the regenerative life of the world. . . The university is the church of the industrial republic, the spiritual organization of the people for adventurous enterprise. Its standard is the original and final creed of humanity—the faith that the human spirit is at home here; that the things of science are framed for the works of art; that the hardest materials are plastic under the hand of the indomitable ideal." Thus the university as a physical institution should be to the new towns of America, what the cathedral was to the mediaeval cities of Europe." So speaks Charles Ferguson in his splendid book "The University Militant" in which he traces the history of the university and works out a wonderful scheme for its future development as a social, political, and industrial conception. There is no doubt that what the universities, colleges, and schools of America are working toward that end, more or less blindly perhaps, but some day they will come into the glorious future predicted for them.

We know that the spirit of the university is the spirit of buoyant and intrepid intellectual adventure, contending for the emancipation of the intellect and thus giving the key of knowledge to all. It teaches people to think and do in the best way for the highest good of humanity. "It combines the arts and sciences in their true relationship, making them practical and utilitarian, but making them the meek handmaidens of civilizing industry. And this was also the characteristic mood of the church that built the cathedrals, housed the craft-guilds under their roofs, and covered Europe from the Mediterranean to the Baltic with free cities—the church that made its monks not only the curators of classic scholarship, but the conquerors of stubborn soils and pestiferous swamps." Such was the practical ideal of long ago and such is the ideal of the university as we see it being worked out under modern conditions in America. May it grow and develop into undreamed of possibilities for the good of mankind and prove a panacea for all our economic ills! And may we work heart and soul to hasten the coming of its glad day by helping to build up greater and better places of learning—particularly our own P. C. W.

CLASS LETTERS

Class of 1873

The only news we have of '73 comes from Mrs. Chislett who has been wintering in the Bermudas.

Class of 1874

Miss Annie K. Davis died at Chautauqua, N. Y., October 30th, 1921, after a lingering illness. She was teaching at Brainerd Institute, Chester, S. C., when she was taken ill in January, 1921. She had spent seventeen years as a missionary under the Presbyterian Board in Japan.

Class of 1875

Sorrow has come to at least two of the class. Ida Harden's husband, Dr. G. A. Aschman, was called away on October 2nd, 1921, after an illness of several months' duration. To Mary McIntosh's youngest son, Wallace W. Wells, death came very suddenly in a railroad crossing accident on June 26th. Mary herself has been seriously ill; at last accounts was about to return home from Battle Creek Sanitarium. Her address is still 2153 Adelbert Road, Cleveland, Ohio. Here is something for the Class to be proud of:—Mary's daughter Beulah will be graduated from Johns Hopkins in June as a full-fledged doctor.

Jennie Wallace has nothing new to report—"same old name, same old address; life moving uneventfully in the same old channels."

Nettie Jamison Vincent has nothing at all to report this year. Life moves on at an even pace.

Lillian Willock, who spent the winter in Rome, sailed for home April first.

Lafie Reid writes from San Diego, Cal., where she now lives, that she has tried to make the world a wee bit better because of living in it. She is much interested in missions at home and abroad, and especially in Lillian McHenry, '12, who is teaching in the American School for Girls, Teheran, Persia. She closes with "Best wishes ever for my Alma Mater and with love to all whom I know of our Alumnae."

The following charming letter was received by the Editors and we are glad to share it with you.

"To the Alumnae Recorder and dear Sister Members of the Association:—

Greetings from a Kansas City member and her family! I am most sorry that I cannot be with you again—only in spirit and on paper. I am yet living over the very happy times I had at the Golden Jubilee re-union. You ask several questions. I do not get regularly my college notices. They are sent most often to an address of seven years ago. I missed the Recorder of last year entirely. I enclose $1.00 as annual dues.

The past year has brought to us joy untold, for our daughter Eleanor has returned from India with her husband and three children—Robert, six years old, Richard three, and Eleanor Mary (born in India) fifteen months. You all that are grandmothers know our great happiness in having them back home from around the world. Her husband, Mr. C. P. Fletcher, General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was located at Delhi (the capital) but his health failed and they had to return. We hope in time he may gain and be himself once more in good old U. S. A. Mr. Hain and I met them in New York when they landed from the "Aquitania". One glorious meeting for all! It was early in February when the big snow-storm closed Washington, Philadelphia, and most of the East to traffic. We were in the midst of it but most thoroughly enjoyed our visit in each place. Our children are all with us for a time and need I add,—the most interesting and wonderful ever!

I will be so glad to hear from all the members of our class or those in college when I was; also the newer ones. All I am interested in. I hope many respond to the Editors in their strenuous work. Dearest wishes and thoughts I send to all.

Lovingly,

MARY G. C. HAIN.

Class of 1876

Dear Alumnae:—

You will be glad to hear from a few of our girls.

Lallah Walker-Merriman's address is the same. She has been doing welfare work and is Regent of the Ft. McArthur Chapter, D. A. R., and finds her time fully occupied. Claribel Merriman-Robey has spent a most delightful winter in California. Lydie Gracie-Peek has been visiting her sister in Seattle and hopes Jane Wightman will spend the summer with them.

Some of you may not know it was voted in the Alumnae meeting not to send the Recorder to any member unless her annual dues of $1.00 were paid. If you are wondering why you do not receive the book, think if you have paid up!

Sincerely,

A. JANE WIGHTMAN.

Class of 1877

We have heard from only one member of the Class of '77, Mrs. Warmcastle. She writes that she has been in poor health but has been active in Bath House and Day Nursery work. She expected to attend the International Convention of Day Nurseries in New York, May 2-5.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1879

Mrs. Pardee writes that she has had a busy year. The first part was taken up helping at the arrival of her granddaughter and getting her daughter Elizabeth, a former Dilworth Hall girl, married to Mr. Ralph W. Muldoon, September 17, 1921. She also spent two months visiting her son, Dr. Arthur Pardee, who is head of the Chemistry Department in the University of South Dakota; and incidentally she boosted P. C. W. to all students who would listen.

Class of 1880

I have been so busy with Orphan Asylum, Missionary Society, housecleaning and weddings that I didn't fill in the questionnaire. You must have noticed that the busier you are, the less time you have for describing your various activities. My chief occupation of late seems to have been marrying off my children. Robert McKnight was married last August to Rachel Arrott, and Eleanor was married in March to Lieutenant Samuel R. Shumaker. Would it interest anyone to know that I spent last October touring thro' Holland? I would love to tell you all about it, but I refrain.

E. C. McKNIGHT.

Class of 1883

The annual Questionnaire of the Editors reinforced by the Secretary's request to the members of '83 brought brief replies, leading to the conclusion that the past year has been rather an uneventful one from the standpoint of outstanding achievements to record on these pages.

Rachel Aiken has moved to the Chelsea district of Atlantic City, where she and her mother and sisters are happily located in the beautiful Stonehurst apartments. Her dear mother is well and happy, enjoying the bracing sea atmosphere in the companionship of her devoted daughters.

Mary Acheson Spencer's questionnaire is unusually brief—no births, engagements nor weddings among her numerous descendants. She records "nothing out of the ordinary excepting the preparation, with the aid of a good committee, of a list of prospective contributors to our Endowment Fund." All success to the workers in this good cause!

Anna McCullough Ogden continues her activities along political and club lines proving herself a very public spirited woman.

Anna Lyle McLane's letter breathes the spirit of home love and the healthful activities of farm life.

Blanche Evans Rust is enjoying good health, and, after a very delightful winter in New York, came to Pittsburgh to assist in nursing her sister, Mrs. McLain, who is still quite ill.

Jennie Jackson has been having considerable anxiety owing to her Aunt's illness due to a fractured limb. We extend to Blanche and Jennie our sympathy, with the hope that their loved ones may soon be restored to health.

Again we regret that we have been unable to secure any direct news of Nellie Neyman Haines, but upon inquiry learn that she still resides in Butler.

Your Secretary, with grateful heart, records her happy recovery from a serious surgical operation during the past winter.

I wish the Editors of the Recorder might know the appreciation of its coming as expressed by some of the Alumnae. It is gratifying to know what a power it has been in keeping the daughters of P. C. W. in touch with their Alma Mater. After perusing the modest letters from classmates and attempting to compile them into a class letter, one is forcibly reminded of the many really important activities which enter into these lives which cannot be recorded here—the words of light and cheer which have stimulated the faith and illumined the pathway of many a discouraged soul; the every-day deeds of patient love and kindness, the battles fought and won in spiritual armor; the efforts to advance the Master's Kingdom in the hearts and lives of others. How quickly some of these experiences fade even from one's own memory, and yet they contain elements from which are fashioned the warp and woof of a noble life, and are worthy of inscription in the "record on high."

GEORGINA G. NEGLEY,

Secretary.

ALUMNAE RECORDE

Class of 1884

There is little of interest concerning the class of '84. Miss Meloy is head of the Department of Economics and Sociology at the Pennsylvania College for Women which she says is constantly presenting new problems and becoming more interesting because it has been made a required study in the Sophomore class. Mrs. Elliott boasts of the birth of a new grandson, born in Denver, Colorado, November 11, 1921, Robert Vincent Elliott. She is librarian at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill. Miss Nancy Clark has no news items, I regret to say. As for myself, the most interesting thing I have done was to serve on the jury for two weeks in Common Pleas Court. It is a great experience and instructive as well. I am glad I had the opportunity to do so. I had no unpleasant experience; every one was most courteous. April 1st brought me a new grandson, Garrison Holmes McClure. Hope to be with you all at the June meeting.

GERTRUDE W. HOLMES.

Class of 1886

Eleanor Stevenson Lloyd spent two months this winter in Florida. Alice Wells lost her father in March. Maude Aiken Wright's daughter Jane graduates from Vassar this June. Mary Mathews Clark's son, Byron Clark III, graduates from Princeton. Her daughter, Miriam, is private secretary in Miss Fuller's School, Ossining, N. Y. Mrs. Clark is interested in church and club work. One of her offices is that of Treasurer of the Women's Auxiliary of the Children's Museum of Blyn—1200 members. It is the first Children's Museum in the world and delegates have been sent from Russia, Japan and Australia to study its methods and establish other museums for children. She is also chairman of home Economics in "Urban", a large civic club in Brooklyn.

Class of 1888

Mary Alice Stockton says that she has a new address and has renewed her youth by having her tonsils removed. She is "still pegging away at teaching in her Quaker School."

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1890

Lillian Hill O'Neill writes that she has been unable to hear from the other members of her class. She reports the marriage of her only son, John Nixon O'Neil, Jr., to Delia Jean Webster, at Cleveland, November 12, 1921. She is very much interested in politics and is Vice-Chairman of the Republican Organization of Washington County. Illness has hampered her in her work this past year, we are sorry to say.

Class of 1892

This year two of the children of '92 expect to graduate from college,—Mary Porter Hill from Oldham, a Quaker College at Richmond, Ind., and John Bryant Barker from Haverford College, Philadelphia. Haverford also was founded and has been maintained by the Society of Friends. It is 89 years old while this year Oldham will celebrate its "Diamond Jubilee."

R. Maurice Trimble, Jr., who graduated last year from Princeton is now taking the course in architecture at Carnegie Tech. William Trimble is completing his first year at Lafayette and John McMurray Hill is doing the same at Monmouth College. Robert Flack is planning to enter Columbia next fall and his mother is thinking of spending the winter in New York with him.

This year Harriet Barker has been a member of the Junior class at Goucher College. James Hill, Jr., and John Trimble are both High School students. Sara Trimble has enjoyed having her daughter Mary at home with her this year.

Last February, Hannah Langdon spent a couple of weeks in Pittsburgh as the guest of her sister, Miss Marjorie Maxwell.

Etta Martin has been working as hard as ever for a number of worthy objects, our Alma Mater included. She has been especially interested in the Federation of Working Girls' Clubs and took an active part in their Rummage Sale last April.

Over in Norfolk, Sara Milholland has been leading an equally busy life. This is what she is doing besides being a house-keeper. She is Director at Large of the Virginia League of Women Voters, chairman of the Child Welfare Association of Norfolk Co., a member of the Board of the King's Daughters, Norfolk City Union and Home Demonstration Clubs. She also finds time to look after a couple of small clubs, teach a Sunday School class, and drives her own car. She would never get to all of her meetings if she didn't.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Carrie Porter Hill writes that she is a "busy homekeeper besides being a pastor's wife in the great city of Chicago." But P. C. W. Alumnae are "women o'parts" and Carrie is also president of the Women's Missionary Society of Chicago Presbytery.

Class of 1893

Jeannette Barbour Barton writes that while her husband is taking a "vacation" as town postmaster, she is editing and managing the Mercer Dispatch and Republican, a county seat weekly, 78 years old, with which the Barton family, father, son, and now daughter-in-law, have been connected for close to 50 years. Three years ago her son received the appointment to West Point and reports say he is proving himself worthy of his splendid mother.

Class of 1897

1897-1922. Twenty-five years! And since we have now arrived at the silver anniversary—whether we celebrate it or not—perhaps our contemporaries in college will be interested in a short individual note of our members. For some of this material I must draw upon my own memory and imagination, because three have sent in no reply to the questionnaire and others, especially the unmarried ones, are so modest in telling of their work.

Mary Christy Irwin has not been heard from for two years. At that time she was in California. She has one daughter now about ready to enter college.

Carrie Eggers has been teaching and working in the Biblical Seminary, New York City, for a number of years. At present she is supervising community service.

Sara Hillman sends no answer and none of us have seen her or heard from her in a long time.

Grace Hood Hannah is the first to have a son or daughter in college. Her daughter Margaret entered Wellesley September, 1921.

Harriet McCarty returned from a year in Charleston, S. C. to take up library work in Pittsburgh again. She is librarian of Homewood branch, where she will always welcome any of her P. C. W. friends.

Matilda Milligan Fisher says she has no news. Matilda is also one of the modest number, who could tell us things we would consider good news, if she only thought so.

Edith Stockton is still "carrying on" in kindergarten work. I also read a few weeks ago of her as one of the prominent members of the new Women's business club.

The secretary has nothing to add to the class history at this time.

So, twenty-five years after find our class circle unbroken by death, with half of us married, and the total number of our children, eight. For all of us, I believe, it has been as far as most of us experience here, a very happy life.

MARY MACKEY BOLAND.

Class of 1900

Alice Thomas Caples writes that she has moved from Ft. Logan to Ft. Leavenworth. She is studying French with a very fine instructor, a French Colonel, who is detailed to the schools there, and helping her three boys, two of whom are in High School and the other in the Grade School (6th grade). Her husband is also at the General Service Schools. She adds, "As I have no girls, I have no prospective students for the College, for which I am sorry." We sometimes wish more Alumnae felt and expressed themselves that way, not in words only but by deeds—by the actual sending of their daughters to their Alma Mater.

Emma Snyder Jones tells us of her many and varied activities and responsibilities in church work to which she adds "and the mothering of three children—the oldest of whom is a Junior at W. & J.—and in between times keeping house."

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1901

Mary Bruce writes that she is a very busy business woman. Also that "We have bought an old estate in Westchester Co., N. Y., with wonderful woods and springs and apple trees. So I am going to play at country life till I am ready to go back to the soil."

Carrie Kim is still teaching in Westinghouse High. She and Rosetta Moore Houston spent some of their time this spring in Atlantic City.

Helen Sands Ferry spent her vacation last summer studying at Simmons College, Boston. During the winter she taught Shorthand in the Schenley High Night School.

Class of 1902

The twentieth anniversary should have found us at the pinnacle of fame, but of the replies from class members sent in to the secretary, the greater number were so negative that it seems impossible to make anything positive out of them. Most of us seem to be pursuing the even tenor of our way, taking care of our loved ones, and being taken in hand by the younger generation with a view to remodeling our opinions and persons on more modern lines.

Edith Stanton seems to have done the only startling thing by taking a five months' trip to the Orient, and later establishing her family in Pasadena. Edith is now to have her headquarters in San Francisco, having been made Y. W. C. A. regional director for the Pacific coast and northwest fields.

The West seems to give pep to the inhabitants, for Helen Sherrard Fuller golfs, "chauffeuses" herself over the rolling prairies and leads her daughter through scarlet fever without batting an eye-lash. She has a grievance against past Recorder boards, as she pays her alumnae dues with promptitude, but sees never a sign of a Recorder.

As for the rest of us, we are doubtless making our mark in the world but it is not noticeable at any great distance from home. We are still bound together by a class letter which began its initial journey in September 1902, and helps keep alive the spirit of our college days.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1903

The Class of '03 has been as busy as ever. We were delighted to hear from Ruth Johnstin after several years' silence. She says she has been so buried in work that she seems to have lost connections with her friends. However, she has come out into the light again and sends greetings and an invitation to all to call on her when we visit Washington, D. C. She has left Downer College and is now a "Specialist in Food Chemistry, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, State Relations Service, Office of Home Economics, Washington, D. C." That sounds mighty impressive and we are proud of our Ruth.

Much of the class activity seems to center about the National Capital. Eleanor Fitzgibbon's beautiful estate and stock farm is near Laurel, 18 miles from Washington. Eleanor is undoubtedly one of our most enterprising and modern members. She is competing with "man" in all kinds of business ventures. When she buys and sells cattle, etc., she signs her letters "E. Fitzgibbon" and writes in a most business and man-like way. All goes beautifully in the "man-to-man" deal until her check is received signed "Eleanor Fitzgibbon"; then the men waken up and realize they have been dealing with a woman and they sometimes wonder if the transaction is legal and legitimate! Eleanor gave illustrated lectures of her beautiful colonial home "Montpelier Manor" and her cattle and stock a few weeks ago at the College and College Club and those of us who were fortunate enough to see and hear them know something of her work. She expects to have her first public auction sale of Jersey cattle in June and is looking forward to a large demand for her stock as no cattle are allowed to be shipped from the Isle of Jersey this year. Success to her!

Hilda Sadler is another busy member of '03. She is clerk at the Belmar School during the day-time of the ten school-months, then presides over the clerical duties in the office of the Schenley High four nights of every week during the Night School term. She thrives on it and the social activities she crowds in between school hours.

Sorrow has come to two of our girls. Last summer Mary Willson Coleman lost a dear little daughter after a brief illness and Anna Myra Petty's mother quietly slept away in February. Both girls have our sincerest sympathy. They keep busy looking after their families and house-wifely duties. Sarah and Hattie are doing the same and are glad and happy for the blessings of life. We are sorry Hattie found it necessary to resign from the Vice-Presidency and consequently the Presidency—of the Alumnae as we had much class pride in having her in those positions and knew that she would fill the offices well and bring credit to the class, the Alumnae, and the College. But health and home-duties come first and we are glad that Hattie had the courage to renounce the glory for other considerations.

Anna Hunter is still teaching at Schenley High and caring for her invalid father.

There is no need to go into detail about Jane McSherry Smith. She is "Editor-in-Chief" of this RECORDER and her work will speak for itself.

Class of 1904

The members of '04 seem to have been "about as usual" during the past year.

Nancy Blair reports "a lovely year, with very little house-keeping in it" and the prospect of once more having a permanent address after May first.

We were all glad to have a fleeting glimpse of Elizabeth Carpenter Dearborn during her short visit in the winter. Elizabeth writes that the Dearborns have been doing some interesting "re-muddling", as Bruce Barton would say, and expect to enjoy the new home greatly. The entire family has weathered chicken-pox and mumps the past year and Ruth, the eldest daughter, graduates from grammar school in June; so Elizabeth finds life not too monotonous and uninteresting.

Jessie Gray writes of a most delightful year in her school, Southfield Point Hall, Stamford, Conn., and is looking forward to seeing all the girls again.

The other members of the class are busy as ever—Edna McKee Houston active as always in all P. C. W. interests; Lida Young and Rebekah Eggers continuing in educational work, and Helen Thomas Larimer leading a very quiet life at home.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1905

The Class of 1905 has nothing of importance to relate for the past year, as all its members seem to have been behaving themselves in their usual becoming manner, with the result that no startling or particularly exciting events have happened to disturb the even tenor of their ways.

A very entertaining and enjoyable letter from Florence Van Wagner Shaw reports her and her family as well and happy and going along in the way they should go. Florence has amply fulfilled the promise of her school days and has become a leader in her home town. She and her husband are enthusiastically interested in church and civic work and are giving generously of their time and substance to them both. Her two boys are growing into fine big lads and altogether Florence is leading a busy, useful life.

Betty Pew Bell has apparently settled down in California for the rest of her natural life, and is happily raising youngsters and wee chicks on her cosy ranch. She is reported as still retaining her slim slenderness, which, naming no names, is more than some of the rest of us can say.

Helen Moore emigrated to Pittsburgh this fall and is now engaged in library work, her first love, at the Central Library. She is a very busy lady and is doing her best to enjoy to the full the concerts and orchestras her soul desires.

Being a tired business woman, I have naturally taken to golf in leisure moments and any other kind that I can find, and am endeavoring to retain nature's bloom by accompanying an elusive little ball round a three mile course. Incidentally I am adding many and various picturesque remarks to my educated vocabulary, thus following out the collegiate intent of improving (?) my mind.

H. B. KERR.

Class of 1906

As usual the call comes from the Recorder Board, and this year finds us all doing practically the same as last year.

Verna writes thankfully "It's off!" referring to the Monessen High School Year Book of which she is Faculty Advisor. The Year Book is getting to be a "big book with forty-some illustrations" so you know that means work. She also has charge of the school weekly and besides teaches a "little Latin".

Willa is still connected with the City Health Department of Douglas, Arizona. She has a nice trip planned for this spring—to Narozari, Old Mexico, Tucson, Phoenix, the Grand Canyon, and Los Angeles.

I am still at Southfield Point Hall.

Good luck to you all!

EDITH GRAY.

Class of 1907

The class of 1907 has had a peaceful and uneventful year—that is, no big events but enough of the usual ones to make us wonder where the year has gone.

Besides being a busy housewife Bess has found plenty to do in the Alumnae Association. During the summer she taught for six weeks in the Vacation Bible School of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church.

Grace is still keeping house in Coraopolis. We wish she would move nearer but when we see her garden and fruit trees in summer time, we wish we lived in Coraopolis, too.

Ellen has been doing a little bit of everything. As family chauffeur she has had several pleasant trips to Akron to visit her sister.

Clara and Mary have been teaching. Mary loves all New England and Connecticut College of New London in particular. She reports exchanging visits with her sister, who is living in New York.

C. L. N.

Class of 1908

Mary wonders if I would like to write the Recorder news this year. It might be an easier matter if we had any news but for the most part we appear to be a very quiet class. Mary herself writes, "I haven't a thing to tell this year. No excitement whatever!" However, on rereading her last contribution to our class letter, I find that by January, the McJunkin family were finally settled in their new home, having moved last spring. That seems quite a length of time for settling but you see Mary was trying her skill at the art of interior decorating. From all reports she became quite expert in mixing colors and stenciling borders in oil paints. Mary's children are fine. Eva Cohen Jackson and Mary called on our Virginia's sister and saw Patricia and Marshall. "Patricia is tall and slender, about 11 years old. Reddish hair. She looks a great deal as Virginia did, but she has a bashful little way that isn't just like her mother either. Marshall is the biggest, huskiest youngster of his age. Big pink and white face with the lightest, curliest hair and twinkliest blue eyes. He is seven." (You see Mary should have written this report considering how much I have relied on her for news).

Myrtle has spent a very busy year. Last summer she and family were on their Idaho ranch and remained somewhat longer than they had planned as her oldest boy broke his leg. After their return to San Bernardino Myrtle tried her hand at interior work, painting and varnishing. I wish the spirit of interior decorating would move the third member of this class. Toys and kiddie kars have well succeeded in removing the floor finish and have left a mark on most of the woodwork. I really think I won't decorate until the boys are older. We had the house painted and the roof repaired, these being parts of a house on which small boys are not quite so destructive. To return to Myrtle's activities. She has been busy with church and Sunday School work, keeping up apartments and rooms. Soon summer will be here when the Blakeley's will again be on their ranch, living "the wild life" but busy one too.

As for my family, we thought we had had a year rather free from illness until last week the older boy became ill with measles. Everybody says George will have them too, so I suppose the sign will be on the house awhile longer. The past week I have become well acquainted with children's literature which reminds me that I have had more opportunity for good solid reading this past winter than in eight years. In the care of young children there seems to be so little time or energy for reading. My "baby" George will start to Kindergarten in the fall so it really seems as if the children were growing up. We spent the Christmas vacation with my sister Margaret near Philadelphia. One delightful day the children and I spent with Florence Hunt Howell in Wayne, Pa. Florence was in the dormitory for two years and sat at the same table as I—with Miss Brownson, Miss Brownlee, Miss Campbell, and Jane Grimshaw. I seldom see any one belonging to Dilworth Hall or the college so it was a great pleasure to talk over “old times” with Florence and “exchange news” about our friends. Florence has two fine boys and a very pleasant home.

L. G. S.

Class of 1909

From the class of 1909 comes little news. As usual, during the past year, we have been scattered far and wide and good intentions took place of the many promised letters.

No one in the class dares be ignorant of geography if she wishes to keep pace with Leila Estep Herold. She has just reached New York from her third South American trip. She has been in Buenos Aires for about six months.

Gladwin Coburn Challinor has moved to East Orange, New Jersey, where, as we hear, she is still doing society and enjoying it as much as ever.

Eva Cohen Jackson has nothing to report except that, with the amount of time she feels that one daughter requires, she sympathizes with that justly famous old woman who “spanked them all soundly and put them to bed.”

Of Emma Coulter Sargent we know nothing direct although we know that sometime ago she had had a rather dangerous operation and had come through successfully.

Irma Beard and Grace Tatnal carry on our educational work. Irma is at the high school at Calumet, Michigan, where she is teacher of English and assistant principal.

Grace got an M. A. from Lehigh University last October. She is still teaching Biology in the Central High School, Harrisburg.

Carla Jarecki was married to Mr. Royal A. Powers, October 2, 1920. They live in Sandusky, but travel a great deal. They spent the past winter in Seabreeze, Fla., with Carla's mother.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1911

The members of the Class of 1911 are not anxious to see their names in print as only four of the seventeen have responded.

Elma Trussell reports the arrival of a son, Wm. James Bannen, Jr.

Frances Gray's third baby, a little girl, came in January. Jimmie has been attending Southfieldpoint Hall, Stamford, Conn., his Aunt Jessie's school. Frances' time is filled being just "Mother."

Rosalie has been doing psychiatric social work for the American Red Cross. The Red Cross sent her to Smith last summer for the summer session. Rosalie says while it was by far the most strenuous summer of her career it was decidedly the most interesting.

Last summer we met Rachel and her two boys on the train en route to the Lake. It was mutually agreed that College was a holiday compared with bringing up a family.

There are two marriages in the Class this year. Florence Wilson has been helping in all Alumnae activities and enjoying housekeeping for almost a year.

Mabel Crowe Baird and Mr. Cecil C. Schleihaufer were married in April.

Alice attends Alumnae meetings, keeps house and manages to see her classmates frequently.

Margaret Green has moved to Glenolden, Pennsylvania, and is kept busy attending to the wants of her small son who is over a year old.

The writer has spent a most happy year in the country and would not return to the city were it not time for her eldest to be in school.

Our report would be incomplete without mention of our much loved honorary member, Miss Brownson.

Though we did not see her last year our thoughts are often with her who meant so much to us in our college days.

BELLE McCLYMONDS MARSHALL.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1912

Though it is ten years since we, as students, bid farewell to dear old P. C. W., we are still romantic enough to have engagements and marriages, etc.

On September 26, 1921, Hazel Hickson was married to Mr. John Van Ingen of Rahway, New Jersey, in the Chapel of the Church of the Ascension. The "at home" cards announced they were to live at East Orange, but they have recently moved to Rochester, New York. Hazel regrets that she will be unable to come to Pittsburgh for our tenth Reunion, as her Jack's college is having its centennial celebration and they have planned to attend that.

Esther O'Neill, whose engagement was announced during the winter, is to be married on April 19th. I regret that Tess neglected to give her fiance's name. Until February the first, she was secretary to the Manager of the Altoona Chamber of Commerce. Since then, she has been busy with the preparations for her wedding.

There have been rumors of the engagement of another of the girls, but as she refuses to divulge any of the particulars, I deem it wise for us to await her own announcement.

There is another baby to add to our list of little ones,—Margaret Woodside, daughter of Eleanor Davis Woodside. She was born on November 17, 1921. In answer to the question "What have you been doing this year," Eleanor wrote, "Raising a family." I can well imagine that Nevin, her four-year-old son, and the little baby sister, occupy most of her time.

Sorrow came to Martha Kim and Florence Bickel Swan, each of whom lost her mother. Our hearts go out to them in sympathy.

Martha, who is a member of the faculty at the Westinghouse High School, is to have a new experience on May the first,—that of moving. She and her sisters are to move in the Emerson Apartment, on Alder Street.

Elvira Estep Coburn seems to have had a wonderful time during the past year. She spent a very delightful summer in New England,—chiefly Maine. Her winter has been full of weddings and parties in connection with them. In October, she was East to attend the wedding of Hazel's sister-in-law. Incidentally, she still follows the teaching profession at the Riverside High School.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

In addition to Martha and Elvira, we have three other school "marms". Daisy is teaching in the Westinghouse High School, Calla in the Vandergrift High School, and Helen in the Duquesne High School. All three insist they have nothing unusual to report. I know that last summer Martha and Daisy enjoyed a motor trip through New England in Daisy's car.

The secretary received a delightful "newsy" letter from May Hardy Reed. Her chief interest is her three-year-old son, Billy, who is chock full of energy and spirit. They were in Pittsburgh at Christmas time and on their way home they enjoyed a few pleasant days with Martha Sands Kirtland in Poland. May had recently received a letter from Lillie Lindsay, so she very kindly sent the information concerning the latter. "Wid" is connected with the Children's Clinic at Stanford, California, and is intensely interested in her work. Her mother and brother have been with her all winter.

Martha Sands Kirtland wrote "I am doing nothing unusual—just leading a busy, happy life in Poland, America. One afternoon each week, I try to teach the little foreigners of East Youngstown to sew. At intervals during the past year, I have had the pleasure of visits from May Hardy Reed and her small son, Hazel Hickson, Elvira, Mary Gray, and even Florence Bickel Swan deserted her family long enough to spend a week-end with us."

There was no reply from Lillian McHenry, but I suppose she is still teaching in the American Girls' School at Teheran, Persia.

On this tenth anniversary of our graduation, I was determined to relate some bit of news concerning each of the twenty-one members of 1912 in my letter to the Recorder. As the remaining girls of the class made no response and therefore, I have no authentic information concerning them, and as it would not be wise to resort to fiction, I will have to omit them with the hope that in 1923 they will have overcome their modesty or whatever it is that prevents them from writing about themselves.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The Secretary hasn't a thing startling to record concerning herself. I do want to express my gratitude to those of my class mates who responded this year with their delightful, interesting letters.

FRANCES DAVIES KERR.

Class of 1913

I really must admit that the members of 1913 have come to the front, quite nobly, this time. They actually seem willing that we get an inkling of what they have been up to this past year. There are only one or two who prefer to keep their whereabouts and activities a deep, dark secret.

Fay is one of these; also Lucille, who was in Japan with her husband the last we heard about her.

Helen Blair is very hard to locate these days. She has had various abodes since they sold their home last summer and, at present, to quote her own words, is trying the unusual experience of living in a trunk; now and then warming her toes at strange hearth fires, but, for the most part, drawing her inspiration and comfort from a hotel radiator. Just in passing, we could suggest a way out of this difficulty but what's the use? Why keep us in this dreadful suspense?

Christina is still living in New York, but is trying life in the suburbs which she declares a fitting place to tame her young son, Harvey, Jr. We are looking forward to a visit from Tine this spring.

Claire also, is a dweller in New York, where she is studying medicine and living with her sister, Sidney, at "The Old Chelsea."

Helen Culley, evidently, is too busily engaged with her small daughter to cross the bridge very often. They are leaving soon for their summer home at Lake Wawasee, Indiana, where Baby Katherine is to be abandoned to the care of her grandmother while Helen takes a western trip with Dr. Culley.

Louise Fletcher has been teaching in Connecticut. We are sorry to hear that she was ill part of the winter and hope she is much improved in health.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Emma is so engrossed in her family cares that we neither see nor hear from her.

Jeanne has spent the winter at home resting up from her arduous duties at Harrisburg.

We regret to hear that Florence Keyes has idled away her time so carelessly this winter in Morgantown. All she has done is teach, tutor, coach plays, attend West Virginia University and various club meetings.

Margaret Minor has been teaching in the city. We catch a glimpse of her now and then.

Marguerite Titzell has been living on Walnut Street, and teaching at Miss Simonson's school. Elsie, also, is teaching but won't take the time to tell us where.

Florence Frank is a very busy person, indeed, with her two active boys, but she always finds time to attend our little gatherings.

Rosie is again in our midst and, this time, we hope to stay. The Bukas returned to Pittsburgh to reside early in the winter.

At Thanksgiving time, as many of the class mothers as could be gathered together on short notice, with their offspring, spent a very pleasant afternoon with Rosie at her mother's home. We know she will be missed by the Cleveland chapter of the P. C. W. Alumnae. Sylvia sends us news of this active group of seven members. Sylvia has been doing "mobs of volunteer social work," and is publicity chairman for an organization with a membership of thirty-five hundred. We were sorry to learn of the death of her father which occurred on September seventeenth. The class extends its sympathy to her and her family.

Martha kept us waiting some time before divulging the exciting news promised us in the last issue, but, we'll all agree it was worth waiting for. On July twenty-sixth, she became Mrs. Silas Albert McKeon, a Canadian at law, although she insists, not at heart. She has spent a busy, happy year delving into the secrets of housekeeping and home-making.

Grace might as well be in Constantinople, or some other of those dreadful places she is forever longing for. Then, she might, at least, take the time to drop us a post card. Even the most dire threats conveyed to her through a certain member of her family, failed to scare her into replying to our appeal for news.

As for me, I've spent most of the year trying to keep tab on the rest of you so that I would have something to write about. Won't somebody, please, call a class meeting and elect a new and capable secretary?

LAILA CLARK AMENT, '13.

Class of 1914

The most startling thing which has befallen the class of 1914 during the past year, has been the birth of twins to one of our members, Juanita Husband Harrison. Another event equally worthy of note is that Pauline Burt has taken to knickers—on special occasions. So we can point with pride to the results of a college education where both ends of the feminine question—much discussed today—have met in one class.

I am very glad to record part of a letter from Janet Brownlee. We have not heard from her directly for a couple of years. This year I received a letter from her, of which I quote a part. She says: "I have done so little myself this year that I think I will take the opportunity of boasting that I have now pupils (that is to say, former pupils) in the four classes of College; among them the business manager of the Arrow, the winner of the prize offered by the American Poetry Magazine, and one of the actors in this year's Senior Play. So you can see my interest in the College has not lessened."

Josette Kochersperg writes that she is moving again. This time to Chardon, Ohio, from Columbus. Her chief occupation has been housekeeping.

Giulietta Plympton has been teaching French and English in the Avalon High School. She has also been dramatic coach; and sponsor of the Y. W.

Ethel Williams reports the birth of a daughter Phyllis Alberta last May. As neither Ethel nor I received a Recorder last year, I cannot say if this birth is recorded. So I repeat it now.

Margaret Brown has a new little son, born last October.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

She has had her hands full ever since for Bobby is just past two years. And of course she has had the usual quota of sickness that has been going around.

I am sorry to report the death of Margery Stewart's father after a two day's illness of pneumonia.

This makes a mighty slim record of 1914. Brace up girls, and send in the news next year.

MARION BOGGS TAYLOR, '14.

Class of 1915

We are particularly missing the out-of-town girls of our class just now—for one of our members is causing some excitement, and incidentally, some parties, which are happy reunions. Betty Cameron intends to take up her life work April 26th, and we are all quite confident that Ralph Frank will be a happy man. The romance started at a class house party the year we graduated.

Janet Campbell did tear herself away from Butler and a brand new stenographic career to visit with us for an afternoon.

Mary Jeffery is still the popular teacher and as usual up to date in everything.

Olga Losa still devotes her affections to Woodlawn's "poor" but comes to town every week.

Virginia Morris Speer is kept busy and happy with her small family.

We hear that Louise Kindl Crawford has moved to Uniontown. We wish she and little Frances would come to Pittsburgh oftener.

Jane Johnston is an instructor in Randolph-Macon Institute in Virginia and enjoys her work very much.

The writer is still busy and interested at Kaufmann's—in the Personnel department.

MARY HALL ESTEP.

Class of 1916

The time for sending the class notes for the Recorder is long past due, and yet no news has been sent in from so many of the girls, that we may very aptly modify Burns' famous words, to read "Oh! would some power the gift to give us" to know just what our class-mates are doing.

Since this can not be, we will tell you of those whose replies to the questionnaire have been returned and allow you to use your imagination in regard to the various activities of the other girls of '16.

Ethel Bair is busy taking care of her family and we know she is doing well. Gertrude Frame has changed the sphere of her activities by leaving her position with the Y. W. C. A. and becoming secretary to Dr. Kerr of the Shady-side Presbyterian Church.

Margaret Lee is also doing secretarial work but in the Department of Fine Arts at Carnegie Institute. Leora Lewis Lambe aside from her household duties finds time to take an active interest in Club work, and Melba Martin has left the class of spinsters and is Mrs. Frank B. Ingersoll. Kathryn Robb Dunn as mistress of a manse, has just about as much to do as she can manage. Seba South McCaw modestly writes that aside from a little club work she has done nothing this year. Knowing Seba we realize this must be taken "with a grain of salt." Helen Steele Truxal has the very interesting occupation of looking out for the welfare of her wee daughter, Martha Jane. Grace Woodrow is still connected with the Social Service Department of the West Penn Hospital.

Several of the other girls are teaching school but we can't tell you definitely about any except Martha Gibbons, who is at Castleton, North Dakota, and Frances Boale at Franklin, Pa.

Jean Riggs, a former member of the Class was married last January to Mr. George B. Fraser, of Cleveland.

F. E. B.

Class of 1917

Dear-Oh, this is our fifth anniversary and we fail to register age or even signs of it. We have married but we have not settled down; we have had children but we show no signs of wear and tear; we have taught school and yet we dare you to find an old maid school teacher among us. We have toiled at regular jobs but we are still as sweetly feminine as we ever were. We look young and we act young; the only thing that distinguishes us from the present generation is the fact that we have not bobbed our hair, at least we have no startling reports to that effect.

A few statistics may be enlightening. Eight of the class are married and one is engaged. We now have eight children, four of which were born during the past year. That is not so bad for five year olds. Carrie Bailey and Ada Spriggs maintain a discreet silence. If anyone can enlighten us as to their whereabouts or present occupations we will be greatly obliged. We think that Carrie is teaching somewhere and that Ada is at home doing absolutely nothing, but we do like to have our information verified.

Leah's questionnaire states clearly that she has been working in her father's store. We suspect that this is not all that she has been doing but far be it from us to pry into her dark past. She and her family expect to move to Pittsburgh shortly and Leah has promised to make a few long delayed visits to the homes of her friends.

We were surprised to receive a tiny card announcing the arrival of Dean Franklin Kroh so we know that Edna is too busy to write.

Martha Crandall remains in Butler and also deeply in love. They celebrate their wedding anniversary every month instead of every year just to remind themselves that they are married, you know. Martha comes to Pittsburgh occasionally for parties and teas and such so we get a fleeting glimpse of her now and then.

We saw Martha Dunbar and Katherine Keck at the delightful luncheon Miss White gave for the Class. It certainly was a spiffy luncheon and we surely gave three cheers for our honorary member. She is always doing such nice things. Martha is busy managing the Ladies' Aid and her 2½ year old son. Katherine Keck is teaching in the McKeesport High School and is just crazy about it.

Dorothy Eggers is still holding down her job with the law shop. She must be pretty good to be able to stay in the same place three years. Ruth Law reports that her address and occupation are still the same. We suspect that Ruth does absolutely nothing but we will forgive her for that if she does not work too hard at it.

Ruth Gokey and Betty certainly deserve the "croix de care" or something. They each have two husky sons. Wm. Jos. Crawford was born September 5 and is now nine months old. Wm. Stuart Walters (also Billy) was born March 31, 1922. We now have six boys and two girls in the Class.

Jane Errett is seeing a little of life in New York. She is working in a branch of the New York Public Library, located in the lower East Side, where a great many Russian immigrants live so Jane has probably learned to talk with her hands. She says she is very busy but that the work is pleasant.

Nobody ever sees or hears from Kate so if no news is good news, Kate is still in the land of the living. It must be terrible to live away off in Aspinwall!

Helen Pardee has moved back to Pittsburgh. She is accompanied by her husband and ten months' old daughter, Louise Catherine. Of course she just hated to come back to Pittsburgh but her friends are glad to see her.

Estelle remains contentedly in Bayside, N. Y. She says she is busy keeping house, learning what a baby does and engaged in the absorbing business of training the young. That sounds like a large program but we venture to say that the child will be scientifically trained. Marian's vocabulary grows daily but her mother writes that the child can make no labial sounds. That seemed alarming until we consulted the dictionary but now we think that the child will pull through.

Dot has really lived in Vandergrift this winter because her mother has been in California. Her husband has put on a little flesh since he gets three square meals a day. The social whirl of Vandergrift has caught Dot and while she did escape unharmed in a recent automobile accident we fear that she will be a victim of the fast life she is leading.

Aline has been indulging in a nice long sick spell. She was out of school for several months and just had to run down to A. C. for a week or two. She is now on the job again but feels a trifle wobbly.

And of course we saved the best news for the last. Louise is really engaged, the engagement to culminate in a fall wedding. In the meantime she is being dragged to Europe at the most thrilling period in her life. It really makes her sick to think of the parting but perhaps the ocean voyage will cure that. Bon voyage! Louise, on both of these ventures.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of 1918

During the past year, four members of 1918 took unto themselves husbands. For the thirteen school teachers of the class it may be a comfort to know that of these four brides, one, at least, once held forth at "teacher's desk."

Mollie Davidson now lives in New Jersey. In Trenton? No! In Newark. She became Mrs. Louis Jerome Nass on September 18, 1921. She fails to report to us, but we know what all the brides say.

Emilie Kates surprised some of us, but by no means all of us, by marrying Mr. Paul McKinley Logue, on the last day of 1921. She evidently wanted to begin the new year well. She keeps house in an apartment on McPherson Boulevard.

Ruth Logan, the one school-teacher of the quartette aforementioned, was the only June bride we had last year. Her marriage to Mr. J. Paul Jordan took place on June 4, 1921. She lives in Wilkinsburg, of course, keeping house in an apartment for two.

Kitty Myers is our most recent bride. Mr. W. Wallace Shaw stole her away from the attraction of the world of business. Their marriage occurred on January 31, 1922. She has been living with her parents, but in a few weeks expects to start to keep house in Mt. Lebanon.

We can now boast four class babies. Of these, two may sometime "look for mother's name" in their own Alumnae Recorders. Eulalia Fournier Babbitt does not answer our request for news but we know that 99.44% of her time is spent in caring well for our very first class baby girl. Charlotte Hunker Hays reports that she spends her time keeping house and bringing up little Betty in the way she should go. Elinor Goldsmit Hast modestly refrains from giving us any information about her young son, but a classmate describes him as, "a darling baby, full of pep, just like Elinor," and so we know we can be proud of our first class boy. Last August William Sterling Hopwood came to Mr. and Mrs. Winona. We can just imagine Charlotte's Betty and Winona's Billy playing together.

Charlotte H. Hays also reports a Cleveland branch of the Alumnae Association. She says, "We are not very strong, five being about the most out at any meeting; but still we are and hope you will hear more of us later."

Annetta Marks Horwitz denies us any information. We'll cut out Arnold's last line and say to her, "'We ask and ask, thou smilest and art still.'"

Janet Hill is our one financier. She holds in her competent hands the destinies of an insurance company. She didn't take all that Math. and Commerce and Banking and Economics for nothing. She has changed her abode, and we don't know just where she is at home now, and so we give her business address.

Dot Minor is saving her money, she says. Looks suspicious, but (or perhaps the connective should be "and") she is going to Salt Lake City. During the week, (from Monday to Friday) she helps to run the Latimer Junior High School as Mr. Foster's secretary. She still has "week-ends to Beaver Falls."

Kamala Cornelius, also, is a teacher, in India.

Elizabeth Eggers conducts a secretarial course in the Etna High School. She has the difficulty so many of our chalky thirteen have this year—too many children for the number of chairs. But if there weren't children, we mightn't have jobs.

Esther Evans could not bear separation from Dot, and therefore, she teaches now in Latimer Junior High.

Elinor Fuller is still in the Union High School in Turtle Creek.

Ruth Kauffman teaches Math in the Sebring, Ohio, High School. She recently paid a visit to the history class of her friend and colleague, Elizabeth Sheppard in the North Brad-dock High School. Betty teaches "all History." It don't mean nothing, after all—to go to sleep in History Teaching Methods class.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

A scintillating group of five remains. Of these it is impossible to say more than this: Ruth Long teaches Freshman Algebra and English in Wilkinsburg High School. Betty McKenzie teaches in New Cumberland, Joe Paul in Bellevue High, Lorena Van Kirk in West Newton High, and Olive Wolf in Fifth Avenue High, Pittsburgh.

Class of 1919

No Class Letter has come in from '19's secretary and little news to the editors. Martha Brownlee Bovard writes that she is busy taking care of the class baby; also that Mrs. Frieda Spire Haines is busy raising a family of boys but was most interested in hearing news from P. C. W. The Errett girls seem to be quite thrilled with the idea of moving from Carnegie to Beeler Street, Pittsburgh. Viola Cox is still busy as Director of the Donora Girl Scouts. Margaret Workman Witherspoon says that she has been enjoying shore duty in San Francisco, where her husband is Chaplain at the U. S. Naval Training Station.

Class of 1920

In spite of numerous statements to the contrary 1920 still has a goodly number in the teaching profession. Some time ago, at least one-third of our members were determined upon seeking a career in some other field, but to date Elsie Herron is the only one who has carried out her threat. Elsie assures us that life is much happier since casting aside the dignity of a school ma'am and will never again take upon her shoulders such a responsibility.

On December thirty-first a luncheon was held in the College Club. Imogene, Julia, Winifred and Mary Stevenson revealed their ever present fondness for eating by being there among the first. Imogene and Julia were so successful in their first year of teaching that both returned for a second year to their respective places of Hermenie and Devon Manor. We believe the credit of being the fourteenth member of the party belongs to either Mary or Winifred. Had either one been absent a most unfortunate situation would have arisen with but thirteen in the party.

Early in the spring we met Eleanor Bardsley in Pittsburgh. Although Eleanor had recently recovered from the "flu" and was just returning home after a gruesome visit to the dentist, she was her usual cheerful self.

Peg Hare, it is said, lunches frequently at McCreery's and is enjoying life in general. This, we expect, is the result of teaching only until one o'clock each day.

Ethel Perry and Willard Crane both returned to Stamford, Conn., for a second year. Ethel declines to admit whether the scenery of which we hear so much, or "something else" is the attraction in New England. Willard is taking music in New York from no less than our own Mr. Wild. After all the world is a tiny place.

Our two married members, Betty and Clara, seem completely satisfied with the art of housekeeping. Betty visited in Pittsburgh last November. Clara has migrated to Texas and find both people and country to her liking.

Margaret Moore, Betty Davidson, Edna Faddis and Katherine McFarland have elected to remain in oblivion. Leastways we have heard nothing from them.

Betty Jamison was quietly married last October. We feel deeply offended over the fact that she neither asked our permission nor invited us to witness the ceremony.

Kitty Caughey, we hear, is enjoying life by attending grand opera, concerts, and other intellectual amusements.

Of Helen Horix we see little, as most of her time is spent in Detroit. But we are extremely proud of the fact that she alone of all the class, had the moral courage to take up library work.

Gladys Fournier, who now lives in Youngstown, Ohio, and also teaches there, visited in Donora the last of March. According to reports she is still the same delightful "Prue."

Eleanor Trimble and Virginia, among others, were at the luncheon. Both remain the competent joke makers of earlier days. Eleanor is teaching in Bellevue and Virginia stays at home.

As usual Rita is exceedingly busy. Her latest letter tells us of a new nephew who is to be named John De Barr

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Christe. We might consider adopting him as our class baby since he is the first to arrive among any of our relations.

Elinor Newell is steadily climbing the ladder of success. On top of being the Head of the Employment Department in Kaufmann's, she has taken to lecturing. Recently we learned of an address delivered by her to the students at P. C. W.

And last, but by no means least, we come to the engagement of Gladys Wilson. Although most of us have heard of the event long ere this, we take this opportunity to extend our sincere wishes for all happiness. And we hope Gladys won't forget to send us a wee bit of her wedding cake in order to make our own prospects brighter.

E. F. '20.

Class of 1921

Most of the Class of '21 seem to live in the Shadowy Land of Nowhere as far as news for the Recorder is concerned. Bell McMaster Wilson tells that she is taking a secretarial course at Margaret Morrison and the other girls heard from disclose the fact that they are teaching school. P. C. W. girls must be popular with the Kittanning School Board as two of '21 are teaching in the High School—Mabel Shaffer and Frances Ludwick. Mary Reed is teaching in the schools of Margantown, W. Va. Another girl is teaching Math. in the Central Junior High at Charleston, W. Va., but neglects to reveal her name. Stella Espy is teaching in Leetsdale and Helen Long in the Norwin Union High School, Irwin, Pa.

Minutes of Fall Meeting, November 15, 1921

The Fall Meeting was held in conjunction with a luncheon at the Hotel Chatham, on November 5, 1921.

She told of Dr. Thoburn's lectures, of the Armenian Relief, of the Student Friendship Fund. She explained the annual year book, told of the electricity recently put in the buildings, and of Mr. Wilson, the new Superintendent of grounds. She spoke of the establishment of Mountain Day. Chapel hour has been changed to 9:30 again and she invited the Alumnae to visit. She invited the Association to the lecture by Miss Helen Fraser, Saturday, December 3.

On hand$60.00

This report was accepted.

There was a general discussion about the Alumnae Dinner in June. There were suggestions made that we have a simple dinner with no music, and no speakers, and few guests, aside from the graduating class.

There was a discussion about a Benefit, and a motion was made that the question be left in the hands of a committee. Carried.

A discussion about funds for all purposes followed.

The meeting adjourned.

FLORENCE WILSON CANERDY,

Secretary pro tem.
for Mabel Crowe Baird.

Helen E. Pelletreau Scholarship Committee

Once again the call has come to me that it is time for the Scholarship Committee to send in their annual report to the Editors of the Alumnae Recorder, so that all the members may know how much good the Scholarship Fund is doing and in what way. During the past winter four students have been assisted, two of whom are in their freshman year, one in the sophomore, and one a senior, who will graduate in June, so we will have the pleasure and honor of welcoming into the membership of our Association one more of our scholarship girls. As I have always been able to report in the past, so I can still say, that our scholarship girls are about the finest students and best all around girls in P. C. W. Their teachers report that they are doing splendid work and are a credit to the college, so surely we have reason to be proud of them also. To the one who comes into our Association this June we extend a most hearty welcome and hope that she will find it good and pleasant to be with us, and that she will always remain loyal and true to her Alma Mater—our beloved P. C. W.

Report of Social Committee for 1921-22

The Social Committee began its activities with the luncheon at the Chatham, in connection with the Fall Meeting. There were eighty-nine people present at the luncheon, and everyone seemed to enjoy it.

The next social meeting was held at the College Club, on Saturday afternoon, March 11. Due to the fact that the date conflicted with Grand Opera, there were very few members present, but the whole affair was very informal, and those who were there spent a pleasant afternoon. A short program was furnished by Miss Julia Hamm, a student at the College from the Department of Expression, Mrs. Hazel Dickson, pianist, and Mr. Frank Gipton, boy soprano.

The next undertaking of the social committee is to be the Alumnae Dinner, the success of which remains to be judged.

College Activities

"The Arrow," a bi-monthly paper, is something entirely new at P. C. W. While old things are very near to the hearts of all of us, still there comes a time, when if the spice of life is to be maintained, new things must be inaugurated. Constant growth is the thing we are all working for, and a paper of this sort seems to be a step forward in the right direction.

The aim of "The Arrow" is to express all phases of student life and activity at the college.

One of the advantages of "The Arrow" is the Alumnae Department, which keeps Alumnae and former students in closer touch with college affairs. The splendid support of the Alumnae during the past year, not only in subscribing, but in contributing interesting news items and valuable suggestions, has been greatly appreciated.

The Pennsylvanian—Because of the cost of material and labor, the class of 1921 was unable to publish a Year Book, and although it is true that the outlook this year was not much brighter, the students have responded with splendid spirit to the demands for financial aid. A fair, two dances, a vaudeville show, a rummage sale, and various other benefits have been held, all proving successful beyond our fondest hopes.

The interest which the P. C. W. girl takes in The Pennsylvanian is sufficient reward for the work of the staff. With such enthusiasm as was shown this year and with competent girls to manage it, the Year Book should in the future be published, not every other year, but every year. That is our goal!

Under the management of Beulah Boggess and the directorship of Mrs. Rockwell, the Glee Club has had an exceptionally active year. In addition to the numerous church engagements and other concerts, an invitation was accepted to sing over the Radio at the Westinghouse Broadcasting Station. A further innovation was the Club's trip to Greensburg, where a concert was given under the auspices of the Junior Class of the Greensburg High School. A joint concert with Carnegie Tech was given at the College. The Glee Club felt it an honor to sing at the lecture given by Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, at Carnegie Music Hall, April 17.

The Club this year has had a uniform dress which added greatly to the attractiveness of its appearance. Altogether the year has proved most successful and profitable because of the united efforts of Mrs. Rockwell, the director, and Miss Williams, the accompanist.

This year it has been the aim of the Student Government to instill a sense of personal responsibility in college and thus to strengthen the honor system.

At the bi-monthly board meetings the best methods of fostering real spirit for student government are discussed and suggestions and solutions offered. An Honor Council, composed of the student government board, house president, class presidents, and representatives from each class, has been created, where questions of honor are dealt with, and various student problems discussed. Weekly meetings, held on Friday, give the student body opportunity to take active stands on the current student affairs.

The Association was represented at the annual conference of the Women's Intercollegiate Association of Student Government, held this year at Simmons College, Boston. The Association also expects to be represented at the Y. W. C. A. conference at Eaglesmere this summer.

The "Cercle Francais" is open only to students of advanced standing in the French department. It has been organized to promote a greater interest in conversational French. Monthly meetings are held, at which one-act plays and attractive programs are presented. The members are also eligible to the Alliance Francaise of Pittsburgh, which this year is coming up to the college for an afternoon's entertainment.

The International Relations Club is composed of students who have taken more than a year of college work in history and who are interested in international problems. Membership is limited to twenty students and the faculty of the history department.

This year there were two topics of study, China and the relations between South America and the United States with special reference to trade.

Among the speakers who were sent by the Institute of International Education was Dr. Andrews of Tufts College. He had just returned from a year's residence in Prague, so that his speech on conditions in the Far East was particularly authoritative and interesting.

The International Relations Club is the only student organization at P. C. W. that has a national affiliation. For this reason it is able to supply the college with some of the speakers for the Friday morning lecture period.

The Omega Society has a limited membership chosen with respect to scholarship and literary ability. Its work is the promotion of an interest in literature and the providing of opportunities in the art of expression. This year the society has been interested in the study of contemporary literature.

The first regular meeting of the year was a tea held for our honorary members, Miss Hawk and Dr. Doxsee, at which the latter gave an interesting talk on the life and poems of John Masefield. Other authors whose works were presented by members of the society at the various meetings included St. John Irvine, John Synge, Leonard Merrick, Joseph Hergeheimer and Hugh Walpole.

One open meeting was held at which Mr. George W. Putnam, former instructor of English literature at P. C. W., presented the poems of Miss Mildred Weston, a former student of this college.

Athletic Association—Athletic activities began auspiciously this fall with several successful hikes. On the first of these, more than thirty students tramped from Harmarville to Oakmont, where they cooked supper along the bank of the river.

The great innovation of the year was Mountain Day, celebrated by the entire college on the last Saturday in October. Two busses and a truck transported everyone to the country beyond Carrick. Here the day was variously employed by groups of students, most of whom preferred to tramp. It is hoped that Mountain Day will survive as a college tradition.

Class basketball received its usual enthusiastic support. The Freshmen proved the season's victors, defeating the Seniors in the championship game. An honorary varsity team was selected from all four classes.

One of the important actions of the athletic committee has been its addition to the constitution of rules—the new point system. By this system each student winning one hundred points for athletic merits, and having other specified qualities, receives letters.

Students are winning their points for the spring season in tennis, baseball, and field sports. Tournament lists are long; hikes and swimming have superior attractions for a minority. The new system shows every sign of becoming a real benefit to the Athletic Association of the future.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The Social Service Club, Lambda Pi Mu, so-called in honor of Miss Luella P. Meloy, was organized this year. It consists at the present time of one honorary member, Miss Meloy, and fifteen students, all of whom are specializing in social work.

The main purpose of the club is to acquaint the students with outstanding organizations representative of varied types of social welfare work. At each meeting someone who is an authority on any of the different phases of the work gives the members definite information on the purpose of the particular agency which he represents and on the character of the services it renders.

The Club has been most fortunate in having among its speakers several alumnae of the College, who have brought us into closer touch with the Coolidge Club.

The Science Club is composed of the advanced students and faculty members of the Science Department. Owing to this requirement of advanced standing, the club membership is very small this year.

Like any other field of work, science offers many important and interesting problems for discussion, so that the choice of subjects has been difficult to make. Foods and their composition, and some fundamental facts concerning carbohydrates, fats, minerals, enzymes and vitamins, formed the basis for discussion at several meetings.

This year the arrangement of the Dramatic Club's regular meetings was little different from the usual one. The club was divided into four groups, each group having charge of one meeting. The first group had as their subject "J. M. Barrie"; the second, "The Irish Theatre"; the third, "The One-Act Play"; and the fourth, "The Contemporary Spanish Theatre."

In the fall the club had the pleasure of giving a tea in honor of three members of the Province-Town Players.

The chief play produced by the club during the year was "Little Women". Three performances of it were given December 10 and 11, the proceeds from the first two going to the Senior Class, while the Dramatic Club cleared about one hundred dollars from the third. This money will go toward enlarging the stage in the chapel and buying a new curtain. On April 20, two additional performances were given at the Twentieth Century Club.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

"Milestones", by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblauch, was chosen by the Seniors as their class play.

It is the object of Phi Pi to create among the students a more alert interest in the classics. In pursuance of this object the program of other years, chiefly devoted to the presentation of Greek and Latin plays, has been somewhat changed. This year an exhaustive study has been made of the city of Athens, with special attention to the location, arrangement and design of the buildings on the Acropolis. Legends, myths, and pictures were used in this study.

Under the supervision of Miss Green, the discussions proved interesting and helpful, as well as suggestive of the future work of the club.

A review of the activities of the Y. W. C. A. for the past year falls into two divisions: (1) religious discussion, based on Christian fundamentals; and (2) education concerning social service in Pittsburgh.

Dr. Thomas R. Thoburn, of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, opened the religious program by a series of four talks. Dr. Raymond Calkins, of Springfield, Mass., and Miss Dorothy Halliday, of the Student Volunteer Movement, were speakers of this group.

The second semester was devoted to the new idea of educating our association to the value of various social service agencies in the city. Miss Meloy, of our own social service department, opened the series by a general survey of the field in preparation for the speakers to come.

Among its social activities, the Y. W. C. A. held its annual and traditional Welcome Party for the freshmen, a tea for the Association of the University of Pittsburgh and Margaret Morrison, and, together with the International Relations Club, entertained the foreign students of Pittsburgh.

The Association was represented at the East Central Field Convention, in November, by Miss Dorothy McCormick and at the National Convention at Hot Springs, in April, by Mrs. John C. Acheson.

Opportunity for practical service was offered by the Girls' Work Department of the East Liberty Y. W. C. A. and several girls were leaders of very successful Girl Reserve Clubs.

The funds for Eaglesmere were met by a real movie, given in the auditorium on April 12. The pictures were those taken of the Pageant of 1920, and "The Sky Pilot" donated by Rowland & Clark Theatre Company.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

June, 1923

The President's Message

From now on, the editor tells me, must appear in every issue of the Recorder, a few words of greeting from the President of the Alumnae Association. At any rate, to write a few words is easier than to adhere to the time honored custom of writing a "President's Address". It was obligatory for everybody at the meeting to listen to the address; all of you have my willing permission to omit these paragraphs in your perusal of the Recorder.

Since there is but one word and thought in the minds of us all, when we discuss our Alma Mater, this little greeting of mine will contain only an earnest appeal to each individual alumna for the pull—all together—which shall make this year mark the successful completion of our long anticipated Endowment Campaign.

None of us realized just how glad we were that she was coming, until Miss Coolidge came. No other person, we believe could have come at this critical time, and so united trustees, faculty, alumnae, and students. Miss Marks, our new dean, met with an enthusiastic welcome from those of our alumnae who knew her, and has, even in these few months, made a warm place for herself in the affections of those of us who graduated before her coming to P. C. W. When we think of our college this year, it is with the feeling that all is well, except,—of course,—for the needed money. And our alumnae are now united in the determination to work untiringly until the finances shall be well,—also.

Our trustees and alumnae have never before been so actively awake to the needs of Pennsylvania College. The Pitt scare of last spring stirred us from our lethargy, and our alumnae association has been alive and interested during the past year. Some members, of course, have done more of the work than others. That is true, however, in any organization, and we are not discouraged. Every member of P. C. W. Alumnae really wants to help—and we have 480 living members, the majority of whom live in the vicinity of Pittsburgh. Since the few who have responded to the calls made upon them this winter have made so much money, it is interesting to estimate the amount we might have added to our treasury if everyone had done her real best.

May I illustrate, not to scold,—but because I feel that if all our number actually realized how even a little help counts, our members would never refuse to serve on committees and do all the inconvenient things asked of them. At our spring social meeting at the college, there were sixty members present, who voted unanimously and enthusiastically for a rummage sale, realizing as they did so, to assent really meant a promise to help. Yet at the sale, February twenty-eighth, and March first, less than thirty people contributed or helped in any way. Our receipts, however, were almost three hundred dollars;—but we could have sold three or four times as much, had we received the material! I have mentioned this instance only to ask you to consider what we might have made, if every one of our Pittsburgh members had contributed even one old dress, a discarded hat, or a useless pair of shoes.

This year, may I add my feeble plea to the crying need of our Alma Mater,—that all our girls please read carefully and answer promptly all mail referring to P. C. W. The President, and the Trustees, and the firm managing the campaign have asked us particularly to do this. Notices are sent to everyone to the address published in the Recorder, yet we receive continual complaints that people never hear of alumnae activities. Won't you ask yourself honestly if this is not due to the fact that circular letters and cards are very often disregarded, and thrown away without being read?

The fault, dear sisters, is not in our lack of love, but in our inertia. We are glad to "let George do it," and we all admit that the "George" who has been instigating most of our money raising this year is a regular self starter. But George could do so much more if all of us did everything we honestly could, even at a little personal sacrifice or inconvenience.

The time is ripe,—the goal is in sight. Some of us say we have no money to give, but surely, out of even a small income, we all can make some pledge. Repeatedly we have been told that it is not amount so much as spirit that counts. Faith and enthusiasm will help us to find time and money for our beloved Pennsylvania College for Women. And we are resolved as a unit, are we not,—that this institution, which, for more than half a century has stood for the best things in Christian education for women, shall at last be placed in her long deserved position of financial security, of community power,—of enduring honor.

Florence Wilson Canerdy, '11.

The Board

"We are responsible, not only for doing, but also for leaving undone."

"Therefore, though few may praise or help or heed us,
Let us work on with head or heart or hand,
For that we know the future ages need us;
And we must help our time to take its stand."

"When is a man not a man?" runs the old conundrum, and isn't "When he's a Board" as logical, an answer as the usual "When he's a-board"?

"The Board of Trustees is ultimately responsible for all that pertains to the College," said a prominent trustee recently: and this suggested acquainting myself with the Boards of the past.

Several hours were spent in perusing four volumes of P. C. W. catalogues without exhausting the subject.

From 1870 to 1903 the Board was composed of thirty members.

The first Board inaugurated some very definite policies, two outstanding ones being that the College should be linked to eight Presbyterian and to two United Presbyterian churches of prominence; also to well-known Pittsburgh families. This quota of ten clergymen was always filled; if one dropped out through departure or death, his successor automatically took his place. Vacancies among the laymen were filled with equal promptness; and, whenever possible, with a son of the departed. In many cases no asterisk marked the passing of the father, but the next catalogue would bring to mind the familiar words: "And his son reigned in his stead." The College was always linked up with Western Theological Seminary; and, for one year, had as a Board member the editor of the Presbyterian Banner.

A definite aim was in the hearts and minds of the first

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Board who had located their little college on the hilltop "away from the smoke, dirt, and distractions of the city; in a pure, bracing atmosphere; and in a good Presbyterian neighborhood," namely:: "To secure for our sisters and daughters (this suggests rather youthful trustees!) a high order of education at a moderate cost; that the most of our citizens may be gratified."

In connection with the words "Presbyterian neighborhood," one wonders whether a peculiarly fine quality of "pure and undefiled" Presbyterianism emanated from Shadyside Presbyterian church that the catalogue should state: "Students from Presbyterian families will attend Shadyside Presbyterian church; members of other denominations may attend the church of their choice"! (italics are mine.)

The committee on Faculty and Studies has always been made up of five members, three or four of whom were clergymen, until women came onto the Board; since which time two of them have shared the honor.

The early trustees evinced an open-mindedness which showed itself in the trying out of new plans. For example: Mrs. Nevin was chairman of the above committee for one year: another year a certain member acted as both secretary and treasurer. Possibly the gentleman rebelled, but eventually a similar arrangement was effected with Mr. Henry A. Breed, not a member of the Board, who served in this capacity for several years. One year a desire was shown to give to each of the thirty some specific task suited perhaps to individual talent, and sixteen committees were appointed. One suspects this plan worked better on paper than in reality, for the next year the number was reduced to eight and later to six, and at least a half dozen names did not appear on any committee. Would it be heresy to conjecture that some dead wood had developed?

The first trustees seem to have been alert and up to the times. Soon the thirty were divided into groups of ten, each elected to serve for two years; first and second Vice-presidents were elected; "Human Physiology" was introduced into the curriculum; and a reading room provided. If we smile on noting "St. Nicholas" advertised among the periodicals to be found in this room, we must remember that the financial problem has always been acute, and that a preparatory school was necessary both as a source of revenue and as a feeder for the college. But, when the times demanded it, this was dropped, just as in 1890 was the original name—"Pennsylvania Female College;" or a new charter secured, with a reduced Board, in 1903; or a pioneer course in Social Service inaugurated in 1908; or the present group system; or the tremendous innovation of having women trustees.

They had their trials and problems too, poor gentlemen! It is surprising to discover that the College was as truly "living by faith" when its doors first opened as it was in April 1923. In September 1870 we read: "Already is the capacity of the large and complete (?) college edifice taxed by the demand for boarding pupils, and the Trustees must take immediate steps to extend their buildings."

But, alas! this plan required money then as it does to-day, so a petition was put into circulation asking for a share in some Memorial Thank Offering. The following is a part: "Now that Presbyterians are so laudably engaged in pouring their gifts (isn't that a delightful phrase?) into the Lord's treasury for the support and advancement of our Presbyterian Zion; and, while in different localities, different objects will loom up to claim special interest and contributions: it is hoped that the brethren of our communion in Allegheny County and Western Pennsylvania will not forget the "Pennsylvania Female College" just established and inaugurated with such high promise of great results."

It is impossible to praise too highly the loyalty and devotion—many of them being "faithful even unto death"—of the one hundred and three representatives of the bench and the bar, the ministry and the medical profession, the many varied business interests of our city, and the women of social standing and prominence all of whom have contributed to a greater or lesser degree of their time, means, and interest in order that our Alma Mater might be founded, developed, progress—or just survive—for more than half a century.

Eighteen years ago the trustees were preparing for a financial campaign to bring in $200,000; to-day, for one for $1,500,000. A large sum is to be set aside for endowment to meet the annual and inevitable deficit, and the rest put into new buildings, equipment, etc. The intensive campaign will not be earlier than November, and probably not before the opening of the New Year.

Fifty Years of Service

The third catalogue of the College contains a new name—that of Oliver McClintock, then a young man in his early thirties; and every year since has his name appeared in the list of the trustees, even down to the fifty-fourth catalogue just published.

One whose privilege it has been for the past twenty years to keep in close touch with this kindred spirit was not surprised to find that he was constantly serving on executive and auditing committees, as Secretary, Vice-President, and President of the Board of Trustees, and each for long periods of time.

The passing years ever increased his abiding love for the College; deepened his hope of a glorious future, which he often spoke of as "seeing"; and strengthened his faith in the people of Pittsburgh who would someday make his "dream come true."

If greatness is "taking the common things of life and walking truly among them," Oliver McClintock deserves to be numbered among Pittsburgh's eminent men; and that he was so esteemed let the tributes paid him by the editors of our daily newspapers testify. One and all indicated that not one shred of self-interest ever marred a single act of service.

Pennsylvania College for Women owes more to him than to any other man, for in her darkest hours he was invariably her bulwark against dissolution. "Whosoever would be great among you, let him be your minister." To those into whose keeping has been intrusted the College so dear to him

"May grace be given To follow in his train."

M. A. S.

President Coolidge's Greetings

My dear Friends:

Many familiar experiences have come to me since my return to your dear college last September, but none has been more familiar or more pleasant than the present summons to the Alumnae Recorder. As you know, I have always had a very high regard for this plan of your yearly report, and have always thought it the best that I have known for a small college. In the years of my absence I have myself looked forward to its coming each June with all the eagerness of a real P. C. W. alumna, and have been proud to see my name on your list as an honorary member.

As you all know, my return to college life was a great surprise to me. As chairman of the National Committee of Bureaus of Occupations for five years, I had had the experience of visiting many colleges both East and West, so although naturally I had not kept in touch with certain academic matters, yet I did not feel my situation quite as described in the paper last June, which said that since leaving the college I had "lived in retirement". The years of my absence were too strenuous for any loyal person to answer that description! The cordial welcome which I have received from old friends and teachers and the splendid co-operation of the present student body have made the year a delightful one, another illustration of that fine spirit which always has been one of our best assets, and which we trust will always continue.

The college buildings are improved in many ways, chiefly by the installment of the electric lighting system. Woodland Hall fulfills its promise of a thoroughly comfortable and refined home. The old building is kept up as far as possible, and tries to do its part. We are, as you know, greatly handicapped by proper academic facilities, such as library, laboratories, and sufficient room for classes and for the proper comfort of day students. Under the splendid leadership of Dean Marks, the social side of college life has a right atmosphere and student government has progressed splendidly since the days when we made our first experiments and is proving a fine help and influence in the daily life of the college and also a splendid training for future citizens and future mothers. Our catalogue shows not only a larger number of students than ever before, but also a faculty of real scholarship. The outside activities of the faculty include twenty-one University Extension classes in connection with extension work of Penn State College and the University; important work in translating in connection with the Department of Fine Arts of Carnegie Institute; over sixty lectures, addresses or entertainments before churches, clubs, schools and conferences; twenty-five educational conferences, both state and national. Undergraduate students in Social Service will attend with members of the faculty the National Conference of Social Work, which holds its fiftieth anniversary in Washington, D. C., this month. Faculty and students are intensely alive to all the interests of the present day.

It seems to me that all things are waiting for a successful issue of the campaign. Mindful of the fact that the Alumnae Recorder goes to a good many who are not able to be present on June 8, it may be well to say that after some preliminary months of planning on the part of the Board of Trustees, contracts were signed in February with one of the best firms in the country for the management of a campaign. Preparations have been in progress since March. The active campaign and detailed organization will come in the fall and early winter. Our goal is a million dollars for endowment and five hundred thousand for buildings. It is interesting to note that the interest in education in the state of Pennsylvania is bringing legislation to bear on the standardizing of colleges within the state as well as in other departments of the educational system. This brings us more than ever before, face to face with the actual necessity of up to date academic standing, as it is quite evident that proper resources and equipment will no longer be merely desirable but an actual requirement. Let us hope that our work together next year may be so successful that we shall have all good things at our command. The faculty and the student body pledge their heartiest efforts, and yesterday the president of the College Glee Club handed me a check for one hundred dollars the first undergraduate subscription to the endowment fund.

My hope in returning to Pennsylvania College for Women was to help in the final consummation of what we have all so long desired, and that the Alumnae, so loyal to me in past years, might feel that I wished to respond to that loyalty in every way possible. Let us look forward to the coming year with hope and confidence. As I write, the lovely campus is putting on its spring beauty, and preparations are going on for the old traditional May Day with its queen and court, the dear Alumnae children and the riot of color and strains of music so familiar to us. It all seems an omen for good!

Sincerely yours,

Cora Helen Coolidge.

Dean Mark's Letter

Dear Alumnae:

It has been my privilege in the past to greet you through these pages as your Field Secretary. Later our personal touch came through my being the keeper of the college records. In both of these offices I have been in close touch with you, and have enjoyed your friendship and your ever-ready help. Now, after seven years of service in the college, I have once more changed my office, and my devotion to the college and all its interests has deepened each year.

My first year as Dean of the college has been one of the happiest years of my life. It has been a rare pleasure to work with Miss Coolidge, and to have always at hand the benefit of her wise counsel, and the riches of her wide experience.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

What her presence has meant to the Student Body, you know as well as I. The many assurances of support from you, when I took up my new duties, and the feeling of close co-operation between the students and the Alumnae, have been strong factors in making this year what it has been.

I know you want to hear from me of the daily life of your Alma Mater, so that you may keep in touch with changes as they come. It has been a difficult matter to develop self-help among students in a small college, but each year much thought has been put upon this subject, and this year we have made some definite progress in the matter. In the Fall, all students who wished to do remunerative work were asked to register in my office, and all who had work to be done were asked to register. As a result, four students have waited on the tables for one or more meals each day; a large number have taken care of children in the neighborhood, a number have done typing, assisting in the laboratory, and in the library, accompanying for dancing classes, etc. Others have done work outside of college, such as social case work, clerical work in offices, clerking in stores, playground work, etc. We hope to see this matter more thoroughly organized in the Fall, and already have applications from a number of students who wish to help defray their college expenses next year. We hope later to establish a loan fund, from which students may borrow money for their college expenses, without interest, a fund that will increase from year to year, and so be of assistance to more students as time goes on.

In February we devoted a week to a most interesting Vocational Conference. We first had our own special departments of Music, Social Service and Spoken English presented to the students as professions, by the heads of these departments. Other professions which were presented by outside speakers were Law, Librarianship, Religious work other than missionary work, Department Store work. These special talks were rounded out and correlated by Miss Florence Jackson, Director of the Bureau of Vocational Advice and Appointment, Boston, who spent three days with us, speaking, and holding individual conferences with the students.

A tradition of the college has been its ten o'clock rule, which means that every student in the dormitories has had to be in bed at 10:15 each night, except for a limited number of special permissions. At the beginning of the second semester the students in Woodland Hall voted to try a new plan, namely, that the house should be quiet at 8 o'clock in the evening, with no more disturbance after that hour and that every student should be in her own room and quiet at 10:15, with the privilege of sitting up until she wished to go to bed. In April the students in Berry Hall asked to try this plan, and were granted the privilege. The plan is still on trial, and thus far has proved satisfactory. Its distinct advantage is that it enables the student to complete a particular piece of work she is on, and at the same time it allows the student who wishes to retire early to do so and not be disturbed by the confusion attendant upon the old plan when the quiet hour was relaxed from ten to ten-fifteen to permit all students to get ready for bed.

We have had lectures each week on a variety of interesting subjects, and our informal Vesper Services on Sunday evenings have been greatly enjoyed.

Nowhere could there be found a finer spirit than has been shown this year in our student body. There has been splendid progress made in the development of the Student Government Association, and a strong desire shown to establish those things which are best and most worth while for the college. In this and in all things pertaining to our college life the Faculty have given splendid support and co-operation.

Our registrations for the coming year are already far in excess of the registration for any former year at this time. The year before us is a year of promise, and we can expect great things since we, Alumnae, Faculty and Students are working as a harmonious whole.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Helen Marks.

College Activities

The Student Government Association.—This year our Student Government has been very gratifying, for the Student Government Board has felt that it had the cooperation of the student body to a greater extent than ever before.

In the process of development the constitution had grown complex and cumbersome, so the constitution has been revised and simplified with the purpose of uniting the dormitories and the main Student Government Organization into a centralized whole.

Hazing has been abolished and in a very interesting way. The freshmen class brought a resolution to the student body to the effect that they, as a class, would not participate in hazing next fall and recommended that their action be made permanent. The students unanimously adopted the resolution.

College and student problems have been discussed by the Faculty-Student Council, where the view points of both faculty and students are exchanged. Also Student Government Association meetings were held every week, where the students had lively and intelligent discussions of their own problems.

The Association was represented by its president, at the Woman's Intercollegiate Student Government Conference at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg, Virginia, in November.

We feel that the year has been a very worth while one, not only because we have accomplished a few things but because the spirit has been so fine on the part of all the students.

Dorothy E. McCormick, President.

The Young Women's Christian Association.—The Y. W. C. A. started the college year successfully with a campaign for membership which resulted in the largest number of members in its history, that number being 135.

Various prominent visiting speakers were secured for the weekly meetings of the Association. Dr. McClurkin, a member of our Board of Trustees and a leading minister of the city, conducted a series of four interesting and inspiring services which were open to the entire student body.

Another interesting feature of this year's program was a series of four religious discussion group meetings led by Dr. Cora Helen Coolidge. Some of the subjects discussed were Faith, Evolution and its Relation to the Bible, Planning a Life, and The Trinity. These meetings proved to be very valuable and quite worth while to those who attended.

Voluntary assistance to the city Y. W. C. A. in its Girls' Clubs' activities was carried on again this year, as part of the Social Service program of our own Y. W. C. A.

Our annual contribution of thirty-five dollars to Madras

ALUMNAE RECORDER

College, India, was made again this year, in addition to helping furnish a student's room there. It was also definitely decided to adopt Madras as our Sister College in the Orient.

About twenty of the Y. W. C. A. members were the guests of the industrial girls of the McKeesport Y. W. C. A., who entertained them at supper and conducted them on a visit to the Tin Plate Mill in McKeesport, the Y. W. C. A. of the college in turn entertaining the industrial girls at the college during the first term. The Y. W. C. A. also took part in the Student-Industrial meetings of Pitt, Tech and P. C. W. and the industrial girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity.

The Y. W. C. A. will be well represented at Eaglesmere this year by ten delegates.

The plans for the Y. W. C. A. program for next year are well underconstruction and next year promises to be a very successful one.

Josephine S. Dickey, President.

Athletic Association.—The Athletic season for the year of 1922 and 1923 had its beginning in the celebration of our annual Mountain Day. The date set, Wednesday, October 18, proved to be a perfect autumn day and the college set out to enjoy itself. Two cars of the Butler Short Line took the students and faculty to the Lillian Rest Home, Valencia, where they had elected to have our outing. The time was spent in hiking and in playing games, of which the Hare and Hounds Chase was the chief event. About four o'clock we started home and arrived safely at six o'clock. The day was so much enjoyed that everyone hopes for a continuance of this custom from year to year.

The Hockey Season excited much attention this year. The rivalry between the classes was very high and reached its climax in the championship game between the Sophomores and the Juniors of whom the former were the winners.

However important hockey may be, it can never rival basket-ball. This season the teams came out with more "pep" than usual, all determined to win the College championship. Again the Juniors and Sophomores played the deciding game. It was hotly contested and only after a bitter fight was the honor awarded to the Sophomores who have now held it for two years in succession. An important note in these inter-class games is the spirit of friendly rivalry and good sportsmanship which predominates and which causes the games to be enjoyed both by the participants and by the on-lookers. As is the custom, an honorary varsity team was selected from all four classes.

The point system inaugurated last year has proved to be successful, and the students are winning their points in hockey, tennis, basket-ball, swimming and field-sports.

Due to the efforts of the Athletic Association the participation in sports is increasing every year and every girl can find her particular interest satisfied at P. C. W.

Lyda Hamilton, President.

The Arrow.—"The Arrow", a bi-monthly paper, has successfully completed its second year of existence. It has filled a need which we now realize was crying for a means of expression, and we hope that its work will be continued in the future.

The aim of "The Arrow" is to express all phases of student life and activity at the college, to give the students an opportunity to express themselves and their views, and to keep the Alumnae and former students informed of their class affairs and their class news.

The splendid support of the Alumnae during the past two years, not only in subscribing but in contributing news items and valuable suggestions, has been greatly appreciated. May they continue to keep us informed.

Marion T. Griggs, Editor.

The Glee Club.—The Glee Club of 1922-23 has had a very active and successful year. The club numbers fifty-five in its membership with Mrs. Rockwell, director, and Miss Williams, accompanist.

As in previous years the club kept several church engagements. Two invitations were extended from different radio broadcasting stations. This year made our second concert program to be broadcasted from the Westinghouse station of Pittsburgh.

The men's combined musical clubs of Carnegie Tech gave a joint concert with the P. C. W. Girls' Glee club at the college.

Another feature of the club was a concert given in Washington in the Masonic Temple under the auspices of the Knights Templar.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The formal Home Concert and Operetta was given in the college auditorium as a Passavant Hospital Benefit. It was one of the big social affairs of the college year. A monetary donation was made by the club to the Passavant Hospital to further its very needy work.

As the club has been most courageous in trying to do something for the betterment of the college, it has been the first undergraduate organization to make a subscription for the endowment fund.

Harriette W. Bowers, President.

The Dramatic Club.—The members of the Dramatic Club decided this year to study the contemporary dramatists according to countries. At the meeting given over to the study of French contemporary dramatists we had as our speaker Mr. Elmer Kenyon, Editor of the Drama League Review. Mr. Kenyon discussed especially the recent plays written by Paul Claudel.

Another of our meetings took the form of a tea given here at the college by the Pittsburgh Center of the Drama League in honor of Jane Cowl and Rollo Peters who were at that time playing in "Romeo and Juliet". The members of our Dramatic Club acted as aides at this tea. Elise Bartlette, a former student at Dilworth Hall and a member of the cast playing "Liliom" was entertained at luncheon by the Club. The opportunity was given us to go behind the scenes and meet Joseph Schildkraut who was playing the title role in "Liliom".

We felt very fortunate in having Mr. Ehrensberger, the National Executive Secretary of the Drama League of America, as another of our speakers during the year.

This year the club was able to carry out the plans begun last year to remodel the stage. Our stage in the college auditorium has been rebuilt and is now fully equipped with new draperies and a new lighting system.

"Make-Believe" a play by A. A. Milne was given as our annual Christmas play for children. Three performances were given, one on December 8 and on the following day a matinee and evening performance were given. The proceeds from this play were used toward paying for the new stage equipment.

"An Ideal Husband" by Oscar Wilde was chosen by the Seniors as their class play.

Marian Jobson, President.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Omega.—The Omega Society has a limited membership chosen with respect to scholarship and literary ability. Its work is the promotion of an interest in literature and the providing of opportunities in the art of expression.

This year's program was divided into four groups of plays; tragedy, comedy, satire, and social. The dramatists particularly discussed were John Galsworthy, Eugene O'Neil, Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, and Franklin P. Adams.

At the annual open meeting of the year Miss Minerva Hamilton, who is a graduate of P. C. W. and a former member of Omega spoke on the work of the Book Lovers' Shop in East End. The honorary member from the faculty also spoke to the club during the year. Miss Grace Hawk discussed "Pieces of Hate" by Heywood Braun and "Super and Supermen" by Philip Guedalla. Later, Dr. Doxsee spoke on works of Edwin Arlington Robinson.

In order to replenish the treasury a Japanese bazaar was held, March twenty-eighth, in cooperation with the International Relations Club of the college.

The society also conducted a short story contest, open to all students not already members of Omega.. A prize was awarded for the story judged best by the committee of faculty and club members.

Elizabeth Mason, President.

Phi Pi.—Phi Pi is the classical organization of the college and its object is to create among the students a keener interest in the classics. In contrast to last year's program which consisted of an exhaustive study of the city of Athens, this year's program was varied. The Rudens a comedy by Plautus, was presented at one meeting; at others, books and current magazines which are of interest to students of the classics were discussed. Explanations of a collection of stereopticon views, which was started for the club by Miss Green, was the interesting and profitable program for another meeting. A representation of Roman amusements, such as races, games, gladiatorial combats, etc., made an amusing program for the meeting to which all members came in characteristic Roman dress.

Leola Lindley, President.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

French Club.—The “Cercle Francais” is open to students of advanced standing in the French Department. It is organized for the promotion of a greater interest in the French language and literature. Short plays have been enacted by the various members of the Club. A special feature of the winter program, at which the students of Racine were present as guests, was the reading of selections from Racines “Andromaque” by Mme. de la Neuville.

Among the plays given are the following: “Maitre Pate-lin”, a farce of the fifteenth century, “Chez Jean de Lafontaine” by Sasha Guitry, celebrating the tricentenary of the death of Moliere, “L’Ete de la Saint Martin” by Meilhac Halevy, “Ma Tante” by H. Greville. Other plays are in preparation. The members of the club are also eligible to the “Alliance Francaise” of Pittsburgh.

Hilda FitzRandolph, President.

International Relations Club.—The International Relations Club is composed of those who elect advanced history or political science. Membership is limited to twenty-five students and the faculty of the history department.

Monthly meetings were held during the year and varied programs were presented including discussions of current events, reports on late books of general interest along historical lines and a debate in the senate on the Four-Power Treaty.

Baron Korff spoke to the student body as a whole and later to the club on the Near East question.

In connection with Omega the club held a most successful and very pretty Japanese bazaar.

Eliza Peterson, President.

The Science Club.—The Science Club composed of advanced Chemistry students and honorary members from the faculty, has been unusually small this year. Unfortunately, very little has been accomplished, for with such a limited group it is difficult to discuss the larger topics that are of so much interest. The plan of the Club this year had been a study of “Food Vitamines and Protein Metabolism”.

The aim for next year is a complete reorganization of the Club. Members will be drawn from the Mathematics, Biology, and Physics departments as well as from Chemistry. This larger group of girls, with varied scientific interests, will have the aid of a program committee and we are all sure that their club will be most successful.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Julia Matthews, President.

Lambda Pi Mu.—Last year the upper classmen in the social service department organized a club, the purpose of which was the discussion of current social problems. Interesting speakers have come to us throughout the year who have brought enlightenment as to their special work and new ideas as to their interests. This meeting of people engaged in practical social work with our little group has been invaluable.

At Christmas time the club gave a party for the children at the Woods Run settlement under the leadership of Mr. Wilson.

The benefit bridge which was given for the students of the college has been the beginning of the establishment of a fund which is to be used to supplement the income of a student receiving a scholarship, by helping her with her incidental expenses. It is hoped that this sum will increase steadily.

Although the club is still very young we hope to do bigger things and have a closer alliance with the Cora Helen Coolidge Club.

Adelaide P. FitzGerald, President.

Honor For The Arrow

(Copied from The Arrow of April 12th)

"The American Student," a publication devoted to providing the public with the most worth-while educational views, has just brought out its initial issue which represents three years of very hard work.

This magazine quotes from various student publications, including three quotations from The Arrow.

But a much greater honor is given to us. On the back page is a heading "Can Women Edit College Newspapers?" The answer. And below is a facsimile of the front page of an issue of three college newspapers: The "Wellesley News", the "Bryn Mawr News," and "The Arrow."

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The first is in its thirty-first volume, the second in its ninth, while "The Arrow" is only in its second year, its first issue having appeared on the opening day of P. C. W. in 1921.

This honor would certainly seem to show that P. C. W. although a so-called "small college" is capable of supporting a newspaper worthy of competing on equal terms with those of far larger institutions, and as such is greatly appreciated, especially since The Arrow is so young."

Letters From Honorary Members

Down in Sewickley we are again lost in admiration of the miracle of spring-time. The orchards are all alight with blossoms, more abundant than for years, giving promise of heavy fruitage soon to come, if our weather continues kind.

Among these wonders, my thoughts turn to the young girls, so like these blossoms, in their fresh purity—full of promise for future blessing to the nation—being graduated from colleges all over the land, but particularly to those about to leave our own dear "Pennsylvania College for Women". What hopes and aspirations they all carry with them into a sick world waiting for their intelligent ministry and to give it inspiration for progress and the solution of problems in many lands!

We turn to these girls in their blossoming beauty, of the courage and hope and faith of youth, eager to practice the principles imbibed from study and from the influence of a faithful faculty, and we expect as rich a fruitage of achievement from the class of 1923 as from former classes.

The great effort soon to be made for enriching the college endowment, will no doubt, be among the "first fruits" from the new and old Alumnae. "God grant us, indeed, a rich harvest;" is the earnest desire and prayer of all those who love their Alma Mater truly, including the class of 1904, of which your correspondent is proud to be an honorary member.

Eleanor H. Nevin.

Your note brought me a breath of long ago, for I have not been in Pittsburgh for years. I am closing my chapter here. Have had two years in Los Angeles as Lecturer in Home Economics at the University in beautiful surroundings with light work, but my sisters are invalids and they feel they cannot have me 3000 miles away, so I am going back to Urbana, Ill., in June.

I hope I can see something of my Eastern friends next year. If I do I shall certainly include P. C. W. in my itinerary. Through Miss Brownlee and Miss Meloy I keep some touch, but I would like to see the old friends "face to face." I have motored more than 1000 miles in California and plan to see Yosemite on my way home.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Remember me kindly to the old girls who still remember me.

Cordially,

Isabel Bevier.

My visit to the college in 1920 was so enjoyable that I have wished it might be repeated every year. Since then I have had a long winter in Summerville, So. Carolina, enjoying azalias, roses, wistaria and red birds. A leisurely journey north with long stops in Charleston, Richmond, Washington and Philadelphia.

This winter has been spent in the attractive college town of Swarthmore, but very soon my sister and I will be at home again in Hartford.

My interests range from the Ruhr situation and the Near East tragedy to our own political situation, and the prohibition problem. Church work also, especially foreign missions, and as a definite piece of work for mental stimulus reading French. Not a day has passed since October first, 1916, without some study or reading in that language.

My five years at the College were full of happy interest to me. My warmest regards, especially to "my girls."

Ever cordially,

Ellen Goodrich Means.

I am always glad of an opportunity of assuring the Alumnae, especially those whom I knew during my fifteen years' association with the College, of my deep and abiding interest in their welfare, and of extending an affectionate greeting to each of my former pupils in their widely scattered homes. Eleven years have passed since I left the College, but frequent visits and letters have kept its memories and interests very near to me. During that time many groups of students have passed in and out of its portals, whom I do not know personally, but my good wishes always follow them as they go out year by year to carry the influence of their Alma Mater into new homes and new fields of service. The past year has been an eventful one for me, bringing great changes into my life. Since leaving the College I have made my home in Brookline, Mass., with my mother, finding there a most delightful circle of friends and congenial and varied interests along lines of club and church work. Last summer our home was broken up by the passing away of my dear mother, at the advanced age of eighty-seven. About the same time my brother's wife died suddenly here, and he sent for me to come and care for his home and children. It was hard to leave Brookline, but I am glad to be able to be of service to the family in their great need, and know my place is here for the present.

The life here is full of interest and new experiences. My brother is professor of organ and musical composition in the State University of Kansas, and I am living in the midst of a musical atmosphere quite new to me. There are five thousand students here, and a faculty of several hundred interesting men and women.

I enjoy the home life also and the association with my brother's attractive and gifted children.

I am looking forward to a long trip through the West this summer, visiting some of our National parks, and getting my first glimpse of California. Perhaps I may meet some of our Pennsylvania College girls there whom I should dearly love to see.

With cordial greetings for all,
Alice T. Skilton.

Since it is impossible for me to greet you in person at this Commencement season, I am particularly glad to greet you through the pages of your Alumnae Recorder. Letters from faculty and students, one visit to Pittsburgh, and, most of all, the news in the Arrow have kept me somewhat in touch with the college this year and I rejoice with you in all that has been accomplished and will be accomplished in the near future. I feel as if I still belonged to P. C. W. and had my share in any good fortune that is hers. Perhaps I can consider myself more closely connected with the Alumnae Association than ever before. Let me pretend that I have graduated (it took me five years to do it) and am now an Alumna dean. Is there any such creature?

ALUMNAE RECORDER

I am sure that all the hard work connected with the campaign will only serve to draw us all together—alumnae, students, faculty, trustees, and friends of the college—and that we can even now look forward with confidence to the outcome—with such a foundation to build on, failure is inconceivable.

My own work as Dean of Women at the College of Wooster has proved to be exceedingly interesting. The year has been delightful in every way and I am looking forward to bringing to completion next year many of the things which could only be begun this year. Above all things I want to assure you that it will always be a real pleasure to me to welcome any of you in Wooster.

With the most cordial greetings to you all,
Florence K. Root.

CLASS NEWS

Class of '73

Mary Renshaw Chislett, who entered the College the year it opened and was a member of the first class to be graduated, died on December 6, 1922. By her death her family loses a devoted wife and mother. She ever displayed an active and sincere interest in the College.

A Tribute: One, who from early youth held her in highest esteem, likes to picture Mary Renshaw Chislett, our first graduate, in her commencement gown of white, standing, as does our College, on a sunlit eminence, holding aloft for all time our standard—"The Purple and the White"—for the hundreds who have passed through the College portals, and for the countless throngs yet to enter them, a model of unselfish devotion to our Alma Mater and of ideal Christian womanhood.

Class of '74

Rebecca Renshaw spent some time in New York, Washington and Atlantic City this Spring.

Lee Singleton Paull suffered a sad loss in the death of her husband, February 28, 1923.

Class of '75

Lafie Reid, whose visit East with her sister Alma, both she and her friends so much enjoyed, is back again in San Diego.

Ida Harding Ashman is still living in her old home in Wheeling, but it is not the same home to her without the dear husband.

Nettie Jamison Vincent has experienced some of the cares as well as the joys of a grandmother the past year. She is as ever, an adept at making a graceful—not to say flattering speech—as was proved when she recently delivered what was programmed as “An Appreciation” on the occasion of Jennie Wallace’s turning over to another her much loved office of recording secretary of the Allegheny Presbyterial Missionary Society which she had held for thirty-three years.

Jennie Wallace has spent the year at home in Sewickley with the exception of a brief sojourn at a sanitarium following an attack of flu.

Mary Cleaver Hain is very happy to have at home once more her daughter and her family, who have recently returned from India, where they have been living for some time.

Another break has come in the class circle. Mary McIntosh Wells died December 28, 1922, at her home in Cleveland, and was laid to rest two days later in Spring Hill Cemetery, Wellsville, Ohio. There are left to mourn her loss three sons, Edwin, in Nevada; Louis and Hugh in Cleveland; and one daughter, Beulah, who took her degree in medicine at Johns Hopkins last June. The strain of her mother’s long illness following closely upon Beulah’s graduation told severely upon her health, which she has spent the winter in Florida trying to regain.

A. Jane Wightman was three months in a hospital this year with an infected hand, but is fortunately improved though still under treatment.

Class of '79

Westanna McKay Pardee reports the births of two grandchildren—Elizabeth Muldoon on April 9, 1923, and James Otto Nichol, son of Helen Pardee Nichol, '19, on October 18, 1923.

Class of '80

Two grandchildren appear on the questionnaire of Eliza Wilson McKnight. A granddaughter, Anne Arrott McKnight born on July 11, 1922, and a grandson, Donald Maclaran Simons, Jr., born August 13, 1922.

Annabelle McConnell is teaching at the Thomas Wightman School.

Class of '81

'81 is honored! The new Dean of P. C. W., Miss Mary Helen Marks, is the daughter of our own Sara Fredericks Marks. '81 extends congratulations to Sara and her very best wishes to Dean Marks.

Emma Kearns Coyle, with her usual enthusiasm and wonderful executive ability has been keeping "College activities to the fore" planning and carrying on a theatre benefit, two rummage sales and a dinner and bridge dance, all for the benefit of the College endowment fund. Emma has a venturesome faith in results when undertaking a benefit for the College endowment fund.

Fanny Axtell Harman spent the winter in Florida. Fanny writes "our youngest daughter, Phyllis Axtell Harman graduates at Vassar in June and has been honored with membership in the Phi Beta Kappa Society and is entitled to wear the gold key." Fanny has two daughters and two sons married and there are twelve grandchildren.

Elizabeth Thomas Imhoff's son is a fellow at Mellon Institute and has invented an electric galvanizing kettle which is an important contribution to processes of this type. She has sold her Penn Avenue property in the East End and is leaving Pittsburgh to make her home in Washington, D. C., and the South.

Class of '83

It is very gratifying to hear from "the girls of '83" at least once a year, and your secretary appreciates very much the letters received, even if they contain no news of startling import. They prove that the same old "esprit de corps" unites us in a spirit of undying love and friendship.

Rachel Aiken continues her ministry of love to her dear mother at Atlantic City, who was very ill in February, but at present is much better. Rachel and I enjoyed some very delightful little visits together last October during a sojourn at the City by the Sea.

Jennie Jackson also devotes her time to the affectionate care of her dear "Aunt Jennie."

Mary Acheson Spencer reports two new grandchildren, Adeline Virginia Curry and Charles Spencer Nimick.

Anna Lysle McLain gives her usual modest report of a very useful life—active in good work.

Anna McCullough Ogden has had a pleasant winter of relaxation in Palm Beach and Pinehurst, where she became imbued with the golf spirit. She sends love to all "the girls."

Blanche Evans Rust still resides in Cleveland, enjoying the companionship of her daughter and son-in-law, who reside in the adjoining apartment.

In two years, no reply has been received from Nellie Neyman Haines, and we are unable to account for the silence.

Incredible as it may seem, dear classmates, Father Time's merry bell is ringing down the curtain to-day on four decades, chuckling as he rings it, ready to raise it again upon the opening fifth decade. Please notice that the truth has been broken very gently in the expression "four decades," so as not to shock you too violently, for Anna McLain writes that she almost had an attack of heart failure at the suggestion. It does not sound quite so blunt to enumerate in decades, but without any camouflage, it amounts to the same thing—in plain parlance, we have been members of this Alumnae forty years.

This fact suggests many heart-searching questions. In how far have we measured up to our privilege and to our responsibility? We leave the question with each of us for meditation in the quiet hour.

It would be a sad condition if we were satisfied with our own inventory of results; but with the encouragement and inspiration of maturity, may we not render a better account in the coming years.

Forgetting our mistakes and our failures, so fully and freely pardoned in Calvary, let us go forward in the spirit of that exquisitely beautiful expression of purpose and hope drawn by the Divine Hand—"Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God, which is in Christ Jesus."

If that is the supreme goal of our aspirations, all lesser ambitions and activities will fall within their proper sphere, and we shall one day hear the glad "Well done." The prose of forty years we all know who have lived it, but to-day we would refresh ourselves with the poetry of life in retrospection and in anticipation.

Looking down Time's lengthening vista,
At the farther end appears
Vision of ten white-robed maidens
At the threshold of the years.

They are entering the portal
Of a new and untried life,
And the future looms before them
All unknown, with promise rife.

From these College walls emerging,
Fresh from Alma Mater's care,
By youth's buoyancy enchanted,
They rejoice to do and dare.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Over some the rosy prospect
Of a new-found love doth fall,
Others view more sombre pathway,
Each responds to duty's call.

In each life rich flowers are nurtured,
Fed by sunshine and by rain,
And the note of faith triumphant
Soars aloft through joy or pain.

Ah! we thank our Alma Mater,
As we gather here to-day,
For the soul-strength she promoted,
As we dwelt beneath her sway.

Riches of the mind she opened
From her treasures manifold—
Science, Literature and History—
Taught us how to test the gold.

"No uncertain sound" she gave us—
Truth in firm, constructive cast—
Our equipment for life's battle
We shall treasure to the last.

Opportunity is knocking,
We may still responsive prove,
Answer nobly to life's challenge
With rich service wrought in love.

Life but groweth richer, deeper,
As we learn to love His will,
With each vict'ry comes fresh courage,
As we climb life's rugged hill.

It is worth the climbing, Sisters,
As we scale the heights above—
When we reach the glorious summit,
"We shall be like Him" we love.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Not for great achievement, mark you,
But for faithfulness to death,
Is the "Crown of Life" awarded,
So the World's Redeemer saith.

As we've journeyed, two have left us,
Answering not the roll call here,
Summoned to a higher service,
They in glory now appear.

Look aloft! a great "Commencement"
Beckons to this upper tryst,
With our Saviour and our loved ones
"More than conquerors" through our Christ.
Georgina C. Negley.

Class of '84

I regret having so little of interest to send to the Recorder this year. Miss Cark reports no news of any kind. Mrs. Elliott continues her library work at Monmouth College, Ill. Mrs. Stillwell sends no report at all. Miss Meloy, I understand, is pursuing the same course of teaching at the College as last year. My own activities are centered in the Civic Club, Daughters of the American Revolution, Consumers' League, Y. W. C. A., and some other minor duties. Of course we all hope for a wonderful campaign for the endowment fund to place our College where it rightfully belongs. With greetings to all members of our dear Alumnae,
Gertrude W. Holmes.

Class of '86

Eleanor Stevenson Lloyd spent the winter months at Pinehurst, North Carolina.

Alice Wells is delightfully flippant with her questionnaire. She reports that she has three children by proxy and her position is—The Goat! Her employer is Driver, Pushem & Co., and the nature of her work "grubbing, stitching and darning!" There are many alumnae who belong to this profession.

Maud Aiken Wright announces the marriage of her daughter Jane to Mr. Burnham Carter of Plainfield, N. J., on Christmas Day, 1922.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Class of '88

The Class of 1888 has maintained an unbroken circle till this year when the Secretary regretfully reports the death of Alice Stockton. This occurred January 1, 1923, after several months of illness. Although never very strong she was most courageous and with this characteristic to the fore she followed her College course by study at Chicago University, after which she returned to P. C. W. as the President's Secretary. Some years ago she moved to New York where she was a successful teacher and private tutor. Alice Stockton was ever loyal to her Alma Mater and returned for Alumnae Day whenever possible. Her view of life was cheerful, her disposition kind, and the same courage and faith which marked her career were manifest at its close.

Elizabeth B. Armstrong.

Class of '89

Elizabeth Wallace is now Mrs. Stanton L. Lambert.
Elizabeth Riggs teaches art to high school students.
Mary Breed is Director of the Margaret Morrison Carnegie College of the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Class of '90

Helen Brown is teaching Latin and English at South High School.

In a letter from Lillian Hill O'Neill, she tells us she has been unable to do any active work for over a year, having spent most of the time in a hospital, at the doctor's or in bed. The last of February she had a very interesting visit in Harrisburg, representing Washington county at the formation of the Pennsylvania State Council of Republican Women.

Class of '92

Eliza Bryant Barker's daughter Harriet, is in this year's class at P. C. W.

Last summer Nettie Hays Flack moved to Edgewater, N. J. Her only son, Robert, entered Columbia last fall and plans to specialize in journalism.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

A very active person is Sara Milholland even if she does live in the South. She is a member of the director's board of the Virginia League of Women Voters, Chairman of the Child-Welfare Association of Norfolk County. She also is a member of a woman's reading club which collects old Scotch and English folk songs.

College benefits have absorbed some of Etta Easton Martin's time this year. She is especially appreciative of the support the out-of-town members have given the benefit committee.

Class of '93

Bessie Lawrence Barnes, Mrs. William R. Watson, was born at Wilksburg, Pa., on October 3, 1873, and lived at Joliet, Ill., during her early childhood. She attended the Pennsylvania College for Women, graduating from that institution in 1893. After graduation, she taught for a short time in Miss King's school in Pittsburgh, later taking a position in the Carnegie Library at Braddock.

When the Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh was opened in 1895 she was appointed head of the Order Department, retaining her connection with that institution until she married to William R. Watson in 1901. During eight years' residence in Sacramento and San Francisco, California, she was active in church work, in women's clubs and charitable organizations. The last ten years of her life were spent in Albany, N. Y., where she was prominently identified with St. Andrew's Episcopal church, the City Club and the Women's Club of Albany, of which she was a director at the time of her death. During the years she spent in Albany, she became greatly interested in story telling to children, speaking on the subject before various organizations and having supervision of a corps of workers who told stories in the public schools and libraries. She was active in church and Sunday school work and was treasurer of the Albany Diocesan Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary. While motoring to New York on October 30, 1922, she lost her life in an accident near Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Interment was in the Albany Rural Cemetery.

In Memoriam: Elizabeth Barnes, "Bess", when I first came to know her in our Freshman year at P. C. W., had lost her mother, but a short time before. She was the eldest of a family of four, the youngest, Gladys, being but a baby. Her devotion to her motherless brother and sisters, her conscientious care and supervision of their welfare, their education and their recreation, won the admiration of all who knew her and deeply impressed her more carefree associates among the college girls. Her cares were made much heavier by the fact that her father was an invalid and financial cares were also on her young shoulders.

Her uncomplaining courage, her unfailing cheeriness, her devotion to her family, her duties and her church were an inspiration and a wonderful example to her friends and associates. These qualities were hers to the last. The tragic accident that snuffed out her useful life as a candle is extinguished took to higher service a loyal friend, a sister with a mother heart, a wife who was a true companion and helpmate, a church worker who was devoted, conscientious and untiring in service.

Without children of her own, she made a specialty of story telling for children and contributed her services constantly in that line in library work and through her church. Children loved her. Her tenderness and love will be remembered by many through long years to come. Her faith was unswerving. Her work done here, her influence will long live after her. Her service unquestionably is continuing in a higher sphere.

Class of '03

1903-1923! Twenty years have come and gone since we so happily and enthusiastically planned and carried out our class day and commencement festivities! Twenty years since we closed our books and our formal education and bade farewell to our school-days and our beloved Alma Mater on the Hill! It doesn't seem possible that it all happened twenty years ago. It seems but yesterday. Our growing children make us realize most sharply the flight of time but they and their interests help to keep us young. In the past years we have been learning how to live and what life means. It has brought us many joys and sorrows but in the main it has been very good to us.

There were nine of us to start with; five have married and four are actively engaged in the world's business. Three have taught but one has deserted the teaching ranks and is a food expert in the U. S. Agricultural Department at Washington, D.C.—Ruth Johnstin. Anna Hunter teaches English at the Schenley High and Hilda Sadler is Secretary of the Belmar School and a teacher of typewriting and short-hand in the Schenley High Evening School. Eleanor Fitzgibbon is blazing the trail for women in the stock-raising business and this spring she becomes the first woman importer of fine Jersey cattle. She went to England and the Isle of Jersey last January and brought back seventy-five head of fine cattle which she expects to auction off at her public sale in June. She deserves success for her enterprise and courage and may she meet with it!

Anna Petty Irvin, Harriet Duff Phillips, Mary Wilson Coleman, and Sara Pfeil Baker are busy raising their interesting families and helping to better the world a little with their community work. Jennie McSherry Smith lives with her father and mother and tries to keep them moving; last summer she and her mother moved about Europe for three months and this spring they move into a new house after living seventeen years in the old one. Such things make life full of color and motion and help the years to pass quickly.

In this day and age we seldom have time to look back. We do so only at Commencement time. Then we pause a moment to think of the dear old times and the dear old friends and the fun we used to have at dear old P. C. W. It warms and stirs our hearts and brings a kind of peace and happiness. We have passed thru twenty years without a break in our ranks or a breach in our friendships and we have tried to live the years well. We stand now on the threshold of a new twenty-years and we trust they may be as full and happy and better than the years that are past. May they be the best of all. With love,

Jennie McSherry Smith.

Class of '04

The secretary writes: The year has been quiet and uneventful for the class. One of the members describes it for herself and the rest of us by saying "Happy is the nation that hath no history."

Helen Thomas Larimer had the sad experience of losing her father.

Elizabeth Carpenter Dearborn says she "has nothing notable except that Ruth is in High School preparing for college."

Edna Houston McKee is as ever indispensable to Alumnae activities.

Miss Brownson's good letter to the Recorder Board rounds out the class news, from it we quote:

"About the only bit of information asked for, which I can supply, is my new address. This, I hope is a permanent one. It is in Germantown, near a station of the Philadelphia and Reading R. R., about half an hour out from the center of the city. You see, therefore, that I have joined the large army of commuters. But the freedom and comfort of living in a residential section, more than repays one for the exertion and time required for the making of trips to town. My sister, Mrs. Andrew T. Taylor and I have a three room, bath and kitchenette apartment on the third floor of an old stone house, standing far back from the street, in about an acre of ground, with nice lawn and many trees. I came here last Autumn to spend the winter with my sister, who is alone, her youngest girls being now in college; but we are so happy and comfortable together, that we shall probably make the arrangement permanent. My keen interest and hearty good wishes go out now as always to our dear Alma Mater and all the enterprises undertaken in her name. I wish for Her the largest possible measure of success!"

Here is an interesting note from Betty Pew Bell in Mount Eden, Cal.:

I would not like to say that I am not employed as I am as busy as you make them. We have a ten acre ranch with two cows that give regular California cream, and five hundred chickens that are now laying about three hundred and fifty eggs a day. Our eggs all go to the hatchery, so even with the present low price of eggs, they are worth while. Then every available corner of our ranch we have planted in flowers for the market. Our sweet peas and six week stocks are our money makers. When you see some of the car loads of straw flowers that are shipped from California, it may interest you to know that some may have come from the Bell ranch.

This enthusiast in ranching reports yet another crop: three girls and one boy.

Harriet Kerr is assistant to the Purchasing Agent at the Union Switch & Signal Co., at Swissvale.

Class of '06

Outside of the questionnaire there appears no news for the Recorder. All three of us are just busy. Verna and Willa might have something interesting to tell if they would just tell it but as they don't I can't. Unfortunately, we are all so far apart we have to depend on letters and as we write them they are most unsatisfactory.

Edith Gray Winrow.

From the questionnaires it appears that Edith Gray was married to Captain Winrow last October, that Verna Madtes Rifenberick continues as teacher of Latin at Monessen High School and Willa McNitt is Technician in charge of the city laboratory at Douglas, Arizona. She defines her work as clinical pathology, sexology, clinical laboratory technique, milk and water analysis.

Class of '07

The 1907 girls are such modest people and have passed thru the year in their accustomed quiet, but dignified way. Everybody says, "I didn't do anything this year," when asked for a report. But we don't take this absolutely literally. We haven't yet found any of the number really idle and looking for something to occupy her time. You only have to try to get helpers for a rummage sale or a benefit, to find out how busy people are.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

There was a class reunion at the Holiday time, with all the girls in attendance, and that is a happening unique enough to report.

Ellen McKee has been at home during the year, and in evidence at most P. C. W. gatherings.

Clara Niebaum is still at her post in the Aspinwall High School, and has learned enough Spanish to teach it to others.

Grace Stevenson McKibben clings to Coraopolis with an unrelaxing grasp, but we don't blame her—it is so delightful there. We see her often and are thus content.

Mary McKee is Assistant Professor of Chemistry in Connecticut College, New London, Connecticut, and delves into such things as organic and physiological chemistry. The rest of us don't know much about such things, but we try our best to pronounce the words correctly, and we look with awe at Mary, because she claims an intimate acquaintance with them.

Bess Johnson McGinnity does a thousand things 'twixt rise and set of sun, and wonders afterward why she has been so busy, for she can't see that she has accomplished much in spite of the rush.

Thus another year has passed so swiftly that we can hardly believe it has gone. We hope they may all be as happy as this.

B. J. McG.

Class of '09

The class of 1909 has experienced great sorrow this year in the death of Leila Estep Herold on September the twenty-fourth. All who knew Leila loved and admired her and can appreciate what a void her death has caused.

We have little else to report this year.

Irma Beard is the only one who sent in an answer to her questionnaire. Irma is head of the English department of York Community High School, Elmhurst, L. I.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Emma Coulter Sargent is still enjoying her beloved—Whittier, California.

Gladwin Coburn Challinor is still so busy in East Orange that none of us ever hear from her.

Carla Jarecki Powers has just made a short visit in Pittsburgh on her way back to Sandusky after a winter in Seabreeze, Florida.

Grace Tatnal is still teaching in Harrisburg.

Eva Cohen Jackson has all her time occupied trying to raise her four year old daughter from a state of great imperfection to one of perfection.

Eva Cohen Jackson.

Class of '11

One might have supposed that as a result of the letters sent to each member, there would have been an unusual amount of information for the Recorder letter. Since I have received only three replies which contained nothing except addresses the letter must of necessity be brief.

We have two new babies—Margaret Green's daughter, who arrived just too late for last year's report and Alice Darragh's son, who came in October.

There has been quite a change in occupation for as we formerly had three-fourths of our number in the school teaching profession, now there are only two—Edna and Maggie May. Florence Canerdy, in addition to housekeeping and College duties finds time to substitute.

Gertrude Wayne made a visit to Pittsburgh in the fall and we saw her adorable young son now two years old.

Rumor has it that one more will join the ranks of the majority in the matrimonial adventure, but Irma neither affirms nor denies.

Mabel who has been housekeeping on Braddock Avenue, Swissvale, will move nearer Penn Avenue in May and Jean will attend Park Place School.

My two boys have been attending school there the past winter in the intervals when we have not been quarantined.

Sara reports nothing new. She manages to fill her time with church and occasional home duties as well as keeping up an active interest in college affairs.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Frances moved to a new home on Lloyd Street some two months ago and finds that home and three active children leave few idle moments, I can thoroughly appreciate how much work three children can make.

Rachel has been in Jeannette the past winter. We don't know anything of her children except that they are well, which, we begin to realize, is saying much.

If anyone has done anything startling which has not been mentioned they may trace it to their own reticence.

We almost forgot to mention Rosalie's and Minerva's new bookshop in East Liberty, which from all reports is a most interesting and profitable place to visit.

Belle McClymonds Marshall.

Class of '12

During the past year, three new babies have been added to our list of juveniles, making a total of thirteen thriving youngsters. John Van Ingen, son of Hazel Hickson Van Ingen, was born on December 16, 1922; Louise Amelia Robinson, daughter of Esther O'Neill Robinson, arrived on January 29, 1923, and Harry James Kerr, Jr., son of Frances Davies Kerr, born April 20, 1923.

Sorrow came to three of our girls. Mrs. John A Sharp, mother of Daisy C. Sharp, passed away on August 17, 1922, after an illness of several months. Elvira Estep Coburn lost her sister, Leila Estep Herold, and Beulah Pierce's father passed on a few days ago at New Mexico. Our hearts go out to these girls in sincerest sympathy.

Lillie Lindsay is Supervisor of Nutrition in the San Francisco Public Schools. I quote the following from Wid's questionnaire:

"We are trying to build up the mal-nourished children of San Francisco. This in a way is pioneer work and we are hoping to work out a practical way of teaching health habits that will function to all the children of the city and with the cooperation of existing agencies, bring up to par those children who are below normal."

Eleanor Davis Woodside reports a change of address, she having experienced the thrills of moving early in the spring.

Florence Bickel Swan reports no unusual happenings the past year, but no doubt there have been plenty of them for three youthful members of a household can usually keep things lively and interesting for the mother.

May Hardy Reed also had nothing unusual to report but I imagine Billy can keep his little mother fairly well occupied.

Martha Kim and her sisters spent the Easter vacation at Atlantic City, taking the rest cure. She and Daisy are teaching at the Westinghouse High School.

I have not heard from the rest of my classmates and consequently suppose all is well with them.

Frances Davies Kerr.

Class of '13

With the approach of our tenth anniversary, we had hoped for a 100% response from our members, but there are a few who have maintained an indiscreet silence. We suggest that they atone for said silence by answering present at the reunion.

Betty McCague, Margaret Minor and Florence Keyes are continuing to teach; Betty at Miss Dickinson's School in Sewickley, Margaret at Latimer Junior High, and Florence at Morgantown High School.

Grace Wilson continues to be busy in her role of Employment Secretary at Central Y. W. C. A.

Both Grace and Laila Clark Ament have suffered great sorrow during the past year and 1913 extends its sympathy to Grace in the loss of her father, Mr. Rowland Stewart Wilson, and to Laila, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Burton E. Clark, both passed away during March.

Louise Fletcher writes that she is "just a stay-at-home" this year.

Esther Rosenbloom Buka and her family spent part of the winter months at Miami, and, of course, are most enthusiastic about Florida.

Faye Atkinson McCune is still living on Staten Island, New York. Little Margaret is now six years of age.

From Sylvia Wayne comes the following interesting report:

"On February 24th, the Cleveland Chapter P. C. W. Alumnae Clubs held a tea at the Hotel Statler in honor of Miss Coolidge and Miss Root, who were in Cleveland for the N. E. A. Grace Wilson was a guest, too. We had 13, and felt quite proud of being able to gather together so many. Included in that number were some loyal Dilworth Hall girls. I can't tell you the thrill we had in seeing Miss Coolidge again and hearing her tell us about college."

Sylvia adds that she is still busy with club work and holding down the office of Publicity Chairman.

Jeanne Gray has chosen June 7th as the date of her marriage to Guernsey Orcutt, of Pittsburgh. Let's hope Jeanne may find time to show up at the reunion, so she can tell us all about it.

Speaking of weddings, we are all still suffering from shock received that November day when Helen Blair became Mrs. Harry Baumann. Why so surprised? Ask Mrs. "Beau."

Helen Craig Culley confidentially imparts the news that Mary Katherine (aged two) has made her debut into faculty teas. Talk about precocious children!

Emma Osterloh has her time well occupied with her three youngsters. The two oldest are attending school.

Of Christine, Clair, Martha, Elsie and "Titzell" we hear only indirectly. Rumor has it that Elsie, Claire and "Titzell" are still teaching; that "Tine" will be visiting home soon and that Martha is the proud mother of a fine young son.

Florence Frank has nothing more nor less interesting to report than the duties (and joys) of "housewife and mother," with several chairmanships to lend variety to her tasks.

F. K. F.

Class of '14

Nine years after our graduation finds the secretary of 1914 about ninety miles away from any information concerning the majority of her classmates. Everybody seems reluctant to vouchsafe any news regarding herself or her family. And my own personal knowledge is limited.

Marguerite McBurney was married in the fall to Mr. Howard Rigdon. She is making her home in Cleveland and writes from there that she expects to get back for our tenth anniversary next year.

Gertrude Goeddel was in a serious automobile accident in the early winter, and spent some weeks in the hospital recuperating. She left for California about Christmas and spent the winter there.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Pauline Burt is a truly energetic soul. She is studying at Yale on the first lap of her doctor's degree, Doctor of Philosophy, I mean, which as I remember was the main goal of her youthful ambitions.

Margaret Brown has been laid up with rheumatism most of the winter. She has made two trips here to have teeth extracted in the hope of removing the source of the infection, but there have been no marked results so far.

Margery Stewart is still teaching science in the Kenilworth High School, Wilamette, Illinois. She manages to get home to Pittsburgh twice a year and has brief visits with old friends.

Ethel Williams has moved to Pittsburgh. She and Rebecca Larimer, a former member of our class, have become neighbors once more here in the vicinity of the college. Ethel has two daughters and Becky has a boy and a girl.

As for the secretary, she pursues her harassed and mostly maidless career in the capacity of housekeeper, cook, nurse-girl and valet to two of the wildest small boys it has ever been her lot to come up against.

Marjorie Boggs Taylor.

Class of '15

We have interesting letters from our out-of-town girls. Jane Johnston is still at Randolph-Macon and has the distinction of being the head of the science department, which is something for us to be proud of.

Louise Kindl Crawford has lately taken up her abode in Scranton. She seems contented and happy—and reports that little Frances is fine.

Janet Campbell is busy all the time going to school, in search of more learning. She has now just about mastered typewriting and short hand.

Olga Losa is still reforming Woodlawn—and successfully too—apparently, as she acquires more and more responsibilities.

Mary Jeffery is making herself more and more indispensable to the young of Glenshaw.

Virginia Morris Speer is busy with her household, and Betty Cameron Frank is too, when she isn't on the road between her house and Edgewood.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The writer has changed her occupation in the last year to housewife—concentrated social work.

Mary Estep Starr.

Class of '16

It is with a new spirit that the class of '16 greets its sisters of the Alumnae Association, for we feel that the college of which we are already so proud is about to enter upon a new era of greater glory.

In sharing this responsibility I am sure the girls of '16 will not be lagging.

At the close of each of the last 365 days practically all of our girls could say "Something accomplished, something done."

Many of us have gone along the same paths we have been following but others have made some changes. For instance: Leila Hill is now Mrs. W. G. Lytle, Margaret Lee is Acting Director of Educational Work, Department of Fine Arts, Carnegie Institute, Grace Woodrow has become Director of the Social Service Department of the West Penn Hospital and Alice Laidlaw is now Secretary of the Wilkesburg Y. W. C. A.

Kathryn Robb Dunn and Leora Lewis Lambie have each acquired a small addition to the class of '16, but though Marian Lewis Lambie may attend P. C. W., Horace Stanley Dunn will have to seek an education elsewhere.

Francis E. Boale.

On the back of a '16 questionnaire appeared a delightful letter, part of which follows:

Here's my life history for the Recorder. I've been having a happy year and a busy one too.

Last August Gertrude and I took a little ocean voyage—Newfoundland and Nova Scotia.

The head of my Department resigned in September and no one as yet has been discovered who is willing to assume the responsibility of keeping me busy from 9 o'clock Monday morning until five o'clock Saturday night—hence my new and lengthy cognomen. I have certainly been living up to the first word of it "acting", the most interesting "acts" being visits to Boston, Worcester, New York and Cleveland for the purpose of observing educational methods in the various art museums.

ALUMNAE RECORDE

My next big "act" is in May when I attend the meeting of the American Federation of Art in St. Louis. I'm certainly learning the geography of the U. S. A.

Margaret M. Lee.

Class of '17

As we look back over the past six years, we begin to realize that we are slipping into the ranks of the "Old Grads". We don't actually admit it because we still have that "under grad" notion that anyone who dates back five years must indeed be a fossil and we can't seem to react successfully to that dormant condition. There seems to be a great deal of life before us and we insist on getting mixed up in a few stirring events.

As usual the babies occupy our attention, and we can also mention a wedding of importance. Three new babies during the past year, which brings the total to eleven,—seven boys and four girls,—the law of average does not seem to be working. A librarian might begin to compile a chronological and alphabetical index of them. The new names we need to learn are: Cynthianna Dunbar Saye, born Oct. 16, 1922; Elizabeth Anne White, May 22, 1922; (she is seeing America in her youth); James Otto Nichol, Oct. 18, 1922. It has been possible to get the mothers and some of their cherubs together for quiet little afternoon parties. When Estelle flits in, as it were (with two daughters) it is a signal for a reunion.

And as for the aunts and mothers. Carrie is rather silent as usual; she still teaches in Monongahela. Edna Balsiger is getting more than "a daily dozen" bringing up Dean Kroh. Ruth Law is at home. We do not say that Leah is silent. We know that she is busy. She is connected with the Travelers Aid Society.

Martha Crandall is experiencing a long rest which she doesn't care for. She has had to be separated from her husband and from her charming home in Butler, with a prescription for rest and very moderate exercise,—something on the order of the stately old Pavan of College days.

The other Martha is still in Cross Creek from which place we receive genial and unexpected letters. There are two children in the parsonage now.

Dorothea Eggers finds that her services are still required in the law office of Joseph Stadtfeld. Jane Errett seems to have found Pittsburgh a rather nice place to live in between journeys. She hopes to pull through the course at the Library School of Carnegie Institute and to get a position of wealth and ease.

Ruth Gokey is extremely busy with two rousing boys, in addition to pushing bridge benefits and rummage sales. She is going to move around the corner to Braddock Avenue, one of these days.

There are witnesses to the fact that among the strangers in Pittsburgh this winter were Katherine Keck and Ada Spriggs. Katherine is still teaching in the Greensburg High School and Ada teaches in Rochester. We think that Kate MacKenzie is still teaching.

Betty has caught something that is so very contagious that it can not even be named here, though we expect her to be about recovered by the time these notes reach the printer. She has moved into her own house in Swissvale, where there is a back yard. Here young Earl can practice the art of baseball, and Billy can use him for a football.

We are pleased to have Helen Pardee in Pittsburgh again, even though, like Louise, she has taken to the high hills. Even so, Helen can fly around as fast with two babies as she used to do with lesser worries. The same is true of Estelle, who believes in getting the children accustomed to trains. Should auld acquaintance be forgot? Not so.

Dorothy Stoeber shows us what to expect of an automobile, when it comes to travelling to and from Vandergrift. It means that we can see Dot once in a while at parties.

We were afraid that Aline was preparing to desert us. Her family has moved to Erie. But Aline says that she is not ready to leave this section and she promises to continue at Wilksburg High School.

We have one other new name on our list. Louise Reinecke became Mrs. John Mueller Thorne last October. The wedding took place in all kinds of weather, at the Mountain Home, near Uniontown. Since that time the map has two new places marked, namely, Skyland and Woodlawn.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

These are about equally distant from Pittsburgh. Louise comes up to Pittsburgh to lectures and to bookstores; her friends go to Woodlawn for baked ham and hints on house decorating.

On the whole the class is healthy, happy and busy; we are still able to enjoy a joke, eat a good meal, go out in all kinds of weather and read without glasses. Moreover we still curl our hair and powder our noses.

Class of '18

Our fifth anniversary must overawe some of the class for they are utterly silent as to their whereabouts and what-abouts. We suppose that those who have not reported are maintaining the status quo of last year.

Charlotte Hunker Hays still seems to consider Cleveland a good place in which to raise little Betty. Winona Sterling Hopewood, after keeping house for her parents in Mason-town during the winter, is now moving back to Uniontown to her own home. Young Master William is a lusty young man, "growing fast, beginning to talk, and climb on top of everything," to quote Winona. Ruth Logan Jordan and Mollie Davidson Nass merely answer "Present!" Emilie Kates Logue divides her time more or less equally among husband, parents, Red Cross, and her other friends.

Dorothy Minor reports that she "has joined the Chalk Pushers' Union" and is now attached to the Latimer Junior High School, Pittsburgh, as a teacher of English. Rachel Alexander spent the winter in California, but will return to Washington in the fall, to resume her work as a teacher of English, in the Washington High School. Ruth Kauffman continues to teach Math in the Sebring, Ohio, High School. Eleanor Fuller is teaching Algebra in the Turtle Creek Union High School.

No others have given written permission to publish their dark deeds, and, therefore, the alumnae of P. C. W. will have to miss the lessons which the experiences of these silent members might afford. The undersigned must speak for herself, and state that she spends her time trying to teach children (and incidentally English and Shorthand) in the Fifth Avenue High School, Pittsburgh.

R. O. W.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

The editors received a very interesting letter from Kamala Cornelius dated March 12, 1923 from which we quote: "My work has been going on as usual. I am now teaching in Madras and I am quite happy to be here as my people are now living here. This school belongs to the United Free Church Mission of Scotland and will have, I think about 30 pupils. It is quite near by the Sea, so we enjoy the beautiful sea breeze always. I take much interest in the girls. I have started class colour system. The sixth form girls, who are leaving High School, will hand over their colours, the Gold and White, to the first year High School girls, who were their sister class. We do it a little different from the P. C. W. Colour Day.

We have girls here from all parts of India. They all speak different languages, but all the school work, of course, is done in English. I wish I could go back to P. C. W. and study now that Miss Coolidge is there. I can never forget the three pleasant years I spent with her—I owe her a great deal for what she has done for me."

Class of '19

In the past year nineteen nineteen has been well represented in business, educational and domestic circles. We feel that we have made rather noticeable progress for we have acquired five husbands, three "husbands to be" and three sons.

Gertrude Bair writes of very busy and interesting times in the Ashville Normal School, where she is conducting classes and entering into various school activities with her usual vim and enthusiasm. Sara Crouse, Helen Bell, Mary Crawford and Jane Sheppard are also carrying on the noble work of educating the rising generation to be one hundred percent Americans.

Augusta Rogers, Helen Ailes and Marjorie Errett are still flourishing in the business world. Our five brides are Florence Farr, Laura Taber, Ethel Davis, Christelle Jefferson and Marjorie Barron.

Valeska Jarecki reports thrilling experiences abroad. Martha Brownlee Bovard is enjoying life in a "small town". Laura Taber Barbour, who is spending an interesting year in Edinburgh, writes that her view of the famous castle repays her trials with a huge coal stove.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Eva Weston Reif has returned from Hamilton, Ohio and is living in Pittsburgh.

We are also glad to welcome Sidney Charles Guthrie, Jr., William Farr Betz and George Leslie Chick, who already are congratulating themselves on having chosen P. C. W. as their Grand Alma Mater.

Class of '20

The class of 1920 has successfully weathered another stormy year. No luncheons or teas have been held since last June. But in spite of the fact that these delightful opportunities to meet and learn about each other have been denied us, we are still able to give a fairly accurate account of the class as a whole.

One of our number is known to have deserted the teaching profession. Ethel Perry is now in Hornes' Educational Department and we wish her luck in the new field.

Imogene Armstrong is rising above the common and vulgar forms of entertainment. At any rate we saw her in a huge crowd pushing her way into the Syria Mosque one Saturday afternoon in February to see the ever delightful Mary Garden.

Of Eleanor Bardsley, Edna and Clara we have heard nothing. "Still water runs deep" is a good old saying and we shan't be surprised to some day hear them making a loud noise from the top rung of the ladder of fame.

Bettys Shipley and Jamison seem greatly devoted to their homes. But we do wish they would come around Pittsburgh at a Commencement time so we all could see them again.

Julia and Helen enjoy eating in McCreery's. At any rate we see them there frequently looking contented and at peace with the world.

Eleanor Newell, according to our source of information, is pursuing the same path as last year. The Personnel Department of a large store offers unceasing interest and novelty to its workers so we hear.

Peg, Mary, Eleanor Trimble and Rita are quietly pursuing the training of the future generation. Peg and Eleanor are fortunate enough to be able to live at home. Mary is in Connellsville and Rita in Charleroi.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Elsie's and Virginia's devotion to home is so great that they elect to remain there. Elsie's family bought a new home early in the spring. It has been suggested that 1920 should meet in Washington and have a house warning. This we must consider at our next meeting.

The state of Ohio seems to have claimed Prue. It's a fact that we have neither heard from, nor about our "Pierette" for lo these many years.

Betty Davidson is Department Manager in the Educator's Association. 1920 may yet find one of its members gaining distinction in educational lines.

We hear that Kitty McFarland went to State College for Pennsylvania Day. Knowing that one doesn't go on such a long trip just to see Tech play football we are curious to know who "he" is and what "he" looks like.

Now to the weddings; for 1920 has had a generous share. Kitty Caughey and Willard were quietly married and then announced the fact. We shan't soon forgive them for doing us out of two chances to enjoy some wedding cake. Kitty is the wife of the Rev. Richard Boyd Johnson and lives at McDonald. "Bill" is now Mrs. Leonard B. McCully of Wilkinsburg.

Gladys was married Sept. 1 to Ed of whom we have all heard so much. The ceremony held on the Kiski Campus, was a most beautiful one. To add to the completeness our "Bill" played the wedding march. The bride, who was never more lovely than on that day, started in the early evening on her honeymoon. She later settled down to married bliss in Harrisburg.

The first break in the class came last August when Margaret Catherine Loughrey Moore died after a lingering illness of many months.

Class of '22

The class of '22 can boast of having three brides before it has belonged to the Alumnae Association a year. Two weeks after graduation Mary Jane Dulany became the bride of Mr. Hugh Weaver and left immediately for Wilson, Okl., where they lived until recently. In August Beulah Boggess surprised us by becoming Mrs. Russell Coffindaffer. She is living in Richmond, Va. where her husband is attending medical school. The last bride, but not least, is Florence Newmaker. She was married to Mr. Byron Knapp in October and is living in Warren, Pa.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Virginia Coggins decided she hadn't had enough school, so she started to Tech last fall, but was finally persuaded to go to California to keep house for her brother.

Sarah Miller, Emma Held and Susan Scott also thought they needed a little more education along other lines, so they have labored all winter with a secretarial course at Tech.

Ina and Bon Connelly are two more of our industrious girls who are seeking after higher knowledge in other lines. Ina is attending the School of Business at Columbia University while Bon is taking a library course at Carnegie Library School.

Our class, like every class, has its share of instructors of the young. Helen Allison, "Mar" Brownlee, "Marge" Caskey, "Peg" Berryman, "Peg" Barnes, Anne Kiskaddon, Carolyn Titzell, Ruth Keck, Betty Foster, Leah Davis, "Hat" Hill, Anne Jay and myself have had enough patience to hold our positions until the end of this school year. It is rumored that Betty Foster is to leave our ranks to take up the more difficult position of keeping house. Of course, we are sorry to have her leave us but we are glad she will be doing something she likes because she says she doesn't like to teach school.

The rest of the class belongs to the Land of Nowhere as far as news is concerned.

Jane Taylor.

Associate Members

Thirty-two associate members answered their questionnaire. From these the editors gleaned some interesting bits of news.

Sorty Cukerbaum announced her marriage to Mr. J. L. Gordon.

Christina Belle West, the young daughter of Christina Walsh West was born July 7, 1922.

Mr. Cadmus Z. Gordon, husband of Kate Acheson Gordon died suddenly at their home in Brookville, Pa. on April 6, 1923.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Ethel Spencer has been studying at Oxford, England, the past winter and returns to her former position of instructor in English at Margaret Morrison Carnegie College next September.

Ethel Achison has been living abroad for more than two years.

Roberta I. Gilmore is teaching at the Ethel Walker School, Sinnsburg, Conn.

Marie Armstrong is planning an extensive tour through the United States. She expects to motor and camp when possible.

Editorial

Questionnaires were sent to the 484 graduate members of the Association and 191 were answered and returned. From this very incomplete survey a few statistics are enlightening. Responses came from eighty-eight married Alumnae and one hundred and twenty-eight children were reported. There were forty-two teachers replied, most of them from High Schools. Twenty-seven Alumnae claimed professions and employments of many varieties. There were thirty-four unmarried "idle rich", who probably are the busiest persons in the group. To sum up—the hoary contention that college girls do not marry can be safely interred so far as P. C. W. is concerned. And the fact that women can make their way in any walk in life seems to be established by the twenty-seven pioneers.

To publish this number of the Recorder without an Editorial on the Endowment campaign would be a rash sacrifice of a publicity opportunity.

Turn to the Honor Roll and notice the women holding worth while positions whom the College has trained. If there has been a doubt as to the value of such an institution, that record should kill it. Read the College Activities notes and consider carefully what is being done for the students. Then remember all this when the call comes next winter to aid the campaign. This community needs the small cultural college to leaven the materialism so rampant in its midst.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Questions and Answers

1. How can we best demonstrate our loyalty to our Alma Mater and our interest in all that makes life fuller, truer, and more worth living?

By contributing not the least but the greatest amount of time and money to the endowment campaign, and by serving cheerfully on committees.

2. If we have not the millions we desire to give, how can we obtain the wherewithal to grant our college the means whereby she may expand and develop?

We can hire movie houses in small towns and hold benefit performances. We can develop our own special talent (for each of us is supposed to have one) and use it to increase the resources of our Alma Mater. We can lead others to give and realize that if the Alumnae are not enthused, the general public will not contribute to the success of the campaign. Enthusiasm will avail much.

3. What will be the result of a successful campaign?

Renewed life and vigor for the P. C. W., broader field of contacts, and a knowledge that the "best is yet to be" for "our college on the hill."

Secretary's Report

Minutes for June, 1922

The regular annual meeting of the Alumnae Association of Pennsylvania College for Women was held at the Hotel Chatham on June 9, 1922.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved after which the treasurer's report was given and accepted.

Reports of the various committees followed:

Miss Renshaw of the Scholarship Committee stated that four students had been helped, one of whom was graduating, and that the scholarship girls were all splendid students.

The Social and Dinner Committee, Mrs. Canerdy, Chairman, reported that two social meetings had been held beside the dinner; one, a luncheon at the Chatham, attended by

ALUMNAE RECORDER

89 members and a meeting at the College Club in March. Mrs. Canerdy also stated that 177 plates had been reserved for the present dinner.

The report of the committee on P. C. W. Clubs was given by Miss Ellen McKee. The Cleveland Club has eight members. They hold regular meetings and have enjoyable times. The New York Club has had no regular meetings but seventeen of our Alumnae reside there at present.

Mrs. McLain read the report of the Lecture Committee sent by Miss Minor.

The Library Committee reported a fund started with the amount of $200 given by Mrs. Decker. This fund increased to $1270, would be turned over to the College.

Mrs. Spencer reported for the Committee on List for Endowment. She told of the success of the committee in securing names for subscription to Endowment Fund.

These reports were all accepted on motion.

A discussion concerning the raising of annual dues was brought up. A motion was finally made and carried that a committee be appointed to amend constitution so as to change the annual dues from one dollar to two dollars.

The question of pledge cards was also discussed.

Judge Miller of the Board of Trustees then addressed the Association for a short time. He spoke of the Endowment, which was to be raised by the end of next year. He was most convincing and earnest.

The President's address to the class of 1922 followed. Mrs. McGinnity welcomed the new class, then made a general address to the Alumnae, the key-note of which was the Endowment Fund. She presented in a most earnest manner the need of every new member contributing something to the college for endowment.

An opinion of the Alumnae was asked on the advisability of a committee being appointed to work among Alumnae during summer. The general consensus of opinion seemed to be that no definite pledging should be made now.

A motion was made and carried that all available funds be placed in an Alumnae Savings Fund on interest.

Miss Coolidge addressed the Alumnae Association. As always, she was splendid and inspiring.

Dean Root then addressed the meeting. She made several announcements regarding commencement, told of the adoption of a college ring for both students and Alumnae. Dean Root paid a glowing tribute to Dr. Acheson, retiring President of the College, as an excellent president and a Christian gentleman. She appealed to the Alumnae to preserve the College.

Report of the Helen E. Pelletreau Scholarship Committee

During the last year the Scholarship Fund has assisted five students, enabling them to obtain an education at the Pennsylvania College for Women. We have one senior graduating this June, two Juniors, and two Freshmen. These students are all a credit to the College, have done good work and some very excellent work, their teachers speak well of them and we feel that it is a great privilege to be able to give them the financial help they need. To the senior, who joins our Alumnae Association this June, we give a most hearty welcome, and to the two Juniors and two Freshmen we extend our best wishes, hoping they may be able to continue their college course and also come into the Alumnae Association as members in a few years.

Report of Social Committee for 1922-23

A luncheon at Kaufmann and Baer's was the first affair planned by the committee for this year. About seventy-five attended and Mr. A. C. Robinson of the Board of Trustees addressed the meeting.

On December seventh, a party and get-together meeting was held in Berry Hall at the College. It was very well attended. Games were played and a splendid musical program was arranged by Ethel Williams Keister.

The next social activity will be the Alumnae Dinner, which will be held at the Rittenhouse, June eighth, after the annual meeting.

Miss Coolidge, the President of our College, will be the speaker of the evening and Mrs. Charles Spencer from the Alumnae and Board of Trustees will make an address. We are also hoping to have Mr. George O. Tamblyn, head of the firm in charge of the Endowment Campaign, among the speakers.

Laila Clark Ament, Chairman.

Ethel William Keister

Anne Houston Dysart.

Alumnae Clubs

Cleveland Chapter

We are very sorry this year that the Cleveland Chapter, P. C. W. Alumnae Clubs, does not have a more extensive report, but must confess that we have not been a very active chapter.

We had only one meeting last fall and since then have not succeeded in getting the girls together with one grand and glorious exception. On Saturday, Feb. 24th, at 4 P. M. we gave a tea in honor of Miss Coolidge, who was here for N. E. A., and Miss Root who came up from Wooster for the same convention. Grace Wilson, '13, was here for the Bureau of Occupations Conference which convened at the same time. We were so happy to have her with us.

ALUMNAE RECORDER

Counting the Dilworth Hall girls and our guests we had thirteen and only those who have witnessed the struggle that Cleveland has had in trying to fan the embers of life into the Cleveland Chapter can know the thrill of that goodly number.

Few as we are here, some of those few are transients, so we cannot prophesy what will happen to the future chapter of P. C. W. Alumnae Clubs in Cleveland. But—we are hoping.

Sylvia D. Wayne, 13.

The Cora Helen Coolidge Club

The Cora Helen Coolidge Club has now an active membership of twenty-five. All members are graduates of the social service department of the College and many of them are now actively engaged in social service work. Our members are represented in the various branches of social work including, medical, industrial, department store personnel, Y. W. C. A. and recreational. The April meeting was a tea in honor of Miss Coolidge, given in the drawing room of the College. The Club was well represented and an interesting talk, "Vocational Work for Women" was given by Miss Coolidge.
